PREFACE.

In addition to those, mentioned in the previous volume, to whom I am indebted for courteous and helpful co-operation in the preparation of the work as a whole, there are others, who have aided me especially in connection with this volume, to whom I wish to extend my thanks. My largest debt is to Mr. R. G. Marsden, well known as an expert upon all matters pertaining to the history of the High Court of Admiralty, who has given me generously of his time and learning and has placed at my disposal lists and notes without which certain sections, duly noted in the proper place in the text, could not have been rendered even approximately complete within the time available to me. To Mr. Henry Atton, librarian of the Custom House library, I am under obligation for courtesies extended to me at the Custom House and for other favors, while to the Board of Customs Commissioners I am indebted for permission to examine Custom House papers and to Lord Dysart for permission to inspect those of the Treasurer Solicitor. To Mr. Victor H. Paltsits I owe many thanks for the data here printed regarding the transcripts of Loyalist Papers in the New York Public Library; and to Mr. Robert W. Neeser, secretary of the Naval History Society, and Mr. Edward E. Curtis, instructor in Yale College, friends and former students, I am grateful for helpful notes on the Admiralty and War Office material respectively. I wish to thank Miss Davenport also for the initial report on the Cornwallis, Chatham, and Rodney papers, and Mr. J. W. Chapman, of the Public Record Office, for his answers to my many queries regarding the rearrangement of the Treasury Papers.

Charles M. Andrews.

ADMARALTY PAPERS.

INTRODUCTION.

The civil administration of the navy begins with King John, when there appears a "Keeper of the King's Ships", who controlled naval organization before the accession of the Tudors. In the reign of Henry VIII., a great revival of interest took place in the navy; Trinity House was incorporated, the Ordnance Office remodelled, and the great docks at Deptford and Woolwich were constructed. But the navy was still the personal property of the sovereign, and during the greater part of the period was managed by the old keeper under the title of "Clerk of the Ships", with such subordinates as were needed. Not until the end of Henry's reign was the navy placed under the charge of a separate department. Then the Navy Office was founded, and on April 24, 1546, certain officers were appointed known as the principal officers of the navy to administer the civil business under direction of the Lord High Admiral.

Thus by the middle of the sixteenth century the Admiralty had separated into three distinct parts: the Lord High Admiral, later the Admiralty Board, exercising executive and deliberative functions; the Navy Board, exercising civil and administrative functions; and the High Court of Admiralty, possessing judicial functions. In 1560, under Queen Elizabeth, a set of regulations was issued for the "Office of Admiralty and Marine Causes", providing for definite officers to manage the affairs of the Navy Office—the vice-admiral of the fleet, the master of ordnance, the surveyor of marine causes, the treasurer, comptroller, and surveyor general of the victualling, clerk of the ships, and clerk of the stores. This board met once a week, reporting monthly to the Lord High Admiral. No departmental records exist for this early period.

After 1596, unfortunate appointments led to a decline in the efficiency of the board. In 1618, the administration was entrusted to the Duke of Buckingham, who established a board of commissioners known as the Council of the Sea, which continued to sit either at Wallingford House or, after Buckingham's death in 1628, in the Council Chamber at Whitehall. The principal officers met in Mark Lane in 1628 and in 1630 in Mincing Lane. After Warwick's tenure as Lord High Admiral by authority of Parliament (1643) had come to an end in 1649, the Commonwealth established an admiralty committee of the Council of State, and a board of commissioners of the navy, upon which the brunt of the work fell, but these boards were combined after 1654 as Commissioners of the Admiralty and the Navy. During this period the navy was brought to a degree of excellence never attained before.

The beginnings of the modern admiralty system date from the years 1660-1673, when James, duke of York, was Lord High Admiral, and Samuel Pepys was clerk of the accounts of the Navy Board. James reconstituted the Navy Board, by commission under the great seal,1 establishing three principal officers—treasurer, comptroller, and surveyor—and three commissioners. A fourth commissioner was added in 1662. Pepys as clerk of the accounts recorded all orders, contracts, bills, warrants, and other business transacted by the principal officers and by the commissioners. He was at the head of the office work, attended the meetings of the board, and was of equal standing with the other members. His range of interest was very wide, from shipbuilding and the preservation of the forests to the discipline and actual management of the service. He was also a member of the corporation of Trinity House, and on October 27, 1665, became surveyor general of the victualling service. In 1673 the office of Lord High Admiral was put in commission and Pepys was appointed to the newly created post of secretary to the Admiralty Board. He was a member of Parliament, and his influence, as well as that of the Duke of York, continued to be exercised until 1679, when he was sent to the Tower and the Duke of York left England. A new commission was appointed which took the place of both the Admiralty and Navy boards, but it was composed of men without experience, and as a result the navy steadily deteriorated until in five years the ships in commission sank from 76 to 24. With the revival, in part, of the Navy Board in 1684 and a return to the system of 1673, conditions improved. Pepys was restored as secretary, and the Duke of York, coming back to England in 1684, exercised as king an informal control over naval affairs, particularly in matters of ship-building and patronage. Pepys finally retired in 1689.

The existence of two boards—Admiralty and Navy, one executive and military, the other civil and administrative, one nominally superior, the other with the prestige of age and seniority—inevitably led to a divided control and consequent antagonism. Though a few frigates were sent to Jamaica after 1660, the government proved incompetent to protect the island against pirates, when, in the eighties, the latter became a serious menace. Expeditions to America were badly managed. Those of 1676-1677 to Virginia, 1690-1691 to New York, and 1695 to Jamaica started months too late and accomplished little in consequence. Except for the period from 1684 to 1689, when Charles II. and James II. acted each in his prerogative capacity as Lord High Admiral, the office remained in commission until 1701, when the Earl of Pembroke became Lord High Admiral, followed by Prince George of Denmark, who held the office with a board of commissioners as his council. In 1708 Pembroke served again, but the next year the office again went into commission, and with the exception of the year 1827, when William, duke of Clarence, afterward William IV., was Lord High Admiral, has remained so ever since.

From 1689 to 1782, with the exceptions noted, the admiralty system consisted of an Admiralty Board with its secretary, a Navy Board with its four principal officers, and a series of lesser boards and offices, nearly all of which, as business increased, had been thrown off from the principal offices. The subordinate branches were: the Treasurer's Office, the Navy Pay Office, the Victualling Board, the Board of Transport Service, the Board for Sick and Wounded Seamen, the Prize Office, the Rendezvous Office, the Marine Pay Office, the Chest at Chatham, the Sixpenny Receiver's Office, the Board of Longitude, the Royal Naval Academy at Portsmouth, and Greenwich Hospital. As the comptroller and surveyor formed different departments, the system before the end of our period was made up of seventeen separate parts, 3 Tanner, Catalogue of the Pepysian Manuscripts, III. ix.

scattered about, as will be seen later, in Whitehall and the City. Nearly all of these offices have left records of their business, which show that the leading branches were organized as subdepartmental boards, with correspondence, minutes, registers, and accounts.

The directive branch of the Admiralty consisted of the Lord High Admiral, with commissioners under him, or later the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty with their secretary. The board met daily, and in times of urgency twice daily, and carried on the routine work of directing the business of the navy. It shaped the policy of the government, generally under the direction of the king, as expressed in orders in Council, or in instructions from the Secretary of State, controlled the movement of the ships, determined the times of sailing, and kept a watch upon the execution of its orders. It corresponded with the admirals, vice-admirals, captains, commanders, and lieutenants of the squadrons, and after 1762 kept elaborate digests of the contents of letters received from them. It made appointments and signed warrants, not only for the higher officers but for carpenters, gunners, pursers, boatswains and their deputies, and even cooks. It administered to naval officers the oath and the test, generally by deputations sent to Chatham or Portsmouth, granted protection from impress, and furnished passes required by the merchant vessels for trading in the Mediterranean. Regarding convoys, impress, transport, and supplies, it was in constant communication with the four principal branches of the administration—Navy Board, Victualling Board, Board for Sick and Wounded, and Transport Office—and it issued orders and instructions either directly or, as was frequently the case with the Victualling Board, indirectly through the Navy House. It kept in touch with other subordinate officers, rendezvous lieutenants, prize commissioners, and paymasters of marines, and watched over Chatham Chest and Greenwich Hospital. It received recommendations, reports, and representations from the subordinate boards, and in its turn drafted memorials and representations to the Privy Council and the Treasury. It requested the Bishop of London to name suitable persons as chaplains of the fleet, and authorized all issues of money for the upkeep of the navy and the payment of its members, civil and naval. Having control over vice-admiralty jurisdiction, it was in very close touch with the High Court of Admiralty, issuing commissions for vice-admiralty officials and taking cognizance of all difficulties that arose in the exercise of vice-admiralty jurisdiction. It issued warrants for letters of marque, controlled the holding of courts-martial, and had immediate supervision of the marines in all parts of the world.

The Admiralty and the Navy Board had a regular counsellor whose business it was to give advice in matters of law, and a solicitor who conducted prosecutions against "pirates, embezzlers of the queen's stores, and other offenders". In the early years one solicitor acted for all the principal offices, but later, as admiralty law business increased, the Navy and Victualling boards were allowed solicitors of their own. The Admiralty called for reports on cases from the judges and advocates of the High Court of Admiralty, and from the attorney general and solicitor general, chiefly concerning questions relating to vice-admiralty courts and jurisdiction, prize cases, droits of admiralty, letters of marque, and the like. It also corresponded with the

The functions of the Admiralty as officially defined may be found in the statutes, 2 William and Mary, sess. 2, c. 2 (1696), and George II., c. 33 (1749), and in the many commissions entered on the Patent Rolls. See also *Collection of Statutes relating to the Secretary of State, the Treasury, the Commissioners of the Customs, the Ordnance Board, the General Post Office, and the Secretary at War.

Though at first the Admiralty refused to have any direct communication with the Board of Trade and demanded that all business be done through the intermediation of the Privy Council, yet in time a less formal procedure was followed and the two boards became mutually co-operative. The Board of Trade sent to the Admiralty a great amount of information regarding illicit trade, fisheries, naval stores, convoys, privateers, pirates, and vice-admiralty courts, and aided the Admiralty in the enforcement of trade laws and embargoes. It called on the Admiralty to assist in all matters involving the welfare of trade and plantations, such as convoys for merchant vessels, the transportation of governors and other royal officials, the furnishing of frigates and small craft for the protection of the colonies, the carrying of packets and letters, and other similar matters. The Admiralty, in conjunction with the law officers of the crown or the High Court of Admiralty, prepared the clauses in the governors' instructions that concerned Admiralty jurisdiction, and transmitted them to the board for recommendation to the Privy Council. It corresponded directly with colonial governors, and the latter wrote letters to the Admiralty that are often quite as important as are those written to the board itself.

The Navy Board had direct charge of the management of the navy. It built, equipped, and repaired the ships, fitted them for sea and paid the bills;
it reported on their general condition, prepared estimates, hired extra boats, and had some control over the impressment of seamen; it looked after the building of docks and yards, took charge of prizes at the great stations, fitted up hospital ships, reported on the personnel of those employed in the land service, and had the care of lighters and tenders and their equipment. In the main the board was held accountable for the general condition of docks, yards, and ships, for the conduct and efficiency of all seamen and employees, who were not ranked as fighting men, and for all contracts connected with the building, repairing, or stocking the ships of the navy. On certain days the Navy Board attended the Admiralty and took part in its proceedings; at other times it submitted reports on questions referred to it, or sent in representations on its own account. It had no authority over the other subordinate boards; it could issue requests or express desires, but it could not order or require. To other departments, such as the Ordnance Office, with which it had dealings, it generally expressed its wishes through the Admiralty.

The Victualling Board consisted of five, and later seven, members and was appointed by commission under the great seal, after warrants had been issued by the Admiralty to the attorney general who prepared the bill. It was first instituted in 1683, victualling before that time having been done by contract.
The board took its orders only from the Admiralty, though such orders might actually be delivered through the Navy Board; and in turn it made all its reports and representations to the Admiralty only. The functions of the Victualling Board need no description here.

The Transport Board, or Commissioners for Transportation, was first established in 1688 and was abolished and reorganized several times afterward. No records of its activities exist for the colonial period, and exact knowledge of its functions can be obtained only from the records of other departments. The office had charge of the transport service to Holland, Spain, Portugal, Gibraltar, and to the colonies, or in general to any point to which soldiers, supplies, clothing, ammunition, and the like needed to be carried.
Introduction

The Board for Sick and Wounded Seamen, later known as the Medical Board, had its origin in the period of the Commonwealth, but was permanently established in 1740 to take care of sick and wounded seamen, superintend medical stores supplied by the apothecary general for the use of the navy, manage naval hospitals, ashore and afloat, examine and appoint naval surgeons, and maintain and exchange prisoners of war. The Sick and Wounded Board attended the Admiralty whenever requested, and like the Victualling Board and the Transport Board took its orders only from the higher authority.

The multiplication of boards and offices and the absence of any efficient and responsible central authority—for the Admiralty Board itself can hardly claim to have exercised a co-ordinating control over the unwieldy system of which it was in a sense the centre and head—must have had a disastrous effect upon the despatch of business. Procedure was clumsy and complicated and functions were badly defined and frequently overlapped. In the execution of any project so many authorities were involved that responsibility was dissipated and effective action rendered difficult. On one occasion when certain persons wished to be transported to Gibraltar and Minorca, the matter was brought to the attention of the lieutenant general of ordnance; he informed the Secretary of State, the secretary acquainted the Admiralty, the Admiralty sent its orders to the Navy Board, and the Navy Board wrote to the Victualling Board. Business was hampered not only by such roundabout methods but also by the difficulty of determining exactly the relations of one board to another, and of all to outside boards and officials. When in 1775 Generals Howe, Clinton, and Burgoyne were to proceed to North America, the king, probably through the Secretary of State, informed the Secretary at War, who made a representation to the Admiralty desiring that a vessel be provided. The Admiralty ordered the Navy Board to provide a vessel and to victual it; the Navy Board ordered its officers at Deptford to fit out a vessel and desired the Victualling Board to stock it. The Victualling Board ordered that notice be given to the proper officer to carry out the desires of the Navy Board.

The difficulties of administration were enhanced by the scattered location of the various offices.

In early times the Admiralty had no fixed place of abode, but met wherever most convenient, sometimes in the residence of the Lord High Admiral and sometimes at sea. Upon the appointment of the Duke of Buckingham in 1619 the Admiralty first settled at Wallingford House, on the site of Mrs. Kirke's lodgings, which adjoined Horse Guards Yard on the north. Here Buckingham lived during the remainder of his life and here after his death the board continued to meet till 1649. After the Restoration, when Wallingford House was resigned into the hands of the second duke, the board met in various places—from 1660 to 1674 in the Council Chamber and Robes Chamber of the old palace of Whitehall, except during the plague when it removed to Greenwich; from 1674 to 1684 in Derby House in Channel Row, Westminster; from 1684 to 1689 in Secretary Pepys's rooms in York Buildings; and from March until May, 1689, in Admiral Herbert’s lodgings in Channel Row. But finding these last quarters very inconvenient and “an unfit place” for carrying on business, the board moved again to York Buildings, but not to the house in which Pepys had lived, and later occupied part of a house built for Lord Jeffreys in 1685, at the south end of Duke Street facing St. James Park. A few years afterward when Wallingford House was acquired by the crown, the board returned to its earlier place of meeting and since that time, except for a period of six years, it has remained on the same site. In 1720 Wallingford House was pulled down and the older portion of the present Admiralty building was erected in 1725. During the period of construction the board had offices in a house in St. James Square belonging to the Marquis of Halifax, but in a few years it returned to its old location, and the building then occupied, greatly enlarged and improved since that time, has remained the home of the Admiralty to the present day.

The principal officers of the navy, constituting the Navy Board, were established on Tower Hill, east of the Tower, in Queen Elizabeth’s reign. As early as 1628 they removed into the City proper, renting a house in Mincing Lane for £30 a year. Here apparently they remained until, in 1654, the government purchased for £2400 the house of Sir John Wolstenholme, standing on the grounds of the old friary of the Crutched Friars, which in the preceding century had been employed as a storehouse for merchant goods by Sir William Winter, “surveyor of the queen’s ships” under Elizabeth. Here was established the Navy Office, consisting of one large structure and a group of smaller detached buildings, where the commissioners sat and the clerks had residence or kept their papers. Pepys had his apartments and office here from 1660 to 1669. On the morning of January 29, 1673, the Navy Office and other houses were destroyed by fire. For a month the board occupied quarters at Trinity House in Water Lane, but at the end of February it moved to the Prize Office in Mark Lane and remained there till the new building was finished in 1682 on a piece of ground near the old site purchased for £8500. The new quarters were suited to the business of the navy at that time, but as the years passed and the activities of the navy increased three adjacent houses were bought for £1150, and later two others were hired at a rent of £100 a year in order to extend the office quarters and to provide a place for depositing books and papers.

6 The first Trinity House in Water Lane was destroyed in the great fire. The second building on the same site, and the one referred to in the text, was destroyed in 1718. The third, also on the same site, was occupied by the corporation till 1793, when the present building on Tower Hill was erected.

7 Maitland’s plan of Tower Street Ward shows the location of Trinity House and of the Old Navy Office at the head of a court running west. In 1675 Pepys ordered the victualling contractors “to attend the lords at the navy office in Mark Lane.”

8 Maitland shows the location. There are many illustrations of the Navy Office in Wheatley, Pepys, I, 178-179, Maitland, London, etc. Robinson, The British Fleet, gives the location as in Broad Street, but wrongly. There was an entrance into Navy Office Yard from Tower Hill.
Introduction

In 1774 the Navy Board petitioned the Treasury, complaining of the ruinous state of the buildings, the great want of room, and the serious risks which the department ran from the dangers of fire. It laid stress upon the inconveniences that arose because of the scattered location of the subordinate offices, for the treasurer was in Leadenhall Street, the Navy Pay Office in old Broad Street, and the Sick and Wounded Board on Tower Hill, and it called the attention of the Admiralty to the distance which separated its office from Whitehall, and to the delays which ensued in the despatch of public business. It recommended the erection of a new building which should bring the subordinate offices under one roof and draw them all into closer touch with the Admiralty itself.

The request of the Navy Board simply voiced a general complaint—that for many years the administrative departments of the British government had been so badly located as seriously to hamper the execution of orders. In an age when transit was largely by water and communication was wholly by messenger, even the distance from Whitehall to the City meant prolonged delays and sometimes led to misunderstanding and confusion. Instead of asking for a new building, however, the Admiralty decided to make use of the new Somerset House begun in 1776 and finished in 1786. There the Navy Office was housed in the latter year, occupying the central and southeastern sides of the quadrangle.

