Congratulations JHU C/O 2007!

Congrats Seniors! You made it through the trials and tribulations of attending Hopkins. From being the new kids on the block to being the top dogs. Late nights in the D-level of the library. Cramming for a midterm. Staying up till 3am writing a paper. Creating concoctions or dissecting things in lab. Innumerable gallons of coffee. Tons of late night snacks. Late night trips in search for food. Four years of hard, seemingly endless, work, and now, here you are. YOU DID IT!

Congratulations on graduating and the best of luck in all of your endeavors!
Seniors

Crab Fest

Good Food, Good Friends, and Good Times. That's what the Senior Crab Fest is about. A chance for all of the Seniors and their peers to get together and enjoy some grub before they graduate and pursue different ventures. These students certainly weren't gonna let an opportunity for food pass by. College students after all are notorious for having the munchies. And tons of crab certainly isn't a bad way to satisfy those urges.

Player 32 slides into the base just before the ball touches him. The pitchers toss a curve ball to the opposing team in the hopes of a strike. The Hopkins Baseball Team works hard to stay on point during their games on the field. They do this by many practices during the week and even on the weekends, sometimes beginning early in the morning. This is a group of dedicated young men who are certainly passionate about playing ball.
What an amazing block! These b-ball players certainly play hard as shown through their amazing jump shots and excellent team work.

Acapella Groups

These ladies and gentlemen who sing in the acapella groups at Hopkins have a lot of heart. And it definitely shines through their music.
The variety of musical genres available for Hopkins students to sing with is astounding. Everything from beatboxing to gospel to modern music. These students are not only dedicated to their studies, but to expressing their emotions through song. These students take the extra time out of their studies to expand their vocal abilities and provide entertainment to not only Hopkins students, but to all those who attend their concerts.
Acapella groups are definitely a big part of campus life. Mostly because of the variety of groups in existence at Hopkins. There are co-ed as well as single sex acapella groups. There are groups that sing modern music, classical Indian songs, gospel music, and so much more. After long hours spent hard at work, singing in a group provides these Hopkins students exactly what they need— a relaxation method. Both the members of the groups and regular Hopkins students certainly enjoy hearing the vocal stylings of all the acapella groups found on campus.
Acapella concerts given by their peers are a favorite weekend activity to attend by Hopkins students. At concerts you can find not only fans of music, but fans of the singers themselves. Friends come out to support the singing students. Fun times are had by all.

These guys are really singing their hearts out. All for the love of making music.
Hopkins students come from a variety of backgrounds. A variety of multicultural groups available at Hopkins provide students the opportunity to further their cultural horizons. These groups provide forum in which students can come together to learn and actually put into practice something they have learned about a different (or sometimes their own) culture.

Hopkins students are not only intellectually curious, but culturally curious as well. In the same way that students come together in the classroom to learn about a particular subject, students come together in these groups to learn. The multicultural group experience at Hopkins is rather unique because these groups are not only open to those belonging to a particular culture, but to anyone who is interested in becoming more involved in this culture, or learning about it.
Students really enjoy seeing their peers in a completely different way. The multicultural groups present at Hopkins provide a medium through which students can experience a different culture. It almost resembles studying abroad- without the huge dent to your pocketbook.

Students belonging to these groups often are very enthusiastic. They want to show part of their culture to other Hopkins students.
Dance groups at Hopkins bring students together to enjoy the activity of dance.

Students not only learn about a particular type of dance, but they enjoy being in the company of their peers, and overall—just having a good time.

A variety of dance groups at Hopkins give students ample opportunities to be a part of a dance group. Hopkins students not only put forth a lot of work in their academics, but also in their extracurriculars. For this reason, Hopkins dancers are certain
Dance Groups

Some unique dance opportunities such as the Modern Dance group and Egyption Sun Dancing are all a part of the dancing opportunities available at Hopkins.

Hopkins dancers love to go on stage and show off all of the hard work they've put into their dance moves. Hopkins students also like to see their peers in a new light.
Dancers at Hopkins certainly have a flair about them that is unique.