To Somerset House was also removed the Treasurer's Office, which had been in Leadenhall Street, and the Navy Pay Office, which had previously been in old Broad Street, corner of Great Winchester Street, in an old and plain building, part of the Marquis of Winchester's mansion, known as Winchester Place, and rented for £275 a year. Near it had stood the Pay Office Coffee-house, a place of resort for all persons who had any concern or dealings in affairs relating to the navy. To Somerset House was also removed the office of the Board of Sick and Wounded Seamen, which at one time had been in Princes Court, off Coleman Street, behind Lothbury, and afterward in a building at the northeast corner of Tower Hill, at the corner of Postern Row. Should the Navy Office, to which the board had ready access by means of an entrance from Tower Hill, move farther to the west, it would be necessary for this board to remove also. On September 29, 1775, it informed the Admiralty that its office must follow that of the Navy Board, and consequently provision was made for it in the new quarters contiguous to the Navy Office and at a small distance from the Pay Office. No room, however, could be found for the residence of the commissioners and they were obliged to seek quarters elsewhere.

The Victualling Office was first established in 1683 at Deptford. Before 1689 the office was removed to a site northeast of the Tower, at the end of East Smithfield Street, about where the Mint is today. Thornton says: "This is a very large building situated on the upper part of Tower Hill, from whence it is separated by a wall and gates. It contains houses for the accommodation of certain officers, separate apartments for offices, store-rooms, slaughter-houses for oxen and hogs, a brew house, and a house for salting and barrelling provisions." The building stood near Coopers' Yard, Bakers' Yard, and Pound Yard, and the board utilized these industries as adjuncts to its business. Once when the cooper's workhouses were burned down and not rebuilt, the Victualling Board complained that it suffered a great impediment to its service. At the Victualling Office "all pursers of ships, and others entrusted with the public stores of provisions, or who contract for them ", passed their accounts.1

The lesser offices were scattered about in very haphazard fashion. The Transport Office, which was removed with the Navy Office to Somerset House, was in Black Raven Court, a court not far from the Navy Office, running east from Seething Lane. The Prize Office was in York Buildings early in the century but was afterward transferred to Mark Lane. At first no central Rendezvous Office existed, as the Admiralty had its agents or lieutenants in most of the outports engaged in recruiting men for sea-service, but after 1745 an office was established in London, though where it stood is not clear. The marine paymaster at first had no special office of his own. In the years before 1725, marine business was probably carried on at the house of the deputy paymaster in Charles Street, Westminster, at least while Arthur Swift was deputy to Walter Whitfield (1702-1711) and to his successor, Col. Sir Roger Mostyn (1711-1725). After the Admiralty was housed in its present building, the work of the marine service was done there by a special secretary, set apart for the purpose. With the appointment of Charles Hanbury Williams in 1739, a new office was set up (March-April, 1740) in Killigrew Court near Scotland Yard, and remained until 1751, when apparently it was removed to Deputy Paymaster Herbert's chambers in Gray's Inn. Eventually it got established permanently at the Admiralty. The muster-master general of marines also had his quarters at the War Office. The Sixpenny Receiver's Office was at first in Tower Street and after 1729 on Tower Hill. The dockyards were at Deptford and Woolwich,2 the three great stations were at Portsmouth, Southampton, and Chatham, the chest was at Chatham, the royal naval academy at Portsmouth, and the hospital at Greenwich. The admiralty solicitors had their offices in various places, Clement's Inn, Piccadilly, etc.

No departmental records of the Admiralty of date prior to the Restoration exist in official custody. Such records of earlier date as are extant will be found among the state papers or in private collections. The Admiralty as a regularly organized department dates only from the period of Charles II., and even for that time but few papers now remain. The greater part of the series herein described begins after 1689; only a few of the papers go back as far as 1665.

Before 1840 the Admiralty papers were located in four chief places of deposit: the Admiralty Office, Whitehall (original correspondence, letter-books, ships' logs, etc.), Somerset House (papers of the Accountant General's Department), the "Pavilion" and other buildings at the royal dockyard at Deptford (letter-books, despatches, surveys, warrants, muster-books, log-books, Navy Board papers, journals, pay-books, treasurers' accounts, victualling accounts, transport and medical books, etc.), and Greenwich Hospital (minutes, accounts, ledgers, registers, etc., but not the correspondence, which was at Whitehall).

The Lords of the Admiralty, wishing to demolish the "Pavilion" at Deptford, requested the Master of the Rolls to take its papers into his custody. In 1841 the first installment of volumes and chests of papers was removed and deposited in the northeast turret of the White Tower; other papers in very large quantities were removed in 1846 and 1847; and in 1848 the last boat loads, consisting of a great number of boxes of loose papers and nearly 9000 volumes, were towed up the Thames. The next year a beginning was made of transferring the papers from Whitehall to the Tower and the work was continued in 1850, until the Council Chamber and the Match Room were well filled. When in 1855 the War Office demanded these rooms for the use of the Ordnance Department, the papers were removed to certain houses in Chancery Lane, which were handed over by the Board of Works for this purpose. There the papers remained until removed in 1857, 1859, and 1860, in part to the newly finished Public Record Office and in part to the State Paper Branch Office. In 1859 the remaining records were taken from Somerset House; in 1856 and 1862 the contents of Carlton Ride and the State Paper Branch Office were transferred; and in 1867 a great mass of papers was brought from the Admiralty Office. With these transfers the main body of Admiralty Papers, containing material for American colonial history, was at last housed in the central repository.

of Carolina.

480. 1745-1763. Admirals Warren, Townsend, Savage, Mostyn, and Watson, Commodores Spry and Keppel.
Warren's letters (1745-1746) are from Louisburg and Boston, and elsewhere in Canada and New England. They relate to the expedition of 1745 against Canada, to dealings with Shirley, and to affairs in Nova Scotia. Keppel's letters (1754-1755) concern the war with the French and Indians, Braddock's expedition, and contain lists, states, and reports on officers, ships, appointments, etc. Mostyn's letters (1755) and Spry's letters (1755-1763) deal with the movements of the squadrons and contain lists, orders, and other enclosures, original and copies, such as letters to the admirals from Oswego, Halifax, Boston, New York, Hampton Roads, South Carolina, and elsewhere.

481. 1755-1760. Admirals Boscawen, Hardy, Holburne, Holmes, and Durell.
Boscawen's letters (1755-1758) are from Spithead, Portsmouth, Torbay, and Off Louisburg, and they contain news from points farther south, together with many enclosures, officers' and ships' lists, and the like. Holmes's letters (1756-1759) are from New York, Halifax, and Portsmouth, and contain many copies of letters from Gen. Loudoun. Holburne's letters (1757) are from Spithead, Cork, Kinsale, At Sea, Newfoundland, and Halifax, and concern land and naval movements against the French. Hardy's letters (1757-1759) are from New York, Halifax, Portsmouth, and Plymouth. Durell's letters (1758-1760) are from the same ports and deal with land and naval movements at Halifax and Louisburg.

482. 1759-1766. Admirals Saunders and Colville.
Saunders's letters (1759-1760) are from Off Lizard and from Hal-fax, and give elaborate information regarding the Canadian campaign. Colville's letters (1759-1766) are from Off English Coast, Halifax, and Quebec, and are of especial interest in that they cover the results of the order in Council of June 1, 1763, entrusting the admirals with power to seize ships for illicit trading. They also give accounts in considerable detail of the Stamp Act disorders.
483. 1767-1772. Commodores Hood and Gambier.

Hood’s letters (1767-1770) are from Halifax and are chiefly concerned with naval matters. A few are from Boston (Oct.-Nov., 1768) and narrate events there; others (1769) concern the attack on Capt. Reid at Newport. In the British Museum, Add. MSS. 35183, are letters from Adm. Hood to Lord Bridport (1772-1783). Gambier’s letters (1770-1772) deal chiefly with events taking place at Boston.

484. 1771-1777. Admirals Montague and Shuldharn.

Montague’s letters (1771-1776) are from Boston and its neighborhood, and the most important among them concern illicit trade in Rhode Island and the burning of the Gaspee. Shuldharn’s letters (1775-1776) are from Boston, New York, and Philadelphia, and are so detailed as to become journals of events. They are interspersed with copies of colonial papers, letters of intelligence, and reports on naval and other matters in Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, and elsewhere. Near the end is “A Journal of a Cruise in the brig Andrew Doria, Nicholas Biddle, commander, from the port of Philadelphia. Begun, January 4, 1776”; interesting as the first log extant of an American privateer in the war against England. This journal is printed in Neeser, The Despatches of Molyneux Shuldharn, Publications of the Naval History Society, III. 275-305.

485. 1774-1777. Admiral Graves.

Graves’s letters are from Boston, About Cape Cod, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, New York, and deal with the weak state of the squadron, the prevalence of smuggling, the proceedings in vice-admiralty courts, the early activities of the Americans, and the growing spirit of rebellion. Adm. Graves was very assiduous in collecting information, and this volume contains not only full details of events but also great numbers of newspapers of the period, such as, the Massachusetts Spy and Gazette, the Boston Gazette and Country Journal, the New England Chronicle or Essex Gazette, many printed broadsides, and copies of local documents. Note Washington’s letter (L. S.), Dec. 5, 1775, seized in the brig Washington.

486. 1775-1784. Admirals Byron and Arbuthnot, and Commodore Parker.

Byron’s letters (two groups, 1775, 1778) are chiefly from northern American waters. One letter encloses a report from Maj. Tupper on the “battle of Charlestown Heights” (see below p. 41). The letters of 1778 describe the movements of the squadron and the operation of the naval hospital in Rhode Island. Parker’s letters (1775-1777) are from Cape Fear River, New York, Rhode Island, and Charleston; some of them will be found in the first group of the Byron letters. Arbuthnot’s letters (1778-1784) are from Halifax, New York, Jamaica, Savannah, Charleston, and Virginia. They narrate events connected with the activities of D’Estaing in the West Indies, with the movement of the fleets leading to the capture of Charleston, and with the engagement of the British with the French fleet off the capes of Virginia, Mar. 16, 1781. The enclosures include a drawing of a part of East New Jersey, showing Lord Howe's line, a copy of the articles of capitulation of Charleston, tales of sea fights, lists of captures and recaptures, copies of letters from Rodney and Gen. Clinton to Arbuthnot, etc.

487. 1776-1777. Admiral Howe. Howe's letters are from Halifax, Staten Island, Rhode Island, and Elk River. They give important information regarding the events of May-July, 1776, and contain many enclosures, such as, newspapers, broadsides, copies of Commodore Parker's narration of proceedings at Charleston, a copy of a journal by the same, July 13-Aug. 18, 1776, copies of letters from inferior officers, and extracts of letters and orders from Graves, Shuldham, and others, lists of ships, descriptions of ships, accounts of captures, etc.

488. 1777-1779. Admiral Howe. The letters in this second group of Howe's correspondence are from the Delaware, Philadelphia, New York, Rhode Island, Sandy Hook, and London. The enclosures consist of lists and tables, intercepted letters, and letters and reports from inferior officers, tales of operations, account of rebel armed vessels, lists, and intelligences.

489. 1778-1783. Admirals Gambier, Ogle, and Graves. Gambier's letters (1778-1784) are from New York, New Jersey, Cape Cod, Philadelphia, Savannah, and give important details of the naval aspects of the war. Ogle's letters (1780) number but four in all. Graves's letters (1779-1781) are from Sandy Hook, and deal with the Yorktown campaign. Among the enclosures are copies of letters from Cornwallis. The general contents are essentially the same as in the preceding volumes.

As showing the kind of information that one will occasionally meet with in the captains' letters the following may be quoted. "On my passage from Rhode Island to New York the 6th at half past two, Rhode Island then bearing about N b E distant 14 or 15 leagues, I fell in with a rebel squadron, consisting of one ship of thirty guns, another of twenty eight, two brigs, one of sixteen, the other fourteen guns, and a sloop of twelve, and all full of men, and continued engaging them broadside and broadside an hour and a half, when my masts, sails, and rigging being very much shatterd and an attempt made to board us, I bore away for Rhode Island, and continued a close running fight until half past six when they left us." From Capt. Tyringham Howe of the Glasgow, 1776, regarding his encounter with Esek Hopkins's fleet, 1903, § 22.

There are no separate collections of letters from lieutenants or other inferior officers of date earlier than 1791.

3545-3652. 1673-1738. Letters from the Navy Board.

This collection of 108 volumes, the continuation of which will be found in Adm., Navy Board, Out-Letters, 2178-2210, are of comparatively slight importance for colonial history, as they concern a period when the navy had but little to do with the colonies. A few items from selected volumes will show the nature of the material. Many of the volumes contain no colonial references whatever.

3545. 1673-1674. A few documents relating to the West Indies.
3547. 1676-1677. Information regarding ships for Virginia and the transportation of troops for the suppression of Bacon's Rebellion. Sir John Berry was authorized to impress ships, boats, and men if he should need to do so. Cf. Tanner, Catalogue of the Pepysian Manuscripts, III. §§ 3439, 3455, 3468.
3548. 1677-1678. Convoy for Virginia; the return of 400 troops from Virginia, Mar. 4, 1678; naval stores from New England.

3562. 1690-1691. The ship Archangel to go to New York; furnishing clothes for the Deptford ketch by William Byrd of Virginia, 1690; report on Edward Randolph's petition, with details of Randolph's negotiations with Sheafe, accompanied by the original petition, by the order of the Privy Council thereon (Acts Privy Council, Colonial, vol. II., § 380), and by Randolph's statement of account.

3661-3662. 1694-1708. Letters from the Prize Office.

Letters from the prize commissioners that occasionally refer to the condemnation of prizes in America, particularly in the West Indies (Jamaica). In 3662, ff. 174, 176, 257, there are references to seizure of the ship St. Paul of Rochelle, taken in the West Indies and condemned and sold in the Maryland court of vice-admiralty. On f. 191 is a letter to Cullen Campbell, agent for prizes, sent to Newfoundland (1705).
Admiralty Papers

3663. 1743-1745. Letters from the Rendezvous Office.

From the lieutenants appointed by the Admiralty to raise men for the navy. Such men were raised either by voluntary enlistment or by impress. The officers, with their headquarters at the outports, travelled along the coast beating up recruits. They also rounded up enlisted men and deserters and saw that both were in good health and physically sound. Their pay was five shillings a day and expenses, and ten shillings was paid for every good seaman procured by the impress gang, a sum divided among the members of the gang. The service was of considerable concern to colonial merchant ships as the following extract will show: “Yesterday I presed three seamen from out the William and Sarah, Jno Glegg, master, from So Carolina for London, and put them on board his Maj. ship Exeter, Capt Cornwallis.” Dec. 9, 1744.

3665-3681. 1680-1783. Letters relating to the Solicitor’s Department.

Report of George Oxenden, dean of arches, who also served as judge of the High Court, on the dispute between Penn and Quary about the admiralty and common-law jurisdiction (ff. 56-58, 212). Cf. House of Lords Manuscripts, new series, IV. 331, 341.

Draft of the commission to vice-admirals in the West Indies, Dr. George Bramston’s report (f. 183). 1703.

Bramston to vice-admirals in the plantations, stating that they have no power to try prizes under commission from the Lord High Admiral, “for he hath none in that patent which constitutes him Lord Admiral of England. The power proceeds from commision particularly granted for that purpose under the great seal of England to His Royal Highness. The vice-admirals must have a warrant under that great seal.” Nov. 27, 1702.

3667. 1704-1711. Letter from Bramston. Nov. 30, 1705. Says that he has inquired what was done with prizes in the last war in the western plantations and has learned that all prizes taken in the West Indies were brought into admiralty courts here, except what were embezzled, that is, never condemned; and that commanders frequently bought up their company’s shares or gave them nothing. “I do not find any attempt during that whole war made by any judge or officer of vice-admiralty in the western plantations to adjudge or condemn any ship or merchandize seized or taken by the men of war or privateers there, and I am humbly of the opinion that if any authority be granted for the condemning of prizes taken abroad there will be but a small account given thereof.” He advises strongly against the granting of authority to condemn abroad (f. 38).

Bramston further advises that instructions be sent to governors and others in the plantations not to meddle with prizes (f. 39); says that the governor of Maryland had no power to condemn prizes to Her Majesty, and that if he had had power he should have condemned to the Lord Admiral, captors having no commission (f. 40). Oct. 30, 1705.
Warrant to Quary to recover all concealed prizes in America (f. 84). 1707.

Appeal admitted in case of a vessel carried to Jamaica and there condemned as a prize (f. 106). Mar. 10, 1707.

Regarding the erection of a vice-admiralty court in Newfoundland (f. 129). 1708.

Right of appointment of officers in colonial vice-admiralty courts belongs to the Lord High Admiral (f. 155). 1709.

Dr. Marriott, advocate general, appointed extraordinary commissioner for proceedings in admiralty on the American rebellion. July 11, 1776.

Letter from America, with remarks about the course of the war. June 9, 1777.

This series of volumes is of great importance for an understanding of the working of the vice-admiralty jurisdiction in America and of the conflict between the common-law courts and the admiralty courts in the colonies. The documents throw light also on the system of appeals from colonial vice-admiralty courts. In addition to the main subjects treated, there are others of a minor character that find elucidation here—Mediterranean passes, piracy, penalties, prizes, and the like. Many illustrations of life on shipboard are given, which present in detail naval practices and experiences in the eighteenth century. In the main, the series is composed of reports from the solicitors and judges of the High Court of Admiralty to the Admiralty on complaints, memorials, and other documents submitted to them. The supplemental papers are often interesting and informing.

3729. 1704-1706. Letters from the Transport Department.

This single volume of letters from the Transport Office relates almost entirely to other countries than America. It contains one extract of a private letter from Arnold Brown, agent of prizes at Jamaica, concerning an embezzlement in 1704. Sent from the Transport Office, Feb. 23, 1705.
3814-3816. 1697-1756. Letters from the Board of Trade.

3814 is labelled “Letters from the Board of Trade, 30 Oct. 1697–6 Dec. 1706”, and on the title-page has this entry: “This is the first book wherein the Letters from the Board of Trade are kept entire, July 17, 1731.” A few earlier letters are preserved in vols. 4080-4085, “Letters from the Secretary of State”, a series which as a rule contains in-letters of a more general official character.

3815, 1707-1723, covers the period from Feb. 20, 1707, to Apr. 1, 1723; and 3816, from May, 1723, to 1756. The volumes have tables of contents of enclosures, but these tables do not always represent the actual contents of the volumes, as many of the extracts and enclosures seem to be missing.

It is doubtful if there is anything here that is not to be found in the Board of Trade series, though the presence of original papers among the enclosures, relating to trade, fisheries, naval stores, convoys, privateers, pirates, protection of woods, and especially colonial vice-admiralty courts and cases, renders the matter uncertain.

3817-3820. 1728-1790. Letters from the Governors of Plantations.

This series contains original letters from the colonial governors and others to the Lords of the Admiralty, beginning Aug. 5, 1728.

Council minutes of New Hampshire, Apr. 26, 1734, with many letters and depositions covering Dunbar’s case.

A. Popple of Bermuda, with enclosures. May 10, 1739; Nov. 10, 1740.

Wentworth. Jan. 13, 1773 (state of the king’s woods).
Burt of Leeward Islands. June 20, 1778; May 3, Nov. 8, 1779; Mar. 14, 1780 (admiralty case).
Bull. May 1, 1781.

A few documents of the years 1783-1790 have been placed in 3820. In 3821-3823 are various documents relating to the West Indies and Canada of dates ranging from 1791 to 1839.

A series of letters (accompanied frequently by enclosures) of some value for the history of colonial trade. Among the most important of these enclosures are the registers of Mediterranean passes, recording the names of vessels bound for colonial ports, with the dates of passes and when endorsed. Were these registers in any sense complete, they would be of great interest, but they are so few and so infrequent that the information which they furnish is meagre. Such registers as exist are chiefly from consuls in Italian, Spanish, and Portuguese ports—Venice, Zante, Cagliari, Alicante, Lisbon, Oporto. The largest number of registers is from Lisbon, but the list is imperfect. The original registers were kept in the consular offices in the ports named and may still be in existence. The information furnished is as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>No.</th>
<th>Nature of ship</th>
<th>Name</th>
<th>Of what place</th>
<th>Tons burden</th>
<th>Guns</th>
<th>Master's name</th>
<th>No. of men</th>
<th>Where bound</th>
<th>What built</th>
<th>Dates of pass</th>
<th>When endorsed</th>
</tr>
</thead>

Some of the lists have a column for "Lading", and others have similar variations. In many of the bundles are original passes returned, endorsed by the consuls of the various ports. Thirteen may be found in 3837, though many others are mentioned.

The correspondence is from all parts of the world, and in the letters are allusions and statements showing the state of the trade and the working of the pass system. James Shaftoe, consul at Cagliari, wrote: "The island [of St. Peters] is more and more become the rendezvous of illicit traders under English colors, who refuse to produce their passes or own my consular authority at all." There are also occasional references to pirates, slave-traders, French trade with the West Indies; and there are letters of intelligence which deal with political and military matters, and, during the Seven Years' War, with naval movements. In 3825 are a few entries of ships going to America as early as 1723. In 3829 is a letter from Joseph Gledhill from Placentia, Oct. 31, 1745. In 3837 is a letter of Aug. 23, 1777, from Alicante with information about an American-built schooner flying French colors but believed to be furnished with credentials from Congress to cruise against British ships; others from Alicante, Nov. 26, 1776, and Lisbon, May 3, 1776, referring to American privateers; and one which mentions a vessel from Philadelphia at Leghorn, Apr. 10, 1767. The Alicante letter of Nov. 26 says that a French vessel arrived on the 25th, reporting that it had met off the Rock of Lisbon a North American armed vessel, which forcibly seized eleven sailors, part of the crews belonging to two English vessels which it had taken on Nov. 12 about twenty-five leagues west of the Rock. The privateer was a sloop called the Union, belonging to Cape Ann, of ten carriage-guns, eight swivels, and forty men commanded by Isaac Soams.

3863-3867. 1694-1799. Letters from the Custom House.

Only three of the bundles contain material relating to America.

3863. 1604-1703. Memorial of Sir Thomas Lawrence, secretary of Maryland, on trade and navigation there and in the neighboring colonies. June 15, 1695.

Memorial from the merchants trading to Virginia regarding Lawrence's statement, and a comment on both memorials by the Commissioners of the Customs.

Regarding the officials sent over by the Commissioners of the Customs to administer the navigation acts after 1696. Feb. 11, 1697.

Letter from the Commissioners of the Customs to the secretary of the Admiralty Board, asking for a vessel to convey Edward Randolph from plantation to plantation, in the discharge of his duties as surveyor general. Oct. 3, 1697.

3865. 1720-1756. Letter from the Commissioners of the Customs to the secretary of the Admiralty Board, concerning the deputy judge of the vice-admiralty court in Rhode Island, being a Frenchman born. Order of the board thereon. Sept. 22, 1721.
Id. concerning a pirate ship, with an enclosure stating that the captain who rescued from the pirates the commander of a small sloop trading in fish between Newfoundland and Spain, was master of a New England-built ship of about 150 tons. Jan. 16, 1725.

Id. concerning the cases of the ships Mary Ann and Esther, brought by Robinson, collector of customs at Salem and Marblehead, in the Massachusetts court of admiralty. Mar. 16, 1727.

Draft instruction from the Admiralty to captains of men-of-war ordered to guard the English coasts against smugglers and other illegal traders. 1741.

Papers relating to a ship from Barbadoes bound for Cork and Bristol, and seized in Ireland for carrying “rum and other contraband goods.” Oct. 14, 1745.

3886. 1757-1780. Contains a certain amount of information about passes, convoys, smuggling, and other matters in which the Custom House and the Admiralty co-operated. Many of the references are to vessels engaged in the colonial trade or from the colonies. There is a list of officers of the navy to whom deputations had been granted by the Customs Commissioners. Three extracts, June 20, 1771, Aug. 15, 1771, May 4, 1774, concern the Board of Commissioners at Boston. One letter, with comments by the British Customs Commissioners, is from the custom officials at Falmouth, Oct. 5, 1771. Other papers concern vessels taken by the Americans, and contain important instructions regarding transport ships.

3878-3887. 1740-1782. Letters from Doctors’ Commons.

Letters with enclosures from various officers of the High Court of Admiralty in England, judge, advocates, proctors, marshal, deputy marshal, register, deputy register, etc. The corresponding out-letters are in Adm. 2: 1045-1061, q. v., as supplementing the following lists.

3878. 1740-1744. Letter from Andrew Belcher regarding the desire of Robert Auchmuty, judge of vice-admiralty, to remove him and to appoint his own son in his place. Oct. 21, 1742.

Representation (an original) from Nathaniel Byfield, regarding his office as judge and the extorting of fees. Feb. 2, 1731.

Another letter from Auchmuty about his career and the various vice-admiralty offices which he had held for twenty years. n. d.

Two letters from Lockman. May 18, 20, 1743.

1 From the collector and comptroller, Boston, to the Customs Board at home. “But as the military alone will not fully answer the purpose of stopping the great evil, we therefore most humbly conceive it highly necessary that a cutter of superior force to ours be ordered to cruise as much as possible on our coast, with Capt. Wharfe and who might occasionally assist him (whose vessel is a prime sailor) with three or four hands in order to chase any large suspected smuggling cutter in view, that when he comes up with her he may be able to take her, as otherwise she may prove too strong for him and set him at defiance (they being generally manned by a set of desperate outlawed villains) which has several times been the case, and that for want of more hands, which renders many of his attempts vain and fruitless.”

Copy of a letter of marque.
Ja: Grame (list of ships). Charleston, June 23, 1744.
Benjamin King, reporting that his commission as judge had lain on the Deptford eight months before being delivered. Antigua, June 13, 1744.
Lockman (list of prizes). Rhode Island, Sept. 17, 1744.

In a list of prizes proceeded against in the High Court of Admiralty, 1739-1743, are entries of one prize taken into the port of Charleston and two to Jamaica. In a similar list, to be found in the next bundle, there are no such entries.

Jonathan Blenham (long account of the proceedings in the vice-admiralty court of Barbadoes), May 7, 1745; also Mar. 24, 1744, regarding the same.
Ja: Grame (list). May 17, 1745.
Lockman (list). May 28, 1745.

3880. 1746. Similar lists from Grame and Lockman.
Proceedings in the vice-admiralty court in Jamaica, 1740. Sent, 1745-1746. For the accompanying letter, Aug. 12, 1746, see next bundle.

The remaining papers in this bundle are chiefly from the proctors and marshals of the High Court of Admiralty or their deputies.

Letters from Keen, Newfoundland, and Huske, N. H.
Robert Auchmuty regarding trade under cover of flags of truce between Rhode Island and the French. June 8, 1747. An important letter.
Benjamin King, St. Christopher, Dec. 4, 1746, regarding the capture of the island of St. Bartholomew by English ships, with enclosures. A second letter speaks of St. Bartholomew as an island which has been a great nuisance to trade, because there numbers of British vessels bound to the West Indies have been made prizes by the enemy, thus causing scarcity and famine as well as loss. The island lay "directly in the jaws of all our trade to Europe and North America as well as the American trade to us, most vessels from thence choosing to fall in between St. Bartholomew and Barbuda where most constantly taken"," Mar. 29, 1747. King's letters are from Antigua, except one from St. Christopher, and all are interesting. The remainder are as follows: Nov. 12, 17, 1745 (endorsed); May 20, 1746 (on trade with St. Eustatius, with a valuable list of prizes).

Blenham. Barbadoes, July 10, 1746.
Robert Auchmuty. Nov. 29, [1746?].
Ja: Grane (list). Oct., 1746.
James Morse. Jamaica, Aug. 12, 1746.
John Burke. Jamaica, Aug. 10, 1746.

3882. 1748-1757. Letter from the custom house, Boston, complaining of Andrew Belcher as "never giving his attendance or appearing at court notwithstanding I have had several cases there tried of consequence on the acts of trade relating to the plantations; the fees of his office chiefly arise from the seizures we make which to him are a trifle so I suppose he thinks it not worth his attendance, being allowed no sterling salary from your board " . The writer, [Charles] H[enry] Frankland, the collector, recommends William Sheaffe. In a postscript Frankland adds, "Mr. Belcher was dismissed by their lordships a few years ago but reinstated by a petition of a few merchants here. Such petitions, I assure you, are very easy to be obtain'd, as the merchants here are generally smugglers ", Feb. 5, 1749. The Admiralty in commenting on this letter wishes "To see when Mr. Belcher was dismissed and when restored and why ". Answer, "Sir, Appointed 13 July, 1743, and does not appear to have been dismissed ". This statement regarding his appointment is confirmed by Adm. 2: 1054, 138. Belcher took the place of Samuel Auchmuty.

Letter from Belcher, Aug. 13, 1750, contains a memorial of Boston merchants, written in his behalf and dated Aug. 10, 1750. This original document is signed by 53 men, well known in the mercantile annals of Boston. Among the signatures are those of William Bowdoin, James Bowdoin, Andrew Oliver, Ezekiel Cheever, Edmund Quincy, John Osborne, Thomas Hancock, Benjamin Faneuil, Nicholas Boylston, Thomas Hutchinson, Thomas Lechmere, Joseph Green, John Boylston, W. Read, and Benjamin Hallowell.

Letters from St. John's, Annapolis Royal, Jamaica, Halifax, Barbadoes, etc., relating to admiralty business. One is from William Smith, jr., New York, Apr. 8, 1757, and concerns the French snow Bon Rencontre, laden with sugar and indigo and bound for New York.

3884. 1768-1777. Important set of papers regarding the court of vice-admiralty at Halifax; drafts, with alterations in red ink, and other papers. 1768.
Regarding the conviction of David Ferguson for murder on board the merchant ship Betsey near Cape Charles off the coast of Virginia.

Statement of the case of William Story, deputy register of the court of vice-admiralty, Massachusetts. Speaks of a "mob that broke into his office and dwelling house, Aug. 26, 1765, destroyed the greater part of his household furniture, greatly damaged the house, rifled, burnt, and destroyed many of the court records and files and most of his own private papers". An allowance of £50 was made him by the General Court. The petition is dated Jan., 1772, and mentions Story's wish to return to Boston, his native country.

John Andrews, judge of the vice-admiralty, Rhode Island, regarding admiralty proceedings there and a dispute between the admiralty court and the superior court of the colony. Apr. 20, 1773. The chief justices of the latter issued a writ of prohibition.

Correspondence with judges of the vice-admiralty courts of Charleston, St. John's, Barbadoes and other West India islands, New York, Boston (Robert Auchmuty, from which we learn that Auchmuty was an Irishman), Virginia (list of seizures); also memorial and other papers from Richard Starke. Mar. 12, 1771.

Many papers regarding American vessels seized and condemned. Various questions put to the king's advocate and king's proctor on a great variety of subjects, particularly with reference to seizures and sales.

Papers regarding the powers of Antigua to fit out vessels against the Americans, with the opinions of the king's advocate and king's proctor thereon.

Copy of a warrant authorizing West India governors to seize American ships.

Dr. Marriott regarding a new set of interrogatories for American seizures. Old set is not sufficient.

A list of all captures which have been condemned in the vice-admiralty court of Dominica since the breaking out of the rebellion. Wilson, judge of vice-admiralty there, in sending this list, writes, Dec. 19, 1777, "I take the liberty to mention to you a circumstance which struck me as a remarkable instance of their impudence and folly, that on board each of the two [American] vessels, which have been condemned since I presided in that court, there have been found certificates that bond had been given that no subject of the King of Great Britain had any interest in either ship or cargo."

Alexander Stewart, judge of the vice-admiralty court of Dominica, in a letter dated Apr. 10, 1777, speaks of "the almost daily depredations which were made with impunity by a number of rebel or piratical vessels, which infest these seas, on the properties of the inhabitants of this and the other neighboring islands to the great interruption also of the trade between the islands". A valuable letter.
A. Symson, judge of the vice-admiralty courts, Grenada. Oct. 20, 1777.

Instructions for “commanders of private ships or vessels employed in trade or retained in His Majesty’s service, who shall pursuant to 17 George III., c. 7, take out commissions for the seizing and taking all ships and vessels belonging to the inhabitants of the colonies now in rebellion, in order that said instructions may remain on record in the High Court of Admiralty”. Apr. 2, 1777.

3885. 1778-1779. Lists of captures and condemnations of colonial vessels in various West India islands, sent in pursuance of instructions from the Admiralty in 1777: These lists and accompanying papers are from Barbados, Antigua (longest list of captures), Grenada, Jamaica, Tortola, the Bahamas, and St. Vincent. Also from New York, East Florida, Halifax, and Georgia (memorial of James Edward Powell).

Papers regarding the ship May or George, which sailed from Charleston, S. C., with a cargo of rice and indigo for Bordeaux in France. The crew seized the ship and took it into Lamlash in Arran (Firth of Clyde), Apr. 13, 1777. Question of the admiralty jurisdiction of the courts of the two countries, Scotland and England.

Set of standing interrogatories to be administered to persons found on board French prizes. Dec. 3, 1778.

Dr. Marriott’s report on the petition of Patrick Byrne, who in 1777 went as a trader to South Carolina (two petitions giving details of experiences in Philadelphia and New York).

Case of the ship Molly condemned in the vice-admiralty court of New York. 1779.

3930-3969. 1697-1785. Letters of Intelligence. 1st Series.
3970-3974. 1738-1800. Id. 2d Series.

These letters of intelligence are usually written in French, chiefly from the Continent—Dunkirk, Paris, Rochelle, Marseilles, Rochefort, Toulon, Brussels, Brest, Rotterdam, Madrid, St. Ildefonso, Genoa, and other places. A few are from Ireland, Bristol, Southampton, Topsham, Alderney, and other places in the United Kingdom. Some are from Lloyds, by whom all letters of intelligence received were forwarded to the Admiralty.

The information contained in the earlier volumes is only indirectly of service to the student of American history, though much of it has diplomatic interest and is of importance to any one dealing with Anglo-French commercial rivalry in the eighteenth century, particularly in the West Indies. The letters frequently furnish intelligence of the movements of French ships and of various phases of the trade and commerce of France and other European countries. Occasionally the letters are accompanied by lists, such as, “État de Force de Mer et de Terre de l’expédition”, or “État des Vaisseaux en armament à Brest”, etc.

Bundle 3963 and the bundles that follow in the first series are of more importance because they deal with events leading up to the alliance between France and the colonies and treat of French activities in America as seen

1 In the Leeward Islands there were six courts of vice-admiralty, one in each of the islands of Antigua, St. Christopher, Montserrat, Nevis, Tortola, and Anguilla, each of which courts had a distinct and separate jurisdiction. 1779.
through French eyes. "Nous commençons à croire un peu à la guerre", wrote one correspondent, Dec. 18, 1776. An intelligence of Nov. 21, 1781, speaking of the battle of Yorktown says, "Il ne reste plus dans le sud de l'Amérique que Charles-Town et Savannah, qui tomberont d'eux mêmes après quoi toutes les forces réunies, de France et des Américains, tomberont sur New York."

Nearly all the papers in these bundles are of date 1795-1807. In some of the lists dates as early as 1751 are entered, but there are no papers or letters dated earlier than 1793.

3978. 1801-1806, contains a number of letters sent to Baltimore and Washington by Rear-Admiral Willaumez, commander of the French fleet. One is addressed to His Excellency Gen. Thurreau, ambassador from the Emperor of the French to the President of the United States of America.

3979, 1793-1809, contains a series of letters and papers relative to Cuba, the Floridas, and Mexico.

3980, 1794-1803, contains a few letters in French, unsigned, from Philadelphia and New York. 1795. Others are from "Les membres du Comité des colons de St. Domingue réfugiés à Philadelphie chargés de l'organisation de la fête du 21e Janvier (v. s.) aux Citoyens composans la municipalité de Paris." Many papers.

3981. 1797-1798. Spanish despatches from Havana concerning commercial, naval, and administrative affairs.

3988-3991. 1691-1700. Letters relating to Ireland.

These papers chiefly concern the movements of the British army in Ireland. They contain, however, occasional references to ships going to America or to the arrival of American ships at Kinsale or Cork. Also a few references to Mediterranean passes. Many of the letters contain enclosures.

3999-4013. 1703-1783. Letters from the Ordnance Office.

Bound volumes of letters from the Ordnance Office generally in reply to instructions or recommendations from the Admiralty. They concern guns and ordnance for the navy, equipment of store-ships and convoys for the same, shipment of ordnance to the naval stations, and supplies of small arms, locks, powder, mortars, bombs, waist belts, slings, cartouch boxes, and leather accoutrements for marines. Many letters relate to the sending of ordnance stores to the colonies, notably the West Indies, and to places under attack, such as Louisburg.

4071. 1694-1704. Letters from the Post-Office.

From the General Post-Office to the Admiralty regarding the postal and packet service, notably regarding the installation of new packet boats in 1703 between Falmouth and Lisbon, by contract with Edmund Dummer. Dummer's sloop Prince carried mail from Falmouth to the West Indies May 22, 1703. Cf. Hist. MSS. Commission, 15 Rept., Portland Manuscripts, VIII.

4080-4151. 1689-1785. Letters from the Secretaries of State.

The volumes of this series vary greatly in importance. Some (4092, 4096, 4100, 4103, etc.) contain practically nothing relating to the colonies; others (4086, 4087, 4088, 4080, 4091, 4093, 4094, 4095) but few papers, of which only an occasional one is of value. On the other hand some of the earlier volumes are worth examining. The first six volumes (4080-4085) contain letters from the Secretary at War, William Blathwayt, and, during his absence in Holland with the king, Apr.-Sept., 1697, from George Clarke, who acted as his deputy. For such letters after 1697 see 4316-4330. The same volumes contain also a few letters from the Board of Trade, continued after 1697 in 3314-3316. The letters are all arranged chronologically, so that a search covering a known period is comparatively easy.

The subjects dealt with are: convoys; naval stores (4080, 903, 1015, 1131, 1135, 4089, 14); victualling and transports (4081, 1003, 1015, 1027, 1039, 1067, 1069); troops, New York (4081, 217, 281, 4082, 59); trade, pirates, passes, Lutherans and Palatines (4083, 18, 119, 137-138, 199, 4104, 29); and scattering letters and petitions from governors and others in the colonies: Quary, 1703 (4089, 15, 52), Dudley (4090, 26), Gale, South Carolina, 1718 (4101, 53), Drysdale, Virginia, 1722 (4104, 24), Andros, 1708 (4091, 260). 4081, 1694, contains many original letters from John Povey, secretary of the Lords of Trade, to the Admiralty. 4085 has "The Humble Proposal of Richard Long", asking for the loan of a ship for the purpose of discovering gold and wrecks in America, May, 1697; an extract of a letter from William Randolph, justice of the peace, Maidstone, Kent, to Edward Randolph, London, June 29, 1697, regarding the French design upon New England, an extract that was sent by the Secretary of State to the Admiralty (p. 641); and (p. 1103) instructions to commanders employed by Gov. Nicholson of Maryland for preventing frauds on that coast, in pursuance of the order in Council of Aug. 9, 1694. Cf. Acts Privy Council, Colonial, II. 272-273.