While there are a variety of dance groups at Hopkins from different genres of dance, they all have one thing in common: love of dance.
Hopkins students work their hardest in order to perfect their techniques.
The Lady Birds are a dance troupe that attend athletic events in order to "pump up" the crowd. I guess you could say that they are like Hopkins version of cheerleaders. However, the Lady Birds have something that cheerleaders don't necessarily have—dancing abilities. These girls have many practices to make sure that they are on point for their performances.
These Lady Birds are talented not only as individuals, but as a team. They must work together and practice regularly in order to achieve the synchronization that they are known for in their dancing.
A variety of opportunities are available for students. Everything from dance, theatre, art, and music are available for students at Hopkins. Even within these genres of art, there are a wide variety of options available for anyone wishing to pursue the performing arts. Whether it's something you want to pursue as a hobby or as something more, you can find it at Hopkins.
Lights, Camera, Action!
Performing Arts at Hopkins

All of the dance groups at Hopkins provide students with unique opportunities to enjoy the art of dance.

Students come out in full force to see their peers in the performing arts.
Student Life
During move in time, many parents decide to stay for a few days before sending off their children into the wide world of collegiate study. There are a variety of sights in Baltimore that students and parents visit. The Baltimore Museum of Art is free to students and open to the public. To have a museum adjacent to the grounds of a college campus is certainly a treat for art lovers.
Upon arriving on campus, freshman are wide-eyed and not really sure where they are going or what they are supposed to do next. A variety of activities, both planned and recommended, are provided to the new freshman upon their arrival. One of the important rites of passage for a freshmen is the walk up to AMR I to receive their J-card and their room key. There is a lot of significance in a room key that most freshmen don't really realize at the moment. This key is not only their key to their room, but to the door of their future.

Students arrive on campus, unsure perhaps of where they are heading or where they are going in life. When they get that key, they know what they are doing. They are freshmen at Hopkins, they are going to attend classes, and hopefully get along with their roommate. This is the key that unlocks all of the options and possibilities at Hopkins. This is the key to their new home. A home that they will share with others while living on campus. This is the key to the start of an entirely different way of living. No longer are they just sheltered high schoolers- they are college students. Responsible young adults who must choose where they are going to go on in life. This is an incredibly exciting time in a person's life. The transition from a teenager to a young adult. Students are eager, excited, unsure, and not aware of where their life will take them. But they do know one thing, they are ready for anything.

Students arrive at Hopkins in planes, trains, and automobiles.
Once arriving on campus, students have a variety of activities that they can attend (like Playfair) that will help ease them into this shocking experience. Moving away from home to a strange place and living with strange people is definitely an adjustment to make. Most students adjust well after a few weeks of just trying to get into the groove of things.
Orientation is, literally, a time to orient the freshmen into this new atmosphere that they have thrown themselves into. Freshmen have the opportunity to start completely fresh when they arrive on campus. They don't very many, if any, of their peers, high school is in the past, and they have the opportunity of a lifetime. They can make the most of the situation they are in and succeed in life.

Orientation is but a glimpse into the lives of these freshmen who will become upperclassmen who will become graduates and become (hopefully) productive members of society who are actually making a difference in the world.

Welcome to the freshmen class- and the best of luck in everything. Just remember, work hard, never give up, and do the best that you can.

Playfair provides Hopkins students with the opportunity to come together with their new classmates to just have a good time. Games and other activities are played in the gym and provide an opportunity for the new freshmen to get to know each other in a comfortable setting.
This unique service opportunity brings together the freshman class for the first time to accomplish a specific goal. They want to make a difference.

Students worked from morning till early afternoon to make a difference.

Hopkins students performed a variety of services. From painting old buildings, to planting. Students help to beautify the community that they are going to spend the next four years in.
"Involved" is an opportunity for the freshman class to come together and make an impact on the Baltimore community. While these students may be exhausted after moving in all of their belongings, they still have enough energy to provide service to those that need it. These students spend an entire day at various volunteer sites.
These students step out on the runway. These students show up and give their fiercest walk. Students enjoy their brief moment in the spotlight.

President Brody attends the Top Model event which raises money for various charitable organizations. The Top Model event is a good time for students to walk out on the catwalk and use their confidence on the runway to bring in some money for those who really need it.
These students bring their confidence to the stage for a good cause. Not only the models enjoy themselves, but all those that attend the show. Friends come out to cheer on their fashion divas.

A variety of fashion styles are present on the runway. Everything from prep, funky, gothic, and classic looks. Young students at Hopkins not only worry about finals and papers - they've got some interest in their looks and the way in which they present themselves to others. By keeping up with the latest trends and styles, Hopkins students stay fashion forward.

The multicultural groups on campus practice for months in order to be ready for this big show.