Later volumes seem equally important. 4121, 1756-1757, contains many orders and instructions from the secretary to the Admiralty dealing with many phases of the war in America.

The secretary instructs the Admiralty to give directions to the Victualling Board to agree with Kilby and Baker, contractors, to supply 1500 barrels of beef, etc., for the troops in North America. May 3, 1756.

To provide a man-of-war to carry Lord Loudoun to North America.

To give positive orders to the commanders-in-chief of the king's ships to co-operate with Lord Loudoun and to prevent the pernicious trade carried on between the English and French subjects. May 5.

To provide vessels for transporting 4000 stand of arms to North America. May 15.

To order the transports bound to America to proceed to New York. May 31.

Encloses a copy of a letter from Thomas, governor of the Leeward Islands, giving an account of the capture of the man-of-war Warwick. Antigua, June 8.

States that directions will be sent to His Majesty's governors in North America and the West Indies concerning the reception and treatment of French prisoners. June 16.

Instructs the Admiralty to acquaint Messrs. Van Neck that the Acadian neutrals have proper care taken of them. June 16.

To cause 80 German planters at Portsmouth to be embarked on board the ships going to Nova Scotia; and to release as many of the Protestant prisoners at Bristol as may be willing to enlist with Col. Prévost. Sept. 15.
Admiralty Papers

To send the transports with the troops from Cork for North America to New York instead of to Nova Scotia. Oct. 2.
To permit the ship Seafower to proceed from Dublin to Barbadoes and the Leeward Islands with provisions for His Majesty's fleet there. Jan. 4, 1757.
To direct the proper officers to land in America with the troops such part of their sea bedding as shall be required.
To despatch, by a sloop to New York, an enclosed packet to the Earl of Loudoun and His Majesty's governors in North America.
To cause the store-ships, taken up to carry a number of engineers, etc., to North America, to be supplied with a sufficient quantity of provisions. Jan. 6.
To cause 12 ships of the line, with a proper number of frigates, to be got ready for immediate service, and to proceed under the command of Rear-Adm. Holbourne to Cork, and from thence to North America. Jan. 7.
Encloses a letter to be forwarded to Gen. Lawrence by the sloop going to Halifax. Jan. 12.
Instructs the Admiralty to grant the usual powers to Thomas Pownall, appointed governor of Massachusetts. Feb. 21.
To order the transports going to North America to be furnished with 1200 lines, hooks, etc.
To provide transports for carrying two Highland battalions to North America and to provide a convoy for them.

This list of the contents of a single volume so far as American affairs are concerned will give an idea of what may be found in other volumes. The letters are often short and perfunctory, though some are elaborate and informing. The enclosures are generally copies of papers in the Secretary of State's Office, though some are originals. The instructions noted above are signed by H. Fox (May 1–Nov. 12, 1756), Holderness (May 27, 1756–Jan. 5, 1757), W. Pitt (Dec. 9, 1756–Mar. 26, 1757). After Dec. 26 Pitt signs nearly all the despatches.

These papers are of considerable importance though how far duplicating the corresponding out-letters among the Treasury papers it is difficult to say. See Treas. 27.

   Regarding Scammell and Ruggles, surveyors of white pines in America, expenses. Oct. 29, 1772; July 6, 1773; Apr. 12, 1774.
   Pay of troops in Boston. May 2, 1774.
   Paper on the prevention of illicit trade on the Mississippi, followed by a large number of papers on trade, smuggling, military and naval matters, ammunition, etc.

4288. 1778-1782. Many papers relating to movements of American privateers (e. g., the Ranger), troops, prizes, convoys, the transporting of money and provisions, surveyors of white pines and their pay, intelligence about Paul Jones, Mar. 7, Sept. 25, 1779, and the like. Most of the papers are departmental, but they supplement other and more important papers and are useful and necessary for a study of the system of administration. The volume closes with Dec. 19, 1782.

4316-4330. 1697-1794. Letters from the War Office.
   These letters are from the Secretary at War or the deputy secretary.
   Haydn's list of the secretaries (Book of Dignities, p. 233) needs correcting in some particulars. George Clarke was never Secretary at War, but only a deputy acting in Blathwayt's absence. On Blathwayt's return Clarke retired and became second secretary to the Admiralty in 1702, Blathwayt continuing as Secretary at War until 1704. He was followed by St. John, 1704-1709, Walpole, 1709-1710, Granville, 1710-1712, Wyndham, 1712, Gwyn, 1713, Pulteney, 1714-1717, Craggs, 1717-May, 1718, Pringle, May-Dec., 1718, Treby, Dec., 1718-July, 1722, Pelham, Aug., 1724-June, 1730, Yonge, 1735-1746, Fox, June, 1746-Nov., 1755. There is no indication in this correspondence of ¹ There is a Register of protection from being pressed. Adm. 7: 313-373.

Wandesford, Trevor, or Winnington, as given in Haydn. From 1722 to 1740 the office seems to have been conducted largely by the deputy secretary, Richard Arnold, who retired in 1741, with Edward Lloyd as assistant, 1740.

The letters relate to the convoy of transports with forces for the West Indies, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, and other places in America, and to the Continent—Flanders, Holland, Gibraltar, Minorca, Dunkirk; to the despatching of arms and accoutrements to various places in Great Britain and elsewhere; to the conveyance of passengers, or commissioned officers, surgeons, chaplains, and others going to their regimental posts with servants and equipage;¹ to the shipment of money, medicines, clothing, etc. The information is valuable for dates and for the movements of the various companies that went to America before 1746. There are references here to the companies in New York, South Carolina, Jamaica, an establishment list of the regiment of foot commanded by Ogilthorpe, and a list of officers of the six independent companies "now gone to Jamaica", Mar., 1739. There is also a reference to George Gould, appointed surveyor general of North Carolina and collector of customs at Bath Town, Feb. 29, 1740.

The later volumes contain but little that has any direct bearing upon colonial history, yet they are important as showing the part that the Admiralty played in the affairs of the army. In 4321 is a request from the Secretary at War to the secretary to the Admiralty that he move the Lords Commissioners for an order to a captain of a man-of-war going to South Carolina to receive John Hall, surgeon's mate to the three independent companies in that province, with his baggage on board, as he is repairing to his duty. In 4324 and the following volumes there are many orders regarding prisoners of war. A letter of Aug. 2, 1758, mentions certain provincials, released from French prisons, trying to work their way back to America.

One paper only, a memorial from George Walker, agent for Barbadoes, regarding the cultivation of the mango tree and the breadfruit tree in the West Indies. Speaks of the former "now growing on the lands of your memorialist" in Barbadoes, and of the latter as better than plantain. He says that when the Ceded Islands were occupied (after 1763), it was provided that part of the land should always be wooded to prevent the denudation that had injured the other islands, and that cultivation of the breadfruit tree would be a benefit to Barbadoes in that respect. June 28, 1772.

5114-5118. 1686-1790. Miscellaneous Letters, Reports, etc.

A very miscellaneous collection. A number of registers of passes, with entries of plantation vessels and many copies of passes. One of the latter, a fine example that had seen many years service, 1768-1777, gives the movements of a New England vessel, as follows: sailed from Falmouth (Portland), arrived Genoa, July 12, 1770, and remained till the 20th; was again at Genoa, May 14, 1773, June 5, 1774, Feb. 9, 1775; at Carthage, Mar. 6, 1775, ¹ Col. Phillips went to his command in America by way of Boston in a merchant ship and was taken from there, with his servants and equipage, to Annapolis Royal in a British man-of-war some time after July, 1719. He was again in London in 1725, raising recruits, and wrote the Admiralty regarding them to this effect: "In case they arrive safe at Boston they must there be disembarked and another hired to proceed with them, during which time a great part of them may desert, that country being ever remarkable for encouraging such practices." He wanted a small ship of war to go direct to Annapolis. 4318, letters of July 7, 1719, Feb. 10, 1725.

Secretary's Department returned to Genoa the same year, and again in May, 1776; was at Carthagena again, June 21, sailing July 12, 1776; again at Genoa, Aug. 21, 1776, and June, 1777 (5116). In the same bundle is an abstract of His Majesty's ships in commission, mentioning those that were in the West Indies, in the harbors of North America, and on Lake Ontario.

In 5117 are Rodney papers, 1771; general account of the fishery at Newfoundland, 1774; scheme of the English fishery, Newfoundland, 1774, from Commodore Shuldam; career of William Pullen, 1777; commissions of marque, standing interrogatories, printed instructions, with blank forms, licenses to carry coals and oats for use of troops in North America; papers regarding American prisoners (pp. 217-231, 1778); extract of intelligence regarding D'Estaing's fleet, Oct.-Dec., 1778; papers regarding piracy in Grenada, interesting for questions of jurisdiction and trial, 1772-1775.

These volumes contain the original orders in Council sent to the Admiralty, beginning July 25, 1673. This collection, the contents of which are not necessarily duplicated in the Privy Council Register, is in very convenient form to use in searching for the policy of the King in Council on all matters which came under the cognizance of the Lords of the Admiralty. Each order is signed and sealed by the secretary of the Council. To each order is attached a copy of the paper—petition, memorial, report, or representation—upon which it is based, and some of these attached papers are not to be found elsewhere, particularly for the earlier period. The volumes after 1776 contain practically nothing of value for colonial history. In 5138 (pp. 516, 520, 528, 540, 544, 566, 570, 574, 594, 598, 1275) are documents relating to the expedition under Sir John Berry sent to suppress Bacon's Rebellion in Virginia; and in 5138 and 5139 are documents relating to Slaughton's departure for New York. Copies of earlier orders in Council can be found in 5246.

5253-5323. 1680-1783. Reports of Courts-Martial.

These volumes contain the minutes of proceedings of courts-martial held on board ships of His Majesty's navy, some of which were lying at the time in colonial waters. Where the inquiry concerned losses incurred during wars in America, the evidence is often very valuable. This is particularly true of courts-martial held during the Revolutionary War, but it is also true of the earlier period. Answers, depositions, letters, etc., often at great length, may be found (i.e., 5309-5319), which contain information in detail of important sea fights. The court-martial for the loss of the Serapis is in 5315. See p. 46, below.

OUT-LETTERS.

1-115. 1665-1679, 1689-1783. Orders and Instructions from the Lords of the Admiralty.

All the entry books of out-letters are bulky volumes that show signs of frequent use. The contents are listed by years, not by names or places. Though the first volume is not indexed or paged, later volumes are indexed alphabetically by names, and the documents are arranged chronologically. Some of the indexes have subject entries, such as "Convoys and Cruisers", "No. America", "Foreign Voyages", including the colonies, "Passengers", "Prisoners", " etc. The orders and instructions are issued to admirals and other naval officials, to the Navy Board, Victualling Board, and other departments, to the officials of the High Court, and to sundry officials in the colonies. Many of the volumes are unimportant for colonial history, but others are full of matter showing the Admiralty’s share in colonial business. For example, 48 contains the usual orders to councillors in the royal colonies to administer the oaths and test; the same to the proprietaries to be administered in their respective colonies “to such persons, whose commissions, warrants, or letters of mart shall be sent unto you”. Also to captains of His Majesty’s ships employed in the plantations to attend on this colony or that, New York, South Carolina, or New England, for the service of the government there, to carry boxes directed to the governors, to follow their orders, to avoid impressing men there, and to send accounts of their proceedings to the Admiralty. The captain of the Rose was to aid and assist the inhabitants of South Carolina against the Indians; the captain of the Roebuck to proceed to Tobago with such persons as shall be sent to cut timber for building a college, and to carry them with the same to Barbadoes; others were to prevent foreigners, Spaniards, and others from fishing on the banks of Newfoundland, to take out royal officials, to convoy home such ships as wished to come, to bring despatches from the governors, to meet the expenses of sick seamen put ashore at Boston, or to carry out money. Capt. St. Lo of the Valeur was ordered to return home from Maryland as the province required no attendance. In 78 Spry was “to proceed directly with several packets to New York and to return with the trade”. In general this series and those that follow contain the record of the share which the Admiralty took in the administering of England’s policy toward the colonies. They are therefore of importance to every student of colonial history.

169-259. 1689-1783. Letters from the Lords of the Admiralty to the Secretary of State and to other Departments.

After 1694 the letters to the secretary were separately entered. See 363-374 of the out-letters. The above volumes, constituting the Lords’ letter-books, contain entries of all letters written to the Navy Board, the Ordnance Office, and other departments, to the Privy Council, Board of Trade, Trinity House, to governors of stations in England, mayors of port towns, commissioners, officials, and law officers. In the periods when the navy was active in North American and West Indian waters all these volumes are worthy of attention. If dates are known and names of captains and admirals have been ascertained, information can be easily acquired, or if a given naval movement is involved, the details can be readily discovered.

377-501. 1689-1746. Secretary’s Letters in General.
502-581. 1746-1783. Secretary’s Letters to Public Offices and Admirals.

In general, the secretary’s letters are more informing than are those signed by the board. They are more informal, though relating to the lesser business of the board which was turned over to the secretary to deal with. They were written under orders from the board and contain the board’s wishes and instructions, but they have a more personal flavor and, because sent frequently in answer to letters received, contain details and expressions of opinion not found in the more formal correspondence. They are addressed to boards and to individuals, to the Navy Board and Ordnance Board, to governors of colonies about forwarding packets, and to naval officers regarding their duties. According to his own statement the secretary was a hard-worked official, burdened with long hours of service and a heavy correspondence.

1045-1061. 1689-1783. Letters relating to Admiralty and Vice-Admiralty Courts.

These letters are addressed to the Board of Trade and the Navy Board, and to the judge, king's or queen's advocate general, king's or queen's proctor or procurator general, register, deputy register, and marshal of the High Court of Admiralty, to the council for the Admiralty, solicitor of the Admiralty, receiver general of the rights and perquisites of the Admiralty, receiver and deputy receiver of the High Court of Appeals for Prizes, and sometimes to the crown lawyers, the attorney general and solicitor general.

These books contain copies of the warrants for vice-admiralty commissions, but not the commissions themselves. They contain copies of warrants for letters of marque, and for appointments of various officers of vice-admiralty courts in England and the colonies. They contain instructions and orders of various kinds, touching wrecks, embargoes, convoys, and fees (see below). The volumes are generally indexed and paged.

In the case of a vice-admiralty commission the procedure was as follows. The petition or request was sent to the Commissioners of the Admiralty, who instructed the judge of the High Court of Admiralty to cause letters patent to be issued out of the High Court in the king's name to the person desiring the office (see Acts Privy Council, Colonial, vol. III., § 207). The commissions themselves were made out by the solicitor of the Admiralty. Warrants for inferior officers, judges, advocates, marshals, and registers, either authorizing or confirming their appointments, were issued in the same way at the request of the governor or vice-admiral of a colony. The letters patent were not issued out of Chancery and so copies will not be found on the Patent Rolls. The originals should be among the records of the colony or among the papers of the appointee. The formal enrollment was in the muniment books of the register of the High Court, and copies were entered in the entry books of the Admiralty and sometimes in the entry books of the Lords of Trade or Board of Trade. Copies ought to be found also among the privy seal warrants. The vice-admiralty commission did not bear the great seal. As the warrants are entered also in Admiralty Court, Miscellanea, 752-783, it should be possible to make out a complete list of vice-admiralty officials in the colonies. A list of commissions is printed in the Report of the American Historical Association for 1911 and the Massachusetts commissions are printed in full (with translations when in Latin) in volume II. of the Publications of the Colonial Society of Massachusetts.

Though there appears to have been a vice-admiralty court in Jamaica as early as 1658 and we hear of one frequently after 1660, and though in Barbadoes mention is made of such a court as early as 1662, the earliest commissions here entered are: New York, from the Duke of York, Andros, 1678, Dongan, 1682, from the king, Fletcher, 1692, including East and West New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Newcastle, Cornbury, 1701, Lovelace, 1708; Dominion of New England, Dudley, 1685, Andros, 1686; Massachusetts, Phips, 1691; New Hampshire, Allen, 1692; Maryland, Copley, 1691; Virginia, Andros, 1692; South Carolina, from the proprietors, Trott, 1716, from the king, Nicholson, 1720; North Carolina, Burrington, 1730.
From these and later commissions certain conclusions may be reached regarding the erection of vice-admiralty courts and the appointment of vice-admiralty officials in the colonies. Until 1696 a separate commission was, or might have been, issued to each governor possessing vice-admiralty powers and all inferior officers were appointed by the Admiralty at home; in 1696 the Privy Council, on representation from the Board of Trade, agreed that in case of the death of a governor vice-admiralty powers might devolve upon his successor in the office; after 1697, when the general system of vice-admiralty courts in the colonies was projected and in part set up, the royal governors were empowered to appoint inferior officers in case of a vacancy, the Admiralty retaining the right to confirm or disallow; after 1702, royal governors were authorized "to erect court or courts admiral for the determining of all marine and other causes and matters proper therein to be heard, with all necessary powers, authority and fees" (1047, 53-54, 101-102, 104; 1049, 7, 59). According to their commissions as vice-admirals, the governors had also power to appoint all the officers of the vice-admiralty courts in the colonies, saving the right of the judge and register of the High Court of Admiralty in England. The procedure above described continued until 1764 and 1768 when important changes were effected (1057, 267, 397, 403, 409, and see below). Vice-admiralty officials received their letters patent after they had taken oath and subscribed to the test.

The volumes are fairly well indexed, and entries appear under the name of the colony and the name of the individual. The following statements show the character of individual entries.

1054. 1741-1747. Leonard Lockman, judge of the vice-admiralty court, Rhode Island, regarding his being obstructed in the exercise of his office.

Privateers in America breaking the marine treaty.
Letters to judges of vice-admiralty courts in America. One to Samuel Auchmuty of New England, then in London.
Cases of murder, whether to be tried in the court in the colonies or in the Admiralty Court in England.
Lists of letters of marque, together with full instructions and additional instructions to private men-of-war, and instructions arising out of letters of marque.
Embargoes laid and taken off.
General orders from the judge of the High Court to all vice-admirals abroad and to vice-admirals and judges in America.
Letters sent directly to vice-admiralty officials in America, as to Shirley, owning "the receipt of several of his letters in relation to the preservation of the white pine trees and of irregularities in the vice-admiralty courts", and desiring him "to continue his correspondence"; to the judge of the vice-admiralty court in Barbadoes, instructing him to send copies of all proceedings in prize cases to the judge of the High Court of Admiralty at Doctors' Commons to remain a record.

Letters to admirals, captains, etc., of the fleet regarding admiralty matters. For example, to Capt. Collins, Dover, Downs, Aug. 15, 1745. "Herewith you will receive six packets, viz., for the vice-admirals of New York, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Massachusetts Bay, South Carolina, and Rhode Island, which, being of consequence, I am commanded by my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to signify their direction to you to deliver the said packets to the senior captains of the convoy bound with the transports from Gibraltar to Louisburgh to convey them as opportunity offers to the persons they are directed to, on his arrival at Louisburgh."

Entries regarding the transportation of felons to America. Andrew Reid was contractor at this time (1740-1744). Some of the masters of his ships were charged with murder and other felonies on the high seas, and the instructions were that such masters (if evidence were sufficient) be tried at the court of Oyer and Terminer, which the judge of the High Court would hold for the purpose. Cf. Penrice's letter, Mar. 31, 1744, Adm. i: 3878.

1057. 1762-1770. Warrants and other documents relating to the vice-admiralty court for all America, vice-admiral, the Earl of Northumberland (p. 213), judge, William Spry (p. 183), surrogate, Joseph Gerrish, one of the council of Nova Scotia, to act as Spry's deputy while the latter was governor of Barbadoes (p. 427), register, Spencer Perceval (p. 194), marshal, Charles Howard (p. 191). There was no advocate. See also pp. 183, 335, 402-409, and for the revocation, p. 427, and Adm. Court, Miscellanea, 943.

Appointment of Samuel Fitch as advocate general of Massachusetts and New England in the place of Jonathan Sewall, resigned. Nov., 1769.

Egerton Leigh of South Carolina and Peyton Randolph of Virginia, each of whom held at the same time the offices of judge of admiralty and attorney general, were ordered to resign one of the offices.

Regulations governing the four courts erected in 1768, instead of the single court of 1764 (pp. 409-414).

1. Halifax, to have original jurisdiction in all cases within the limits of Quebec, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia. Jonathan Sewall was to be judge and Alexander Chorley register.

Probably each court was designed to have its full complement of officials, but those named above are all that I can find recorded. The judge, judge advocate, deputy judge advocate, register, and marshal of these courts were all appointed by the Admiralty.

In 1048 are many papers relating to Capt. Kidd and other pirates brought from New York and Virginia, with names, court judgments, warrants of execution, fees, etc. See also Adm. Court, Oyer and Terminer, 15, 16, 48.

This volume contains a few references to losses at the hands of American privateers and other colonial happenings, pp. 56-57, 59, 84, 170-172, 179, 309.
1147-1174. 1703-1721, 1745-1783. Letters relating to Marines.¹

The marines were regular regiments on marine service, and colonels of marine regiments were called marine colonels. They took their orders only from the Lord High Admiral (Prince George of Denmark, 1147, May 20–Oct. 25, 1708) or the Admiralty, having been formally placed under the former’s direction, Mar. 23, 1703 (Treas. 64: 5).² Rules were drawn up in May, 1740 (1151, duplicates in Adm. 1: 4318, and Adm., Marine Office, 3); new regulations were issued in 1748 (1151, 323-358) and in Mar., 1755 (1162, 1-5); and many acts of Parliament regulating the marine forces while on shore were passed between 1755 (28 Geo. II., c. 11) and 1785 (25 Geo. III., c. 3).

By royal sign manual, Feb. 28, 1747, the king placed all the marine regiments under the command of the Admiralty, authorizing the commissioners to draft all rules and regulations and to direct all payments of money. Hitherto the business had been done partly by the Admiralty and partly by the Navy Board. From this time forward the whole was managed by one of the Admiralty’s secretaries aided by two clerks, with a clerk from the Navy Office to examine the marine clothing. If the War Office wished to instruct the marines, it could do so only through the Admiralty.

The marines were raised and mustered in the same manner as the land forces, and there were always appointed a muster-master general and a comissary-general of marine forces. They were likewise reduced and disbanded at the end of a war, as in 1713 and 1748, under direction of a regular “commission for disbanding the marine regiments”. A number of those disbanded in 1713 were restored by George I. as regiments of foot, and such act of restoration shows the interchangeability of the land and sea forces. A marine corps could at any time be incorporated with the regiments of infantry of the line or could be constituted a regular regiment of foot, and a regiment of foot could be constituted temporarily a regiment of marines.

The earliest regiment of marines appears to have been raised in Oct., 1672, for service on board the fleet and to have been disbanded at the close of the Dutch War. Two regiments were raised in 1690, and six regiments in 1702; and in succeeding years marine forces were regularly provided for by Parliament, “to be employed on board our ships or on shore as there shall be occasion”.³ When raised, the marines were dispersed by detachments on board the ships of the royal navy and scattered over the world.⁴ Marines served at the taking of Annapolis Royal in 1710,⁵ and detachments from a marine regiment remained in Nova Scotia during 1710-1711. There were marines in garrison at St. John’s in Newfoundland, 1740; marines went with Lord Cathcart in ¹ There are no marine entry books from 1721 to 1745. That there have been such is evident from the index to 1151 which does not belong to that volume but to one of earlier date, 1740 to 1744.

² Instructions for the paymaster of marines in 1702 may be found in Treas. 64: 197.

1740-1741; and others were on board the Princess Mary, which was sent in 1745 to assist in the expedition against Louisburg. From that time forward marine regiments played some part in the history of the colonies.

The marines were paid in like manner with the land forces, being provided for by Parliament exclusive of the money granted for the service of the navy. The money furnished for their maintenance did not go, however, through the hands of any officer of the navy, but through the hands of the paymaster-general of the forces. The accounts were made up at first apparently in the Admiralty Office, but very early a marine office was established, under a paymaster-general of marine forces (see under Adm., Marine Office, below). The system of payment, in this case as elsewhere, was fitful and uncertain. Pay was frequently in arrears and the troops were discontented and mutinous. As early as 1706 Prince George endeavored to find a remedy but without success. In 1712 pay was three and a half years in arrears. The marines on shore were left without subsistence; marine widows could not get their pensions; the clothiers were not paid. The Admiralty complained to the paymaster, but he seems to have been helpless because of the failure of the paymaster-general of the forces to issue the money.

But the fault did not lie entirely with the Pay Office. Bad as the conditions were in that “subordinate but opulent” post, they found their counterpart in the Marine Pay Office itself. When in 1745 the House of Commons made an investigation into the abuses of the army, the committee summoned before it, among others, Edmund Herbert and Edmond Jones, deputies. The latter made a sorry appearance. “Being examined,” says the report, “he stated that he had been in the office ever since its establishment and was allowed a salary of about 300l. a year and that he gave no security. That he always received the money issued from the Exchequer and sometimes deposited it in the bank, with whom he kept a book in his own name; in which book were entered the several sums paid into, and received from the bank; and that he had then upwards of 100,000l. in his hands belonging to the marines, which sum he, at first, declared was cash and bank notes, but upon further examination he confessed, after numberless prevarications, that part of it was placed at interest, without the paymaster’s knowledge.” Herbert gave additional evidence to the effect that for technical reasons a certain warrant for pay had not been complied with and certain regiments of marines had consequently been left unpaid. To which a contemporary critic replies, “We shall soon see why the objection was made to this particular warrant. Sixty-four thousand pounds was too great a sum to be called in by Mr. Edmond Jones, the Paymaster’s Deputy’s Deputy, who had so carefully lent out that and other larger sums for the trifling consideration of a little paltry Interest Money.”

The matter was complicated by the fact that the marines when on shore were placed on the regular establishment and their sea pay became land pay which was looked after by the War Office. The pay of the marines suffered the same deductions and stoppages as did that of the land forces, including the allowance for Chelsea Hospital, a day’s pay once a year from officers and soldiers. The marines, when on board, had the same leaves of absence as the regular seamen, and when sick were given the benefit of the hospitals provided for sick and wounded sailors.

1 Report of a Committee of the House of Commons relating to the Army (1746), pp. 51-52; Commons Journal, XXV. 124.
Marine uniforms were provided in 1747, though not for the first time. In that year it was proposed to furnish a very good cloth coat, well lined, a good but inferior waistcoat, strong kersey breeches, two pairs of strong yarn stockings, one pair of shoes, two good linen shirts, two neck-cloths, and a cloth cap. But this outfit proved too expensive for the marine off-reckonings, so the waistcoat was omitted, except with the first clothing, and each man was allowed a shilling with which to convert his old coat into a waistcoat; cloth breeches were provided for the sergeants, but kersey breeches for the privates, corporals, and drummers; while the double supply of shirts, stockings, shoes, and neck-cloths or rollers was reduced by half. The coats were to be red, breasted in lapel fashion, and the sleeves to be closed. The lapels were faced and turned up with bright, full yellow, the button holes and lining to be of the same color, with white or yellow (brass) buttons. The waistcoat and breeches were to be of the same color and buttoned as the coat, and the caps to have an anchor and cable on the forepart instead of a crest, as formerly. The drummers were to wear yellow coats with proper lace on them, and the corporals to have a white shoulder knot. In 1755 hats were substituted for caps and gaiters were introduced. Sword belts with frogs, cartouch boxes with nine holes, slings for muskets, and drum belts were also provided. The Navy Board furnished the clothing and the Ordnance Board the arms, under directions from the Admiralty. The contractors were no better than they should have been, and supplies were not infrequently rejected.

The letters in these entry books are addressed to vice-admirals, commanders, and captains of the royal navy, to colonels and lieutenants of marines, to the Navy Board and Secretary at War, to recruiting officers, mayors, justices of the peace, governors of Portsmouth, Chatham, and Southampton, to the muster-masters general, the paymasters-general of marines, auditors, governors of the Chatham Chest, judge advocate, and others. The subjects of the correspondence are of great variety, the largest number concerning the marines in England or on board ships in other waters than American. Much attention was devoted to the position of the marines on board, their rank, treatment, duties, provisions, arms, and sea pay. In regard to courts-martial, the question arose whether the marines, who were appointed to serve on board the fleet and were borne as part of the complement of the ships on which they served, could be tried at a naval court-martial for offenses which they committed while serving on board or while carried on the ships' books as part of their complements, by virtue of 13 Charles II., c. 9, or any other law. The question was answered in the affirmative. At first the marines seem to have been tried at courts-martial provided by the Secretary at War under recommendation from the Admiralty, but later, at marine regimental courts-martial held on board, and the Admiralty was not disposed to take any orders from the Secretary at War in regard to such trial or the sentence that followed.

Many of the later volumes of this series are full of interest for colonial history, as may be seen from an analysis of one of them.

1168. 1773-1775. Chatham division of marines, 460 strong, embarked for America under Maj. John Pitcairn between Oct. and Nov., 1774. The Navy Board had ordered 800 white shirts and 1400 pairs of white worsted stockings for the use of the marines in North America. The knapsacks, haversacks, and pioneer utensils were sent Dec., 1774. The marine detachments were transported by the Boyne and the Somerset, while Maj. Pitcairn went in the Asia. Apparently there was no intention of landing the marines at Boston unless it should be found absolutely necessary. On Jan. 25, 1775, a reinforcement was despatched, with tents for 24 officers and 150 privates, with 10 bell tents, 10 camp colors, and 2000 gun flints, showing that a landing had been decided on. Important letters follow from the Admiralty to Maj. Pitcairn regarding the marines at Boston, and referring to Pitcairn's letter of Dec. 10 (pp. 323-325); also letters to Adm. Graves. These letters and the entries that follow are of great interest, pp. 373, 375, 379, 390, 393, 400, 420, 421-423, 436, 458, 461, 500, 544, 546, 548, 549. They refer to the position and equipment of the troops, to the knapsacks as worn and bad, to the fact, which the Admiralty regrets, that Pitcairn had lost so many men by excessive drinking, and to the sending of a sufficient number of marines to replace those killed in the battles of Lexington and Concord. A letter of July 25, 1775, refers to the deaths of Majs. Pitcairn and Short, who died of wounds received at Bunker Hill, and speaks of a letter from the former, dated June 1, to Maj. Tupper. A letter to Tupper, Aug. 3, 1775, refers to his letters of June 21 and 24 (Adm. r: 488, first four papers), giving an account of the battle of Bunker Hill and enclosing a return of the marines killed and wounded. The Admiralty through the secretary expresses satisfaction "at the gallant behaviour of the marine corps and the honour they have acquired in the defeat of the rebels on that day". It repeats Tupper's statement that the marines had lost by their tents being plundered while they were engaged in action, and instructs the secretary to express to Tupper their astonishment that such an event could have happened, "as the greatest part of the army as well as one of the battalions of marines remained in camp", and at the same time to acquaint him that "they cannot consent to the introducing a precedent for charging the public with the expense of making good such losses." Lieut. Collins was despatched to Boston by the Cerberus to take the place of Maj. Pitcairn.

Unfortunately the letters mentioned from Pitcairn cannot be found. A few letters from Capt. Hartwell of the Boyne are in Adm. r: 1902, § 18, where mention is made of fifteen marines that were sent on July 23, by order of Adm. Graves, to guard the lighthouse at Boston and were taken by the Americans on July 31, 1776. The log-book of the Boyne is also extant and furnishes a small amount of information.

Passes were required for trade in the Mediterranean and for protection against Barbary cruisers, the most menacing of whom were the Algerine pirates; and these volumes contain full information about their issue and use. A new system was established by order in Council of Dec. 18, 1729, superseding the older order of June 14, 1722. Rules for the use of passes and instructions to the governors of the colonies may be found in 1319, 2, and 1321, 330-339. Letters follow regarding passes for colonial merchants or

1 Cf. Commons Journal, XXI. 733, 735. 1732. The gist of these regulations was as follows:

No pass was to be granted to the master of any ship or vessel until a certificate had been obtained by the governor of a plantation from the naval officer, giving the number of men and guns and stating that such ship or vessel had been built either in Great Britain or Ireland or the islands of Guernsey or Jersey or one of the plantations or that it was a foreign ship made free; and further that the master and all the owners of her were the king's natural-born subjects or foreign Protestants made denizens.

Oath was to be taken by masters of ships and vessels as to the property of them, and a bond was to be entered into by the master and one of the owners, or if an owner for merchants trading with America, some of which are answers to letters received in "Letters from the Governors" (Adm. 1: 3817-3820). These answers give considerable information, not about the actual use made of the passes, but about the conditions under which they were to be used—fees, registers, unused passes, exceptions, stamps on bonds, etc.

Note the letters of instruction to Rhode Island (1319, 427-429, Sept. 12, 1733, 1321, 336-338, Oct. 8, 1754) and Connecticut (1322, 375, 377); also the case of foreigners navigating British ships 1 (1320, 144-145, 1323, 13), bags of money sent from Boston, 1753-1754 (1321, 63, 106, 168, 243, 331), stamps on bonds (1322, 211, 231, 1323). For further information regarding passes see Adm. 7 (Miscellanea): 75-103, "Register of Passes".

Instructions were sent to the consuls at Alicante, Barcelona, Cadiz, Cartagena, Cagliari, Coruña, Faro, Genoa, Leghorn, Lisbon, Malaga, Naples, Oporto, Seville, Venice, Messina, Malta, bidding them to demand passes of all masters of ships or vessels that might come into their ports, in order to endorse the same and to compare them with the specimens sent out by the Admiralty, and to discover whether they were forged or not. The Admiralty sent out two blank forms, one for the use of inhabitants of Great Britain and the plantations, and the other for the use of inhabitants of Minorca and Gibraltar only.

The colonial ship-owners and captains must have made use of large numbers of these passes, which were sent out to America in batches of thirty to fifty at a time. There was hardly a colony that did not make application for them. Sec. Willard of Massachusetts received, between 1749 and 1760, nearly 650 passes, though not all were issued out to captains. This number seems large when we realize that one pass did service for many voyages. Probably both Connecticut and Rhode Island obtained their passes from Massachusetts, but not New Hampshire, which received its own supply.

A very valuable series of secret despatches, that is not duplicated elsewhere, as far as a comparison has been made. In only one instance, that of a secretary's covering letter, was a document of this series found to have been were not present by some substantial and responsible person, in conjunction with the master, who was to give bond for the return of the pass.

Before the pass was delivered, it was to be endorsed in words at length and not in figures, the time when delivered, at what place, and to whom, and to the endorsement the governor was to put his hand and affix his seal.

An act of Parliament was passed (4 George II., c. 17, 1731) to prevent counterfeiting or erasing of passes, and an advertisement was published in the Gazette of Jan. 7, 1734, relating to masters who refused to produce their passes to His Majesty's ministers or consuls abroad, and the governors were to show the law and the advertisement to masters that they might not plead ignorance.

By the order in Council a register was to be kept by the Admiralty of all passes issued out, therefore the governor and secretary of a colony were to transmit to the Admiralty Board a register of such as were issued in the colony. Also by order in Council a fee of twenty-five shillings was to be paid for each pass for the benefit of the secretary to the Admiralty and his clerks, and the governors were to receive this sum from the masters before they issued a pass, and to transmit it to England by the first convenient opportunity. All passes returned by the masters were to be cancelled and transmitted to the Admiralty, together with the bonds and oaths that should be given for new ones. All passes not issued out were also to be returned.

1 From other sources we learn that there were many abuses in the matter of Mediterranean passes. In 1760 the British consul at Gibraltar informed the Secretary of State that false passes were in use and that sometimes masters after obtaining passes would discharge their English sailors and take on Italians.
entered in any other Admiralty volume. These entry books may be the "Private Order Book" mentioned in the Admiralty minutes (Adm. 3: 70, Aug. 3, 1762).

1331. 1745-1761. Admiralty orders in connection with the Louisburg expedition, 1745, and the Braddock expedition, 1754. Instructions to Boscawen, 1755, Byng, 1756, Hawke, 1756, Hardy, 1757, Cotes, 1757, Holburne, 1757, Frankland, 1757, Moore, 1757, Palliser, 1757, Gordon, 1757, Wheelock, 1757, Saunders, 1759, Holmes, 1759, Cotes, 1759, Colville, 1760 (June 20, sent the same night at half-past twelve by a messenger to Portsmouth to go by the Vengeance—important because concerning operations against Canada), Swanton, 1760, Colville, 1761, Douglas, 1761, Rodney, 1761 (reduction of Martinique, etc.). This series relates to the movements of the squadrons in connection with the war in America, and is extremely important for the naval side of the war.

1332. 1762-1768. Continuation of 1331. Instructions to Houlton, 1762, Colville, 1762, Rodney, 1762, Holmes, 1762, Pocock, 1762, Keppel, 1762, Richards, 1762, and Spry, 1762. On account of the peace, the instructions to Burnaby and others, 1764, were returned and cancelled.

Instructions to Byron to make discoveries in the south seas (Falkland Islands); id. to Capt. Cook, 1772; instructions to aid the Royal Society in its expedition to observe the transit of Venus, 1768; to Graves, 1775; to Shuldhamp, 1775; to Belay and Cooper, 1775 (rebellion in New England). The remainder of the orders concern the movements of the navy in North America and the West Indies.

In 1331 is a "List of ships at present stationed in North America". In 1332 are "A List of His Majesty's Ships and Vessels in North America and of such as are under orders or intended to proceed thither forthwith", "Schedule of copies of instructions and orders from the Admiralty to Admirals Graves and Shuldam sent to Lt Viscount Howe, with his lordships instructions" (May 4, 1776), "A Schedule of copies of Letters from the Secretary of the Admiralty to Vice-Admirals Graves and Shuldam" (same date).