Students come to watch these performers show a part of their culture.
Culture Show

Hopkins is renowned across the world for its academics. For this reason, many students from abroad attend Hopkins. This high number of international students certainly makes for a more varied student body. However, it is not only these international students that diversify Hopkins life. Students attending Hopkins come from a variety of backgrounds.

The Culture Show is an annual showcase of multicultural groups. The multicultural groups present at Hopkins are quite varied. The Culture Show provides a stage on which all of these groups can come together in front of their peers to show what they can do. The Culture Show also provides students with a unique opportunity to view some traditions of a variety of cultures that perhaps they might not have seen otherwise.
More Culture Show Performances
Capoeira, a Brazilian art form utilizing dance and the martial arts, is one of the more unique opportunities available at Hopkins. Don't worry- lots of practice goes into this performance and no one gets hurt. They do have some pretty awesome moves though.

Some less dramatic performances are showcased at the Culture Show. These performances bring a feeling of serenity and peace with them. Students definitely enjoy a nice break from all of the excitement during the Culture Show.

The variety at the Culture Show is definitely what draws students to attend. Not only are these performances that some Hopkins students aren't even aware of, they are performed by groups of talented and passionate students.
Every year, at the beginning of the month of December, the entire Homewood campus is brightly lit with lights to celebrate the holiday season. Students come out (even though it's freezing cold) to watch the campus light up.

Students then walk around the campus to take in the general splendor of seeing the campus in a different light than usual. Freshmen in particular are surprised by how just a few lights around campus can bring such a different atmosphere to the campus.
Good friends enjoying the snow that fell during the Lighting of the Quad. Free hot chocolate and donuts were served. Good friends, food, snow, beautiful lights around campus- what more could a student ask for?

Lighting of the Quad

Students come out to see the lighting of the quad. These students however are in for a surprise, because not only do they get to see the spectacle of the lighting of the quad, but they also get a show. Acapella groups come out to join in celebrating the holiday season with song.
Academics
Gilman Reconstruction

A construction worker provides some members of Hopkins an opportunity to come into the Gilman construction site, to check on the progress being made in the renovation of the building.

Hopkins students will have to wait a few years before their beloved hut is reopened. The Hut was a large room available in Gilman for students to study, hold meetings, or do group projects together anytime of the day, 24/7. The Hut provides a relaxed atmosphere for students to study in. For now though, Hopkins students will all go the MSE library which has graciously agreed to stay open 24/7 in order to facilitate those late night cramming sessions.
One of the major changes going on on-campus is the renovation of the Gilman building. This building's clock tower has become a symbol of Hopkins. It is a way in which freshman can orient themselves in the first few days of being on campus. Currently, Gilman is undergoing some much needed renovation. In a few years, Hopkins students will have a building that is better able to facilitate the growing number of needs of the students. We are all eager to see what is in store for this old building.
Students like to discuss class materials with their peers so they can exchange ideas about the subject and perhaps get some insight they didn't have before.

Teachers at Hopkins utilize modern technology to relate their material to their students.

Students certainly appreciate this use of modern technology. Notes made by the teacher are more readily available, and students are better able to focus on the actual words coming out of their professor's mouths as opposed to just trying to jot down all the facts.

All of a student's work is not only in class- but outside the classroom as well.
While all of the buildings at Hopkins have their characteristic brick and white marble appearance, what is actually going on in these buildings is much more varied. Everything from analyzing poetry by Shakespeare, understanding chiral molecules, differential equations, and the fall of the Roman Empire.

Students enjoy a variety of subjects at Hopkins which help to enrich their minds. Both scientific and mathematic courses and social science and humanities courses are needed to produce a well-rounded individual. Hopkins students are lucky enough to have both of these areas be especially strong at Hopkins.
Classroom Fun

Students make their way to classes all over the scenic Hopkins campus.
Students spend a good portion of their week in class. Whether it's listening to a professor give a lecture, participating in discussion sections, or going in the lab- class is a huge part of any students' life. Students diligently listen and take notes either using traditional pen and paper, or a popular trend is to bring your laptop to class. Many students can type faster than they can write, so bringing a laptop to class is really an advantage because they are then better able to concentrate and organize all of the information they receive in class.

Students know that their professors are experts on the subject they are learning about. So, they are listening intently so they can learn the most from their professors.
A student's walk to class is almost like a journey with several pit stops. Initially you walk out the door, head towards class. Usually, you run into a friend on the way to class- stop and chat. Stop by Levering or Cafe Q for a cup of coffee so you can be alert for class. Finally, you have reached your destination. During class, students engage with professors and TAs to improve their minds.

Everyday, hundreds of students cross the Quad on their way to class. At times, the Quad can seem like a road. There is certainly traffic during busy times such as mornings and lunch hour. Also, it is definitely a path leading to somewhere. The destination for these students is knowledge and growth. By attending classes and just being a part of college life- they experience tremendous growth that will determine what kind of people they become in the world.
Of course, while engaging with faculty is important. Sometimes, just sitting and listening is an important part of learning. Once students have information presented to them, they can go to either the library or to their room, to let the ideas they learned about in class stew. So they can come up with some analytical thoughts about the subject.
While students certainly spend lots of time in the classroom, much of their time is also spent either in the library, common areas, or in their own rooms studying. A favorite place to study is—of course—the library. Only at Hopkins is the library a social center where friends meet up. Cafe Q is a popular hangout for coffee and study snacks.
Teachers are more than willing to help their students. They are especially eager to have their students become highly engaged in the material. The passion that teachers have for a subject is definitely a source of inspiration for students.

Students are eager to learn from their peers and professors. For this reason, Hopkins students certainly hang on to every word that is said during both lectures and discussion sections.
FRESHMAN: As freshman first arriving onto the Hopkins campus, they are full excitement. They don't know what awaits them, but whatever it is, they are certainly ready for it. They meet challenges that they may have never faced before, but they have a bright spirit that helps them overcome anything that is thrown at them.

SOPHOMORES: As more experienced than the freshmen, now they better understand the path that will lead them to success at Hopkins. They are eager to learn and ever ready for the challenges that face them.

JUNIORS: Now upperclassmen, juniors have moved beyond their first arrival at Hopkins and are dedicated students actively involved in campus life.
The Journey
Freshman to Senior

Hopkins students arrive wide-eyed, unknowing, and eager to learn. Through their time at Hopkins, they grow as people. These students transform from young teenagers into young adults ready for the world. Hopkins prepares these students, not only through academia, but in other ways. Through clubs and organizations, students learn more about what interests them and how they can pursue it. Through campus life, students make connections with each other that will last a lifetime. Finally, through academia, students pursue their academic interests that will most likely determine the field they enter into upon graduation.

Students' time at Hopkins is full of learning about a variety of subjects, about life, and about themselves. This journey is filled with bumps and stops along the way. Challenging courses, late nights spent studying, and so many other memories made at Hopkins will stay with these students for a lifetime.

SENIORS: Seasoned veterans in the ways of Hopkins, these students are preparing to enter the world very soon. They are excited to begin their new journeys along whatever path it may be. The path of a senior culminates with Graduation.
Graduating Hopkins Students receive their diplomas from Hopkins officials. This young man is playing it cool on his graduation day. The man below shakes President Brody's hand while receiving his diploma. There is an obvious smile on his face. This has been the culmination of his years at Hopkins.
Commencement marks an important milestone for all graduating undergraduates. It marks the time where some will enter the work force, some will enter into further education and receive masters or doctorates in a certain field. But most importantly, it marks the end of four years of hard work. Four years of dedication. Four years of fun, friends that became more like family, and a time of personal growth. Commencement marks not only the end of four years of study at Hopkins, but four years where one transformed from a wide-eyed teenager into a young adult. Congratulations to the Graduating Class of 2007!

Oftentimes, we go through life too quickly and never stop to take a look around. Our lives, particularly those of college students, are always on the move. Attending classes, going to work, spending time with friends, and somehow at the end of the day, still finding time to study for midterms and write papers. The theme of this yearbook was "freeze frame". In this book, we tried to just put those hectic moments on pause. All of the running around on campus was just put on pause. By just pausing a moment or an event, we can further grasp what that event indicates. For example, sitting in class for students can seem like just another day. However, when you put that moment on pause, there is something much more important going on. Students are posing questions, analyzing, enriching their education, and becoming involved in the material.

We should all just stop—take a breath— and look around us. We might notice something that we didn't see before. The silver lining. These things that we don't notice, are perhaps the most important. We go through life so quickly that we may not appreciate the things in life that are good, and only look at the negative. Whether it's a good friend or family, we can find a new appreciation for these and other things in our lives. Hopefully, you will now find yourself stopping, even for a moment, to just look around, and see where you are. And perhaps, you too will find a new appreciation for those around you and the things in your life.