Further instructions to Capt. Cook, 1776; to various captains regarding American privateers, 1777-1778.

1333. 1770-1779. A smaller volume of secretary's letters, supplemental to those noted above, with additional instructions informally couched. Important for the Revolutionary War.

1334-1341. A set of volumes, numbered 1 to 8, of which 3, 4, and 5, 1336, 1337, 1338, were (at the time of examination, July, 1912) in the hands of the Admiralty. They are of the same character as 1333, secretary's letter-books.

1334. 1776, Oct. 1778, Apr. Letter to Sir John Hamilton of the Hector and other captains, Mar. 8, 1777, describing Capt. Hynson (Brit. Mus. Add. MSS. 34414) as "a lusty, black looking man, who will as it is expected endeavor to pass for a passenger". Hynson was the real owner of the boat on which he expected to sail, an English-built cutter sloop about 90 tons. From this letter one would not judge that Hynson was a spy in England's employ, as he is shown to be in the Auckland Papers. Another letter, Mar. 28, 1777, speaks of one Hammond, “a little man who wears a green uniform with red lapels and anchor buttons, lately arrived at Nantz from Baltimore in Maryland with dispatches from the Congress, and is to return with other dispatches when cleaned and new fitted”. Other letters have to do with the interception by the Admiralty of American and French correspondence. “My Lords Commrs of the Admiralty having received intelligence that two French ships were fitting out on the 21st (of May, 1777), either at Marseilles or Toulon”, and “that they were to be purchased or at least freighted by Mr. Deane to be laden with different sorts of goods for the use of the rebels”, have discovered “that one Hynson is to have the direction of the expedition [and] to receive his instructions from Mr. Deane”. Letters follow of a similar character, furnishing the admirals with information about suspected vessels sailing for America with cargoes of warlike stores.

For example, “The ships going out will be loaded with fusils, pistols, accoutrements for cavalry, saddles for one squadron, clothing for troops, and other military stores.” “The Hippopotame, sold by the court of France to Mr. Beaumarchais, is to carry a very principal cargo, a quantity of large brass cannon, about 60 field pieces, 1,500 fusils, and other stores. Mr. Carmichael, a gentn in much confidence with the rebel agents is to go on board the ship.” “The rebel agents have settled an agreement for a packet boat to be dispatched once a month to the Congress from Nantz.” “One Nicholson is set out for Nantz to command the Lyon, an American frigate of 36 guns. He is to sail with the fleet and it is supposed carries dispatches for the Congress. A Mr. Carmichael goes with him. Several people lately picked up who escaped from prison in England are going on the fleet as pilots for the coast of America. Their rendezvous is about Nantz, L’Orient, perhaps Belle Isle. Mr. Deane’s brother is going with dispatches and embarks on board a frigate of 36 guns, which has been sometime laying in the river of Bourdeaux.”

Secret instructions for Lord Howe, Mar. 21, 1778; additional secret instructions, Mar. 22. Then follow instructions to admirals, in other waters, to guard against the French. Secret instructions for Adm. Keppel, Apr. 25, 1778, with a list of vessels under his command.

1335. 1778, May-Dec. Secret instructions to Adm. Montague, governor of Newfoundland, May 2, 1778, Barrington in the West Indies, May 3, Young, id., May 3, informing them of the declaration of war against France; to Byron, Keppel, and others regarding the movements of the French, particularly the sailing of D’Estaing’s fleet, May-July, 1778; and to Barrington and others calling on them to co-operate; to Capt. Peyton to intercept French ships with stores for America, Nov., 1778; to Byron, Nov. 6; to Gambier, Nov. 6; to Barrington, Dec. 15; to Shuldham, Dec. 15; to Parker, Dec. 15, 18, regarding D’Estaing and the French.

1339. 1781, Jan.-June. Instructions to Elphinstone of the Warwick, Jan. 13, 1781; to Arbuthnot, id. The next few letters relate to the defense of Gibraltar. To Capt. Bazely of the Amphion regarding the transportation of Hessians from Bremer Lehe to New York, Mar. 21, 1781, with original drafts. To Arbuthnot, May 22, 1781, speaking of "having received intelligence from Paris dater the 13 inst. that large supplies of money, clothing, and military stores were preparing to be sent from France (part of them with young Laurens) for the use of the rebel army in North America". Cf. letters to Darby, June 7, 8. Letters also relate to the defense of St. Helena, Brazil, East India, and the Cape, and to protection of convoys from the East and West Indies.

1840. 1781. July-Dec. Instructions to Adm. Digby, mentioning an extract of a letter from Sir Henry Clinton, with extracts of two intercepted letters from Washington to Lafayette and Gen. Sullivan; also a copy of a letter from the commander of the French fleet at Rhode Island to Luzerne at Philadelphia, regarding the movements of De Grasse's fleet, July 14, 1781; instructions to Rodney, July 14, 1781; to Arbuthnot, Digby, July 24, regarding the Dutch fleet laden in part with cloths and linens for the Americans, and bound, it was believed, for Rhode Island; to Digby, Aug. 31, protection of Florida and the West Indies, and to cooperate with Clinton; to Shuldham and others, Sept. 4, to guard against the attack of the combined fleets of France and Spain, which were cruising in the chops of the English channel; to Digby, Dec. 3, most secret, regarding his future movements; to Rodney, Dec. 3, to go to the West Indies; Dec. 6, most secret, same as to Digby above, with important variations; Capt. Onslow of the Bellona and three other captains, to go to the West Indies, Dec. 18.

1841. 1782. Instructions to J. Rowley, Jan. 11, 1782, to join the force assembled under Rodney for the defense of Jamaica; to others, captains, to join Rodney; to Hood, Jan. 15, statement of plans; to Rowley, Feb. 9, defense of Jamaica; to Barrington, most secret, Apr. 5, to intercept the French fleet preparing at Brest for a secret expedition; to Digby, Apr. 17, German recruits for Halifax. Letters to Lord Howe, Apr. 29–July 17, and to others, regarding movements of the combined French, Dutch, and Spanish fleet, W. S. W. from the Lizard in July, 1782, which had captured Adm. Campbell's convoy, "18 sail of inconsiderable burthen and loaded with Salt provisions", in May; secret, to Pigot, Aug. 8, to take the garrison of New York on board and go to Barbadoes and land the troops there; to the same, Dec. 28, defense of Jamaica.

MINUTES.

1-98. 1689-1783. Board's Minutes.

In 1689 the Admiralty Board sat in Adm. Herbert's lodgings, Channel Row. It met frequently and the secretary wrote that "For some time past this office has been and is in such a continual hurry of business, by continually setting twice a day from morning till neere 2 and some times longer and from afternoon till midnight, that it is always morning ere I can get to my bedd." This practice was maintained, the board continuing to meet daily, Sundays included.

The first seventy-five volumes of this series, although they contain many references to the plantations, are of little importance for colonial history.
The minutes are as a rule meagre, more so than are those of the Treasury Board, and rarely contain record of debate or discussion. The entries in most cases take the form of directions, resolutions, and orders. We read much of the location and movement of ships, of transfers, wages, stores, victualling, building, supernumeraries, superannuation, appointments, exchanges, leaves of absence, and so on, but almost nothing of naval policy, naval programmes, or the larger aspects of sea-power in its relation to the territory overseas. If debate on such questions was entered on at the board, it was not recorded in the minutes. Sometimes orders and additional orders are inserted, but always very briefly; sometimes an important change is commented upon, and in such case the proper directions follow.

Undoubtedly many orders came from the king, as head of the navy, through the Secretary of State, and in all such cases debate was not likely to take place, the Admiralty acting as the intermediary, issuing the orders, confidential, secret, and most secret, to the admirals and captains.

After 1770, and particularly after 1773, the minutes become fuller and the references to American affairs more frequent. After 1780 the volumes become still more full and affairs in America bulk more largely. Yet even in these volumes, the evidence is not very satisfactory, and there is reason to believe that the minutes as a whole are incomplete, inasmuch as business known to have been transacted at the board is not mentioned in them. Vols. 89-90 contain a certain amount of information regarding the movements of Paul Jones, and we find it stated under dates Mar. 6 and 13, 1780, that the officers and companies of the Serapis and Countess of Scarborough were acquitted at a court-martial, which was held at Sheerness, of any misconduct on that occasion and their wages were paid to the day the court-martial was held. Cf. Adm. 12: 21-26, Digests of Courts-Martial, 1755-1806, and Adm. 1: 5315, for the court-martial proceedings, beginning Mar. 10, 1780.

ORIGINAL PATENTS.

Vice-Admiralty and Subordinate Offices.

33. 1749. Governor of Newfoundland.

Original parchment commission to Rodney, as governor of Newfoundland. In a box, with seal (broken), accompanied by instructions on paper, May 2, 1749, with a copy of 15 Charles II., c. 16.

38. 1746. Vice-Admiralty Court, Cape Breton.

39. 1763. Id., Quebec, Florida, etc.

40. 1763. All America.

Bundle 40 contains a single letters patent empowering the Lords of the Admiralty to constitute a vice-admiral “for all America” and also “proper officers for a court of vice-admiralty for all America”. See C. O. 5: 216. The Treasury had sent a memorial to the Privy Council saying that there ought to be such a court. The Privy Council approved in order of Oct. 5, 1763, and referred the matter to the Admiralty. The latter replied, Mar. 14, 1764, defining conditions—powers, salaries, etc. Consequently letters patent were issued: the Earl of Northumberland was appointed vice-admiral (Adm. 2: 1057) and William Spry, judge, June 15, 1764 (Treas. 28: 1, 16, 17).
Spry gave up his business and actually entered upon the appointment;¹ but on Sept. 7, 1768, the commissions were revoked and instead of one court four courts were set up at Halifax, Boston, Philadelphia, and Charleston. See further, Brit. Mus. Add. MSS. 35910, ff. 224, 225, Acts Privy Council, Colonial, III. 663-665, V. 151-153, VI., §§ 591, 803; Treas. 1, 1763-1768; House of Lords MSS., nos. 226, 229; Adm. 1: 3679, id.: 3884, separate parcel tied up with red tape. Also above, pp. 18, 37.

REGISTERS, RETURNS, AND CERTIFICATES.

VARIOUS.

Arranged chronologically as the warrants were issued. Of little value.

LIST BOOKS.

1-59. 1673-1783. List Books.
Enter books showing the disposition of ships, and containing the names of officers, etc.

MISCELLANEA.

61-63. 1745-1748. Lists of Convoys.
Chiefly convoys in English waters or north of Cadiz. Occasional references to colonial convoys. The lists show the disposition of the ships in the years named and sometimes indicate the ships that were despatched to American waters.

75-103. 1683-1783. Register of Passes.
These volumes are a register of all ships to which passes were issued, whether British or colonial, arranged chronologically by days, beginning Wednesday, Jan. 16, 1683. The information given covers the date of the certificate, ship’s name, of what place, nature of vessel (whether ship, pink, ketch, etc.), tons burden, guns carried, dock, master’s name, men (whether English or foreign-born), built (whether English or foreign), date of return, date of pass, and by whom signed. The Indexes (79, 81, 85, 93, 95, 97, 99, 101) enter the ships alphabetically by names. At the opening of vol. 76 are “the several rules now in force for the granting passes made since the peace with Algiers in April, 1682, and authorized by order of council, May 11, 1682”. See 4 George II., c. 18, and above, p. 41.
These volumes furnish a considerable amount of statistical information regarding American shipping, and make it possible to follow the expansion of American trade. For example in the years 1684-1686 plantation ships are mentioned from New York (2 pinks, 80 and 90 tons, 2 ships, 100, ketch, 60), New England (4 ships, 200, 190, 140, 120, pink, 80), Barbadoes (ketch, 80).

¹ William Spry, LL. D., was commissioned governor of Barbadoes, Feb. 11, 1768. He had married the daughter of Thomas Pitt, brother of William Pitt, and his wife died in Barbadoes, Oct. 3, 1769. Spry married again and died in office, 1772.
A study of these volumes will give a good idea of colonial trade with Portugal, Spain, the Straits, and the Mediterranean. The vessels from the colonies usually went to Portugal, Spain, or the Western Islands and back; some entered the Mediterranean; others followed more varied routes as, from Falmouth to Oporto, Quebec, Falmouth; New England or New York, Africa, West Indies, and back; New York, Cork, the Mediterranean, and back; New York, Newfoundland, Madeira, and back; New York, Holland, Africa, and back; New York, Africa, South Carolina, and back; New York, Bermuda, Fayal, and back; New England, Lisbon, Barcelona, and back; New England, West Indies, Great Britain. One New York ship (the snow Johnson, 70 tons, John McConnell, master, 11 British men, no foreigners, plantation build) went to Venice and back to New York. Others went to Leghorn, Seville, Benecarlos [?], Alicante, Senegal, and Goree. The lists also furnish some information regarding Irish trade to the plantations and to the Mediterranean (Naples), for many passes were sent to the lieutenant general of Ireland.¹

201-205. 1746, 1747, 1766, 1781. Naval Instructions.

Various sailing and fighting instructions for His Majesty's fleet, generally printed. In 205 is Adm. Parker's copy, showing ample evidences of use, with many changes and additions, including flags on the margin, hand-drawn and colored.

298-300. 1733-1783. Law Officers' Opinions.

Decisions by the advocate of the Admiralty, constituting a large body of reports concerning impressment, privateering, courts-martial and their procedure, vice-admiralty cases and appeals, and other admiralty questions, as follows.

298. 1733-1756.

3. Jan. 20, 1740. Case of wrecks and droits and flags in the West Indies.

12. Apr. 23, 1742. Clause of an act to secure the importation of provisions from the colonies for the use of the fleet in America.

13. May 8, 1742. Id. touching the jurisdiction of the Admiralty in the colonies.

¹ In the India Office, Whitehall, are a few papers relating to colonial trade, reference to which can be found in the printed List of General Records, 1599-1879, issued in 1902. For example, in India Office, Home Series, Miscellanea. 124, are papers dealing with American vessels at St. Helena (1776); ibid., 337, American trade with India; ibid., 439, American and Portuguese trade with the Indies; ibid., 494, trade with the northwestern coast of America, 1785-1791. The same series contains four volumes relating to England and the Philippines.
22. Feb. 1, 1744. Regarding a judge of the vice-admiralty court in Rhode Island, against the governor and company there.
49. Aug. 6, 1745. How were convicts, captured while being transported and then recaptured, to be disposed of? Spoken of as a “new case.” Opinion rendered that convicts were still liable to be transported (see no. 62).
50. Aug. 10, 1745. Redress in case of an unjust sentence in a vice-admiralty court is by appeal to the King in Council.
59. May 10, 1746. Interpretation of an act regarding naval stores.
68. May 4, 1747. Case of salvage—ship Matilda, from Maryland to London.

299. 1756-1777.
108. Dec. 29, 1757. Have Lords of the Admiralty power to erect vice-admiralty courts in the East Indies?
128. Mar., 1764. Murder on a king’s ship at Jamaica—question of trial by court-martial or civil court.
131. May, 1764. Can Lords of the Admiralty appoint a vice-admiral for all America, with a court, judge, and officers, and leave the existing vice-admiralty courts to continue exercising their jurisdiction? Answer to first query, Yes; to second, that such single court cannot “entertain any jurisdiction in cases where particular acts of Parliament have confined the recovery of penalties and forfeitures to local jurisdictions”.

152. Apr. 18, 1776. Can an American vessel, seized by its crew for His Majesty’s use, be condemned as prize, after the passage of the Prohibitory Act—the snow Dickinson of Philadelphia?

153. Aug. 8, 1776. Case of the sloop Peter, from Santa Cruz to Amsterdam—all mariners English but the owner, one Codwise of New York; can the vessel captured be considered a droit of admiralty? That is, does the vessel belong to the Americans? Difference of opinion among the lawyers. Marriott, the king’s advocate, believes that the ship should be condemned; Wynne, his successor as king’s advocate, the same but less positively; Harris, advocate of the Admiralty, doubtful, though inclining to the same opinion.

154. Oct. 26, 1776. Regarding a ship in the Thames, supposed to belong to the rebels.

158. No date. As to the operation of a proposed clause in a bill; would it or would it not revoke that part of the Prohibitory Act regarding appeals from vice-admiralty courts to commissioners appointed or about to be appointed?

160. Jan., 1777. Case of a vessel manned by "Savages", except the master, a New Englander, and bound for Nantucket—shall it be proceeded against in a court of vice-admiralty?

162. Mar. 20, 1777. Case of a ship under convoy from Jamaica—commander separated and arrived without ship or convoy—can he be proceeded against?

163. Mar. 26, 1777. Can Lords of the Admiralty, consistently with the Prohibitory Act, authorize the judge of vice-admiralty, New York, to proceed to the adjudication of a prize?

164. Apr. 2, 1777. Case of the brigantine Betsey, sailed from Leghorn—master put a boy, supercargo, and seamen (Tuscans) adrift, and steered westward instead of to Alexandria.

166. Aug. 3, 1777. Regarding the powers of the deputy judge of vice-admiralty at Halifax.

168. Aug. 22, 1777. Regarding the granting of a letter of marque to the owner of a ship, who is not a merchant, to be used against American privateers.

300. 1778-1783.

193. June 21, 1780. Are two Americans found on board a French privateer guilty of treason or piracy?

See also 17 George III., cc. 7, 40.

319. 1812-1815. Id.

333-342. 1695-1787. Memorials and Reports.

Contains the names of ships, their stations, etc. The volumes are not ships’ muster books and do not give lists of crews.

566. 1776-1780. Lists of Transports licensed to go to America.

By the Prohibitory Act all intercourse and trade with the rebellious colonies was forbidden. Accordingly the Admiralty issued instructions requiring that all transports going to America should be licensed. Such licenses were addressed to all flag officers—captains, commanders, etc.—and a list of them is preserved in this volume. The list gives the ship’s name, master’s name, tonnage, date, and time to be in force. Some of the earlier entries omit the last item, or simply insert “till her return”. Later a specific date of expiry is given.

Begins with the ship Greenwich, bound for the coast of Guinea, Barbadoes, Antigua, and Lisbon, 1736-1738, and ends with the sloop Alderney, 1739-1740. As many of the voyages were to the colonies, the abstracts, which give dates, places, number of days in port, time when sailed, number of days at sea or cruising, remarkable observations and accidents, are of value.

592. 1768-1769. Tabular Statements of Exports and Imports from Colonial Ports.

From Jan. 5, 1768, to Jan. 5, 1769, the following ports are given: St. John’s, Quebec, Halifax, Piscataqua, Falmouth, Salem, Marblehead, Boston, Rhode Island, New London, New Haven, New York, Perth Amboy, Salem, Cohensy (Cohansy, N. J.), Burlington, Philadelphia, Newcastle, Lewis, Pocomoke, Chester, Patuxent, North Potomac, Accomac, South Potomac, Rappahanock, York River, James River (lower district), James River (upper district), Currituck, Roanoke, Bath Town, Beaufort, Brunswick, Winyaw, Charles Town, Port Royal, Savannah, Sunbury, St. Augustine, Pensacola, Mobile, Bermuda, Bahamas.

The tables of exports take up the first half of the volume and give information as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>To</th>
<th>Great Britain</th>
<th>Ireland</th>
<th>Southern parts of Europe, Africa, etc.</th>
<th>British and foreign West Indies</th>
<th>Total</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Entry of species of merchandise</td>
<td>Entry of quantity</td>

The tables of imports are in the last half of the volume, as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>From</th>
<th>British and foreign West Indies</th>
<th>Southern parts of Europe, Africa, and the Azores</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Entry of species of merchandise</td>
<td>Entry of quantity</td>

</table>

The information here given is supplemental to the naval office lists. Unfortunately, it covers but a single year and omits all mention of importation of goods from England.

ACCOUNTANT GENERAL’S DEPARTMENT.

ACCOUNTS.

1-116. 1681-1783. Treasurer.

Volumes of bills paid, tabulated accounts, itemized.

2. State of the account of William Green, secretary to Adm. Arbuthnot, for disbursement at Savannah and Charleston, 1780, with “observations” of value.

4. I. Admiral’s account current with Navy Board, chiefly of expenses incurred at Halifax and Quebec.
Expense account of transportation agent, Joshua Loring, containing interesting items of expenses incurred in New York, Lake George, etc.

Letters from Samuel Shipton to the board from Boston and Louisville. 1746-1748.
Capt. Shackerling’s accounts. 1756-1757.

II. Expense account of the British fleet at New York, as disbursed by William Fowler, storekeeper at New York. 1776-1780.

III. Expense account of the British fleet in the Delaware River, as disbursed by William Fowler at New York. 1777-1778.
Fowler’s account with the Navy Board. 1776-1781. Many papers; cf. 220.
Vouchers of bills drawn and sales made.
Expense account of British fleet at Boston. 1775-1777.

5. Admiral’s contingent fund, general expenses current unless otherwise stated: East Florida; Shudham (1777); Edwards (Newfoundland, 1779, 1780); Gambier (1779); Rodney, (Jamaica, 1762-1763, 1771-1774); Colvile (St. Lawrence, 1760); Cotes (Jamaica, 1757-1760); Knowles (West Indies, 1747-1749); Saunders (St. Lawrence, 1759-1763); Lee (Leeward Islands, 1744-1747); Edwards (Newfoundland, 1781); Capt. Pearson (Quebec, 1777); Keppel (Virginia, just before Braddock’s march, with expenses of his attendance on meeting at Alexandria and Annapolis with Braddock, £95 (=£76 stg.)—general disbursements, 1754-1755. This paper contains such items as were not regularly allowed by the Navy Board; Warren (North America, 1745-1746); Commander Wallace (Florida and Bahamas, port orders, 1779); Capt. Henry (Savannah, 1779-1780); Commander Douglass (Barbadoes and Leeward Islands, Carolina, 1745-1746); Howe (North America, interesting items, May 6, 1776–Sept. 20, 1778); Commander Holburne (Barbadoes, 1749-1752); Duff (Newfoundland, purchase of vessels, 1775); Parker (Jamaica, 1780, 1782).

In addition there are a few documents in these volumes relating to the purchase of vessels during the American war, with tables of prices.

174-176. 1747-1783. Id., Jamaica.

Four parts: I., similar in form to William Green’s account (Adm., A. G. Accounts, Various, 2) and containing interesting “observations”; II., III., different in form and content; IV., similar to I. Fowler had been storekeeper at Boston also. See Adm., A. G. Accounts, Various, 4 (III.) and Adm., A. G. Miscellanea, Various, 7.

REGISTERS, VARIOUS.

45. 1779-1782. Pay-Lists of Ships engaged in America.

From the Imprest Office. "Payments to Crews of Armed Ships", under Adm. Digby. These lists are regular payment sheets, of little importance in themselves, but in one case (the Comet Galley pay book, 1780-1782, Lieut. Andrew Law, commander), of value as showing how many of the sailors on the British ships were American born. Twenty-three out of 117 seamen were born in the colonies. Unfortunately the place of birth is omitted in the others.

MISCELLANEA, VARIOUS.

1. 1756-1766. Documents relating to Expenses in America and the West Indies.

"An account of the expense of the wear and tear of His Majesty's Ships employed in America and the West Indies, according to the time of service of each respective ship, from the 1st Jan'y, 1756, to the 31st Decemr. 1766; with the value of such as were lost, etc.: from the most exact estimate that can be made thereof"; prefaced by a large table giving "a particular state of the expenses" covering all the items. Following these statements are tables of one kind or another, giving the names of flag officers and commodores, pay and table money, estimates of wages, victualling of land forces, expenses of sick and wounded, charge of transports, freight of transports, etc., value of stores with cost of transportation, amounts of bills of exchange, by whom and from what place (colonial) drawn, etc., with the correspondence connected therewith.

2. 1775-1782. Documents relating to Transports and Tenders employed during the American War.

Letters, tables, and other documents. Some of the letters are from Carolina, Virginia, New York, and the West Indies, and occasionally deal with the details of important military operations. The second part of the volume is almost entirely taken up with letters from the colonies.

   Id., transport seamen. 1779.
   Index to the musters, by Lieut. Evans, agent to the transports.

4-6. Rolls of muster books of transports with indexes, volumes of blanks filled in. 1776-1782.

Dated "New York", but labelled "Imprest Office, Boston", Jan., Sept., Nov., 1776; Dec., 1778, 1780, 1784. Also letters to Fowler from the Navy Board, and enclosures—admiral's proclamations and orders, ship surveys and valuations, inventories, and sales—with comments by the Commissioners of the Admiralty.
8. 1783-1794. Surveys in North America.

Bundle of papers relating to surveys in Canada; and containing a statement of disbursements by Sir John Wentworth, appointed surveyor of the woods in 1766, in making surveys of pine trees in Nova Scotia, 1783-1784. Also maps of Stewiac and Lahave rivers.

Bundle of expense accounts of Loyalists removed from various parts of America to Nova Scotia, Quebec, Jamaica, Dominica, and the Bahamas; including cost of victualling, names of ships, their starting place and destination, date of departure, with correspondence regarding the settling of the Loyalists in the places mentioned. The papers give no clue to either names or numbers of the Loyalists, and the bundle is labelled on the back "not giving the information wanted".

10. 1814-1820. Bundle of Papers relating to the American Schooners, Tigress and Scorpion, captured on Lake Huron in 1814.

Some of the papers are of date as late as 1820.

119. 1697-1720. Prices of Naval Stores.

Drawn up pursuant to a vote of the House of Commons that an account be laid before the House of all timber, planks, wood, and lumber, delivered into the several yards for the use of His Majesty’s navy from Christmas, 1712, to Christmas, 1720, distinguishing the prices and sorts and the countries from which they were brought:

(a). An account of the prices given for each species and size of foreign stores, bought for the service of the royal navy, in each year, between 1697 and 1716; and from what places they have been respectively imported.

(b). An account of all foreign timber, planks, wood, and lumber delivered into the several yards for the use of His Majesty’s navy from Christmas, 1712, to Christmas, 1720, distinguishing the prices and sorts and the countries from which they were brought. This account was prepared by order from the Lords of the Admiralty, signed by letter from the secretary, Nov. 27, 1721, and grounded on an address from the House of Commons to the king.

(c). Prices and sizes of naval stores. 1717-1720. This table and the last (d), which is a duplicate, repeat the figures for foreign timber mentioned in the second (b) for the years in question, but add figures for other naval stores than timber, such as canvas, hemp, oil, pitch, rosin, tar, turpentine, and tallow.

121. 1777-1800. Prices of Naval Stores.

Covering everything used on board ship from augur bits to varnish. Large numbers of documents relating to contracts and prices have been placed in the volume, which is indirectly of value for colonial history, as giving an opportunity for comparison of prices. Subject-index.

122. 1704-1736. Warrants upon Standing Contracts.

Itemized account covering iron work, ironmongers’ ware, platerers’ ware, stone ground glass, masons’ work colors, painters’ works, oars, plumbers’ ware, etc., with prices.
123. 1686-1724. Returns of Stores.

The only documents of any particular value in this volume are lists of ships (1700-1724) containing mention of a few ships built in New England such as: 4th class, Falkland, 1695, New England, rebuilt 1702, Chatham; 6th class, Bedford Gally, 1697, New England, rebuilt, 1709, Portsmouth; etc.

124. 1771-1822. Id.

Sundry accounts of foreign stores and oak timber, prepared at different periods for the use of the House of Commons, Admiralty, and Navy Board, commencing Feb. 27, 1771, and ending Dec. 31, 1774. Of some consequence as showing the amounts of stores produced in America at this time.

125. 1744-1800. Transports: Orders received from Mr. Gregton.

Contains one or two letters from America (Boston and New York) regarding transports (1780), and a collection of documents labelled “North America and West Indies, Transports”, consisting of letters from the colonies of some importance.

126. 1754-1773. Register of Hired Transports.

Contains date of contract, owners' name, ships' name, burden, time of service, rate per ton, amount of freight, when the bills were passed, where the ships were employed, etc. Many of these transports were engaged in carrying troops to America. The names of the vessels are arranged alphabetically. At the end of the volume is a document entitled “Promiscuous allowances made to owners of transports, exclusive of their freight”, with descriptions of extra services. The statements are often of considerable interest.

127. 1773-1794. Id.

NAVY BOARD.

1-69. 1660-1688. Letters from the Admiralty.

The Navy Board in-letters from the Admiralty begin with 1660 and extend only to 1688. After that date all such letters must be sought for among the Admiralty out-letters. There is nothing of importance for colonial history in these volumes. 242-271 are bundles of letters from transport agents in England, 1742-1784 (chiefly 1746-1763). 272, 273, are bundles from the Victualling Board, Sick and Wounded Board, and Ordnance Board, 1744-1765. They contain many references to the activities of these departments in equipping vessels of the navy during the period of the war in America. The letters from the Victualling Board are practically covered by Adm., Victualling Department, Out-Letters, but no out-letters of the Board of Sick and Wounded to the Navy Board are extant.

Contains a list of transport ships and vessels that were employed in carrying troops from North America under the command of Col. Gooch, followed by letters from James Wallace, transport agent, with tables, lists, and supplemental papers from Port Royal harbor, Jamaica, 1741-1742. Also the cash account of James Randall, transport agent, for carrying troops to North America, etc., 1757-1759, an interesting document.
275-280. 1746-1779. Promiscuous Letters as to Transports.

From both boards and individuals, official and private. Scattered among papers relating to transportation elsewhere are letters, lists, and correspondence relating to transportation to North America and the West Indies. They are all of minor importance, though some of the lists are interesting and bits of useful information appear here and there. For instance, "The Navy transports, named in the enclosed list, I send to England under convoy of his Majesty's Ship Grampus (Capt. Reddall having my directions for that purpose), They being the same that were intended to convoy General Burgoin's army, but the Convention being broke by the Congress, they were in consequence remanded back to this port."

281-1299. 1673-1789. Miscellaneous.

This long series of miscellaneous correspondence contains chiefly letters from all whose communications were not filed elsewhere. The writers were captains, masters, clerks of the cheque and other officials at the naval stations, who sent information regarding matters of routine—repairs, transfers, payments, tickets, pay books, complaints, leaves of absence, etc., in great variety. The letters for 1673 (281-289) are arranged chronologically, the remainder alphabetically for each year. The bundles average about nine to a year, and the letters are carefully endorsed.

2544-2614. 1729-1783. Minutes of the Navy Board.

These two voluminous series of volumes contain the out-letters and minutes of the Navy Board. The letters are entered chronologically, and all the volumes are easy to use, if the date be known. The character of the business that came before the Navy Board has already been explained in the introduction (p. 4).

PASSING CERTIFICATES.

The Navy Board examined the qualifications of lieutenants for the navy on direction from the Admiralty. These volumes of certificates contain the records of such examinations, and are well indexed.

VICTUALLING DEPARTMENT.

OUT-LETTERS.

Chiefly to the Admiralty, the Navy Board, treasurer of the navy, the Treasury, contractors, transport and commissary agents, and others with whom the Victualling Board carried on its business. The volumes, particularly after 1739 (12), are important for all questions touching the provisioning of the fleets that had to do with American affairs.
MINUTES.

1-96. 1702-1783. Minutes of Board and Committees.

Essential to an understanding of the work of the board. The entries are on the whole full and satisfactory.

ACCOUNTS.

1-5. 1776-1783. Accounts of Agents at Yards and Stations in North America.

1. 1776-1778. Account of George Cherry, agent at New York, covering bills of exchange drawn, on one side, and provisions purchased and sundry disbursements, on the other. The account is rendered quarterly; prices and salaries and values are given in New York currency and in sterling. The accounts of provisions purchased are elaborate.

2. 1778-1779. Account of John Marry, Cherry’s successor, covering provisions, labor, wages, and other services.

4. 1780-1782. Id., Henry Davis.

5. 1782-1783. Id., John Delafons. Davis and Delafons got into trouble because “of want of vouchers, irregularities of various description, and suspicious circumstances attending many of the transactions.” See the documents at the end of volumes 4 and 5.

REGISTERS.

Payments to cooperers, brewers, bakers, etc., New York and Savannah. For similar lists, Leeward Islands, 1782-1783, see 124, at the end.

MARINE OFFICE.

The papers in this series are accounts and vouchers, with a small number of letters from the Admiralty and others, particularly marine officials, and a few petitions and memorials. There is very little here of any importance for colonial history. The regimental accounts generally concern England only. Items that concern America and the West Indies are not of much value, as, for example, a list of camp necessities for Jamaica, July 18, 1740; mention of eight chests of medicines prepared for the land forces in the West Indies, Sept. 16, 1742; list of marine officers who were killed or who died abroad on the expedition to America, 1739-1740; “a list of paymasters appointed by letters of attorney to the undermentioned regiments of marines,” with dates and names of colonels of marine regiments, 1740-1741 (endorsed “America”).

By far the most important document in this collection is the journal of Edmund Herbert, deputy paymaster of marines, extending from 1739 to 1769, and furnishing an almost daily record of his movements. Though the entries are often very brief and perfunctory, they give an impressive picture of the way much departmental business was done at this time. Herbert led a dreary life, making up accounts, waiting on his superiors, attending various offices in Whitehall and the City in the performance of his routine duties, and suffering great delays in getting desired information or having warrants signed. We come into close touch with the working of the deputy system, as is seen in Herbert’s relations with his chief, Charles Hanbury Williams (afterward Sir Charles), and with the prevailing official attitude of irresponsibility, as when Francis, earl of Godolphin, went off to Newmarket for a week with the privy seal and thus brought the issue of money to a standstill. This journal should be compared with the itemized account of the services which Ferdinand John Paris, colonial agent and agent of the Treasury, performed in connection with the Fairfax claim in Virginia. Treas. 1: 335, 1739-1742. For the charges brought against Herbert and his colleague Jones see below, p. 39.

A few references to marines in America—notably the Marine Grenadier Company, stationed in Philadelphia and New York. A part of this company, with its lieutenant (afterward captain), Ragg, was made prisoners and carried to France (see below, 153). From this volume we learn that there was a deputy paymaster of the marine battalions in North America.

A useful collection of lists, showing the whereabouts of marines in North America and the West Indies, as well as elsewhere.

153, 1772-1780, contains the effective list of the Grenadier Company named above, at Philadelphia, New York, and Halifax, with names, qualities, etc., of non-commissioned officers and privates. Also lists of marine battalions at Halifax under captains Elliott, Johnston, McDonald, Griffith, and Pitcairn.

Edmund Herbert’s entry book of letters kept by himself and his fellow deputy, Edmond Jones. The letters are signed by Herbert and Jones, and annotated by Herbert. They are from Capt. John Chambre, paymaster of marine forces in America, Colebrooke, the contractor, and others, and concern the subsistence of the marine forces on the Carthagena expedition. Many of the letters are from Carthagena and other places in the Caribbean, and relate to finances, bills, drafts, etc. They have little interest, though occasionally furnishing information.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

IN-LETTERS.

85-87. 1709-1754. 1766-1779. Letters from Surgeons and Agents and from Officers in Command in all Waters.

85. 1709-1754. Packets of original letters from surgeons and agents for sick and wounded seamen, from Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Massachusetts, New York, Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, containing monthly abstracts, sick tickets, and accounts. Occasionally a bit of information, as in a letter from J. Cusick, New York, July 1, 1740, “I am told the Troops cannot assemble together at New York before the middle of September, they say they are likely to meet with great success in their levies, the people of these Provinces being very desirous to go to fight the Spaniards.”

86. 1766-1775. Chiefly requests for food and medicines; reports on hospitals, details relating to the care of the sick and to accounts. Sometimes dates and places mentioned are important and occasionally full descriptions are given of situations and circumstances that are useful: note Gambier’s letters from Boston, Oct. 30, 1770, Apr. 9, Nov. 9, 1771, and Nov. 27, 1771, from London; Montague, Boston, Aug. 30, 1772; Man, Antigua and Barbadoes, Dec. 20, 1770, Mar. 18, June 24, 1771, Apr. 21, 1772; Parry, Antigua, Sept. 19, 1772.

OUT-LETTERS.

1-14. 1742-1745. Letters from the Board of Commissioners for Sick and Wounded Prisoners and Exchange of Prisoners of War to the Admiralty.

These volumes, often large and bulky, well filled and indexed, are a continuation of Adm. 1: 3528 and 3529. They should be used in connection with S. P. Dom., Naval. The commissioners for the period of the Revolutionary War were J. Bell and Dr. Farquharson; their office lay on Tower Hill and in Broad St. Many of the volumes contain material of considerable importance, relating to American prisoners for the period 1775 to 1781. In Minutes, 49, Apr. 8, 1778, there is an entry of a hearing before the board regarding the work of the committee of subscribers for clothing American prisoners. 228-229 of the letter-books relate to the War of 1812.

MINUTES.

1-49. 1701-1781. General Minutes of the Board of Commissioners for Sick and Wounded Prisoners and Exchange of Prisoners of War.

These minutes seem very meagre, considering the amount of business done by the board, particularly in times of war. So far as examined they seem unimportant, though they should always be used in connection with the in-letters and out-letters.
MISCELLANEA.

43. 1756-1764. Legal Opinions.

7. Case of two ships with cargoes to Louisburg intending to go to Virginia for freight home, detained at Louisburg and impressed by the governor. Is payment for the four months sufficient, or should further claim be made? Answer, that they are legally and justly entitled to such freight as they would have made, and that the terms on which one was actually chartered for Virginia should be the measure of payment for both. 1760.

8. Case of the Peggy, Boston, bound from Newcastle-on-Tyne for Boston, taken Oct., 1756, by a French privateer, ransomed by the master, James Freeman, for 5000 livres and the mate left as hostage. Ship afterward lost and captain dead. Sitwell of London, on whom the bill for 5000 livres was drawn, received the insurance money but not the ransom, and the mate was kept a prisoner. Opinion, that the case was unusual and a gross breach of public faith. The only way was for Sitwell to sue the owners in New England. 1761.

Solicitor General Yorke, expressing his opinion, stated that the proper method of procedure was to carry the ransom bill to a proper admiralty jurisdiction in France for sentence of condemnation as lawful prize, and then an action was obtainable in England against the owners, as they were bound by the act of the master.

Similar opinion rendered by George Hay, king’s advocate.

12. Case of a contract (1758) between the Board of Sick and Wounded Seamen and Robert Patterson to supply surgeons’ stores, etc., in Antigua and Barbadoes. Patterson died, and the business was continued by others. Question as to payment of creditors.

15. Case of a French inhabitant of Guadeloupe, who signed the capitulation and had lately arrived in London under a pass from the governor. As this pass did not give special permission to come to England, was such inhabitant a prisoner of war? Opinion, that under the circumstances such person may be so considered. 1762.

21. Case of Coverdale Richardson, master of the Prince Frederick, merchant ship, who when at New York applied to the agent for taking care of prisoners of war for three men to assist in working the ship home. On arrival one Gautier apparently aided the men, who were Frenchmen, to escape. The board wishes to punish Gautier but how? Opinion, that Gautier’s behavior was unwarrantable but not criminal and no prosecution could be carried on. 1757.

Other opinions in this volume relate to French prisoners.

GREENWICH HOSPITAL.

ACCOUNTS, VARIOUS.

89-143. 1732-1783. Annual Account of the Receiver of Sixpences.

The Registered Seamen’s Act of 1696 (7-8 William III., c. 21, § 10) obliged all mariners in “Great Britain, Ireland, and the Dominions thereunto belonging” to contribute from their wages sixpence a month toward the maintenance of Greenwich Hospital, created out of the royal palace of Greenwich by William III. in 1694. A committee was appointed under the act to register seamen for the purpose of collecting the sixpences, and this committee sat from 1696 to 1699 and kept a journal of its proceedings (Adm., Medical, Miscellanea, 41). The early operation of the act was very ineffectual and new acts were passed in 1697 (8-9 William III., c. 23) and 1711 (10 Anne, c. 17). By the act of 1711, the Admiralty was empowered to appoint a receiver or receivers of the duty, who in turn were to make use of the customs collectors at the outports or others as deputies. Consequently an office was set up in Tower Street and John Clarke appears to have been its first incumbent, serving till 1725. In that year Clarke’s place was taken by three receivers or commissioners, Thomas Hawes, M. Owen, and William Young. The earliest accounts date from 1716, and from that time to 1727 the receipts averaged about £5,500 a year.

As the colonies were not specifically mentioned in the earlier acts, no effort was made during these years to collect the duty in America. Therefore, in order to remedy this defect and to carry out the intent of the original statute, a new act was passed in 1729 (2 George II., c. 7), extending the duty not only to the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man, but also to “all and every his Majesty’s Colonies, Islands, and Dominions in America”), and the receiver was authorized to call on the collectors of customs in the various colonial ports to “deduct and detain” from the wages of seamen in the merchant marine the amount named, in sterling money or its equivalent in colonial currency. To aid in the enforcement of the act, an order in Council was issued, Jan. 22, 1730, and instructions were drafted to the governors, Feb. 2, 1730, with printed orders “to be observed by Mr. ————, Receiver of the sixpence a month out of the seamen’s wages at the port of ———— in America,” and by the term “seamen” was meant, not only able-bodied seamen, but also masters and commanders, servants, apprentices, and boys, from whose services their masters received any profit. The deputy receiver’s commission was half a crown in the pound.

The office of the receivers in England was removed to Tower Hill in 1729, and William Young and William Allix became the new appointees. They immediately sent letters to all the colonial governors, Feb. 14, 1730, enclosing the royal instructions, and calling on the governors for aid and assistance. Colby took the place of Young and served with Allix till 1731, when the latter became sole receiver. He lived in the house on Tower Hill, which he rented of the Mercers Company for £50 a year, and had at first one assistant or clerk, afterward two. In 1750 he had seventy-seven deputies in England, one in Scotland, one in Jersey, and forty-two in America. His successor in 1765 was Thomas Hicks, who served for the remainder of the colonial period. The disbursements of the office included a ten per cent. commission paid to the plantation clerk or inspector of the American account in the London Custom House, on all sums received from America, and among those who held this office was Henry Hulton (1763), who, afterward, in 1767, was appointed one of the American Board of Customs Commissioners, and became principal deputy receiver of the sixpenny duty in America (see below). The duty was finally abolished in 1834.

The volumes in this series contain the accounts of the receipts and payments of William Allix, 1732-1765, and Thomas Hicks, his successor. At the beginnings of vol. 89 will be found a summary of receipts, 1716-1752. In this summary the annual receipts range from £4,800 in 1727 to £8,563 in 1731. The amount received in 1716 was £5,886, in 1720, £4,961, in 1730, £7,330, in 1740, £5,849, in 1750, £7,802, and in 1752, £7,666, with an average for the thirty-seven years of £6,598. From the receiver’s itemized accounts we learn that in 1732, out of a total of £8,016, America contributed £6,36; in 1754, out of a total of £9,403, America contributed £9,47; in 1764, out of a total of £11,455, the American sixpences came to £19,31; and in 1765, out of a total of £10,435, they came to £977. These figures refute Mr. Beer’s statement that before 1768 “this law had not been executed.”¹ It is nevertheless true that after 1768 the amounts received from America increased from those ports directly under Hulton’s charge. In 1775 the amount was £1,554, and this did not include what was received from Barbadoes, Dominica, Grenada, Jamaica, Montserrat, St. Christopher, and St. Lucia, colonies that remained under the control of the Commissioners of the Customs in England and from which the sixpences were collected in the old way. In view of this diminution in the business done at the Custom House, London, it is not surprising that the assistant plantation clerk should have been no longer required.² In 1783, out of a total of £11,500, only £147 came from America, collected at Jamaica, Bermuda, Halifax, Pensacola, and Quebec.

That in 1764 the collection was made at all the ports in America is evident from the lists. From January to February, the sixpences were taken at Bath, Falmouth, Perth Amboy, Philadelphia, Piscataqua, Pocomoke, and the Rappahannock; from March to December, at Antigua, Beaufort, Boston, Barbadoes, Brunswick, Charleston, James River, Montserrat, New London, New Providence, New York, Nova Scotia, Philadelphia, Potomac, Patuxent (Oxford), Quebec, Rappahannock, Savannah, Salem and Marblehead, Win-yaw Bay or Georgetown, and York River. As a rule the largest amount came from Philadelphia and the smallest from Halifax. Newfoundland was apparently not included at first, though in 1768 it was placed under Hulton’s charge. It is uncertain whether or not collections were made there before that date. After 1775 the sixpences were taken under the direction of the admiral-governors. See Greenwich Hospital, Miscellaneous, Various, 121, 73, order of the governor, Adm. Duff, July 12, 1775.

A study of the figures in these accounts is important in determining the commercial position and activity of the various colonial ports.

This series is not only of great value for the commercial history of the colonies but is also unique among colonial records. Its large, square ledgers (twenty-five to 1834) contain itemized statements of the payments of sixpences from every vessel that came to the port of London. The arrangement is strictly chronological, by days, months, and years, and the information was entered by the clerks in the receiver’s office as it was sent up each day from the Custom House by the plantation clerk or his assistant. From these entries a complete list of all colonial vessels that entered or cleared at the port could be made up. The information covers the name of the last port, date of arrival, ship’s name, of what place, tons burden, number of men, master’s name, time of first man’s entry on the ship’s books, time of last man’s discharge or end of the voyage, number of months’ service per man, and amount of money received. The lists indicate further whether or not the ship was new and on its first voyage, and whether the sixpenny duty had or had not been paid before. From this record can be learned what plantation-built vessels crossed the ocean to London and what English vessels from the port of London did the carrying trade to America. Similar ledgers must have been kept at the outports, as considerable sums were forwarded thence to the receiver’s office in London, but no trace of them can now be discovered. The letter-books at the outport customs houses contain few references to the matter. Mr. Atton informs me that in his inspection of these books he has found very little about the Greenwich Hospital dues. At Whitehaven, the chief traffic of which was with Ireland, the mariners preferred to pay the sixpences in that country as the rate of exchange favored them. Virginia ships generally went to Scotland first and paid their dues there. A few entries of such payments may be found, but no books specially kept for the purpose.

Mr. Atton further says, “Thus it seems that the Greenwich Hospital accounts, if found, may not give any accurate information as to the shipping, etc., of particular ports. It should be borne in mind that the maritime trade of old was often a kind of huckstering, the masters taking their cargoes from port to port to find market.” He further adds, “I find, however, that there are certain books at the Dublin Record Office that may furnish better information. In the catalogue, entitled ‘Custom House, Vol. I.’ pp. 198-199, is entered ‘Naval Books, Greenwich Hospital 1790-1832’”, but the date is too late for our purpose.

The payments in the Public Record Office volumes range from one shilling to £150, the amount dependent on the number of men and the length of the voyage. The average payment seems to run from £2 to £5. The volumes also contain the totals given in the preceding series, including itemized statements of bills and cash remitted from America. To every master who paid the duty a receipt was duly given on a blank supplied for the purpose.

MISCELLANEA.

News-Letters, Original.

A series of news-letters from London forming a sort of running account of events happening there, political, judicial, personal. The information is chiefly domestic or foreign, rarely colonial. The letters are valuable for the student of contemporary English history, and have been in part calendared for the Domestic Series.

Various.

Entry book of orders issued by the admirals as governors of Newfoundland, from Aug. 14, 1749, to Oct. 4, 1805. A valuable series for the early history of Newfoundland and the fishery, that is manifestly only a selection from some larger collection of original entry books. Not only are orders and proclamations referred to here that are not entered in this volume, but on the margin are references to volumes 1 to 18 of some other series, and to "Books of Remarks", "Observations", and "Order Book of Remarks", all of which may be different names for the same thing. Of these volumes I have been unable to obtain a trace, and they are not known to Canadian archivists.

The orders are directed from various places—court-house, St. John’s, Trinity, "Croque", on board ship—to the justices of the peace, the high sheriff, and sundry individuals. They concern rioters, strong liquors, debtors, gallows, Roman Catholics, churches, marriages, wrecks, the "Esquimeaux" in Labrador; lands, fishing, the carrying off of handicraftsmen, seamen, and fishermen by American traders (Capt. Byron, 1769), rinding fir trees, fish flakes, illicit fishing, French rights, Moravians in Labrador, bait, firewood, public houses, etc. References may be found to the admirals’ court, abolished 32 George III., c. 46. In the volume is an inserted paper on "Illicit Trade", commenting on 10-11 William III., c. 25, 26 George III., c. 26, and 15 George III., c. 31, and another headed "Sunday School", without date, except "Tuesday, Feb. 11, Revd Thomas Ever in the chair".

132. 1768-1783. Book of Letters received by the Same.

These two volumes constitute the record of Hulton’s experiences as principal deputy receiver of the sixpenny duty in America. The colonial ports under Hulton’s charge were Accomac, Bermuda, Boston, Beaufort, Brunswick, Chester and Patapsco, Charleston, Halifax, James River, upper and lower, Mobile, Nantucket, New York, New Haven, Newfoundland till 1775, New London, North Potomac, Philadelphia, Patuxent, Pensacola, Piscataqua, Plymouth, Pocomoke, Rhode Island, Rappahannock, Sunbury, Salem and Marblehead, Savannah, Salem and Cohenzie (Cohansey), York River.

LOG BOOKS.

The great collection of captains’ and masters’ logs in the Public Record Office is rendered readily accessible by means of a typewritten index in which the names of ships are arranged alphabetically. This index, copies of which may be found in both the Literary Search Room and the Government Search

1"Whereas many and great advantages would arise to his Majesty’s trading subjects, if a friendly intercourse could be established with the Esquimeaux Indians inhabiting the coast of Labrador, and as all attempts hitherto made for that purpose have proved ineffectual owing in a great measure to the imprudent, treacherous, or cruel conduct of some people who have resorted to that coast, by plundering and killing several of them, from which they have entertained an opinion of our disposition and intentions being the same with respect to them, as theirs are toward us, that is, to circumvent and kill them. And whereas such wicked practice is most contrary to his Majesty’s sentiments of humanity, to his desire of conciliating their affection and his endeavors to induce them to trade with his subjects, in conformity to these his Majesty’s sentiments, I hereby strictly forbid such wicked practices for the future and declare that all such as are found offending herein shall be punished with the utmost severity of the law.” Adm. Palliser to Mr. Hans Haven “to be dispersed among the Indians on the coast of Labrador”. St. John’s 1st July, 1764, p. 30. Cf. pp. 56-57, 62, for treatment of the Indians of Newfoundland.
Room, is in five volumes as follows: Admiralty, Captains' Logs, 4, A-F, 5, G-P, 6, Q-Z; Admiralty, Masters' Logs, 7, A-K, 8, L-Z. The index gives the ship's name, the dates of the log, and the press-mark. When the latter is obtained, the log may be called out by the description Adm., Captains' Logs, ———, and Adm., Masters' Logs, ———. No indication is given of the direction of the voyage, so that the searcher will need to know the names of the British men-of-war in American or West India waters before being able to make use of the lists. Such names can be found in the various lists of ships, Adm. 8: 1-59, 1673-1783, and Adm. 1: 230-243, 305-314, 470-472, 480-490. Much information can also be obtained from the out-letters, Adm. 2: 1-114, where the names of ships appointed to attend the colonies can be found. See also Deputy Keeper's Report, vol. 8, app. 1, § 8.

The earliest logs are of date 1669, 1671, 1672, 1673, and the series continues through the colonial period. One must not, however, expect to find logs of all ships that had to do with American affairs. Quite as frequently as otherwise the log of a particular ship will be missing, for the collection is incomplete. The series of captains' logs is much longer than the other and is more likely to contain the desired book; often, however, the logs of captain and master of the same ship have been preserved. Though the contents of such logs are likely to be identical, variations occur that are sometimes important. The master was the log keeper and his version is therefore the more authoritative of the two.

The log books are not inspiring reading, but they are valuable for dates and as an itinerary of the voyage. Though the weather is the chief "remarkable observation and accident", yet certain voyages were full of incident and the "remarks", though always brief, are occasionally informing, particularly in war times. We read of encounters with pirates, of colonial governors and other colonial officials, of ships spoken and passed, of other ships of the navy, of captures of merchant ships, and, once in a while, of sea fights. As examples of logs containing valuable information of events taking place in American waters, we may refer to Captains' Logs, 23, 51, 60, 118, 156, 157, 293, 331, 360, 420, 548, 607, 630, 675, 749, 762, 875, 895, 906, 931, 1017, 1091, 1100, 4141, 4172, and Masters' Logs, 1633, 1865. On the Rose, when in harbor (Captains' Logs, 801), guns were fired and colors spread on King William's birthday, King George's birthday, Gunpowder Day, Coronation Day, the Day of the Martyrdom of Charles I., on the day of the restoration of Charles II. (Anniversary Day), and on Proclamation Day. When the Solebay (id., 4345) was in American waters in 1780-1781, it was used as a prison ship, and when in Charleston harbor, Oct. 28, 1781, "received a Rebel govr and seven other Rebel officers at ¾ before 4".

Though the information furnished varies greatly in character and is more often nautical than historical, yet the logs can often be used with great profit in settling difficult questions of dates and naval movements.
AUDIT OFFICE PAPERS.

The Audit Office was in New Palace Yard, Westminster, and in 3 Whitehall Yard before it was removed to Somerset House, whence its papers were transferred to the Public Record Office in December, 1859. In addition to the general series of "Declared Accounts", a printed list of which was issued in 1893 and which are here entered separately, the Audit Office records include the following volumes and bundles containing material for colonial history. In a number of instances the accounts are but duplicates of the Declared Accounts.

ACCOUNTS, VARIOUS.

10-11. Admiralty Court; Accounts of Prize Proceeds: American, 1813-1816.

55. 1776-1784. Accounts of Payments to Foreign Troops, with Musters, Pay-Lists, and other subsidiary documents: Hessians.

An account of the extraordinary expenses, to be made good by the British government, for the corps of Hessian troops from 1776 to 1784. The claim appears to have been presented in 1790 by P. and C. Van Notten, and amounted to £163,926 5s. 6d. The letter of the comptroller of the army is dated 1794. The reports, letters, and itemized accounts, all in English, deal with a great variety of interesting and valuable details, touching extraordinary expenses, including sickness and hospital charges, cost of repairs to guns, travelling expenses, postage, and the like. One of the most important schedules contains lists of the losses of the officers and others at the battle of Trenton, money, baggage, and personal effects.

126-128. 1711-1819. Miscellaneous Accounts of Governors and others in America, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, etc., with subsidiary documents.

126. (1). The Account of James Oglethorpe, general and commander-in-chief of His Majesty's forces in South Carolina and Georgia, for extraordinary expenses incurred in His Majesty's service in Georgia and Florida from September 22, 1738, to July 22, 1743, when Gen. Oglethorpe sailed for England. And of money paid and set apart for the said services to Michaelmas, 1743, or consequent thereupon. Received Aug. 2, 1745. This is the original account.

(See Declared Accounts, Audit Office, 162, 441.)

(chiefly Halifax).

Contains extracts of letters from commanders-in-chief in North America relating to provisions and subsistence, transport, tonnage, effectives, horses, cattle and sheep, forage, wagons, state of barracks, etc. Nov. 1, 1775-Dec., 1777. Only an examination can show how far these letters are duplicates of papers in the Treasury series. They are valuable in showing the difficulties of provisioning the army in America, and furnish what amounts to a history of the commissariat there. The copies of letters are supplemented by copies of letters and enclosures from the commissaries, paymasters, and others.

130-132. Id. 1780-1781, 1782, 1783.
396. 1764-1788. Colonies and Dependencies, North America.
Papers relating to Accounts of the Survey.

Small packet of papers. The Board of Trade, acting under a suggestion contained in a memorial from Capt. Samuel Holland, recommended that accurate surveys should be made of North America or certain parts of it and proposed that a division be effected into northern and southern districts with a surveyor general for each district acting under instructions from the board.
The Privy Council referred the matter to the committee of the whole Council and that committee reported favorably. The Privy Council then directed the Lords of the Treasury to cause the proposal to be carried out, which was done.
The representation of the Board of Trade and Holland's memorial are given in full. Holland was appointed surveyor general for the Northern Department (Mar. 6, 1764) and Wright for the Southern. The papers that follow are Holland documents and deal with Holland's career as surveyor in America (1764-1776). One document contains a list of the plans, mostly Canada and New England, 27 in all. sent to the government. Holland's account of his service and his career (1770-1786), with lists of plans, closes the series.

The papers were evidently collected by Holland to meet the demands of the Audit Office for an auditing of his accounts in 1780, and might be called "Papers relating to the Appointment, Career, and Expenses of Samuel Holland, surveyor of the Northern District in North America".

Brook Watson, balance of general account. Sept. 17, 1783; sworn Nov. 26, 1787.
(Id., account general. May 31, 1782—Mar. 13, 1783.
Enter book containing minutes of meetings of the board appointed by the commander-in-chief to examine the public accounts of the army. May 23, 1782—Nov. 22, 1783.
Various particular accounts—provisions, rum, horses, scows, boats, fuel, etc. Jan.-June 30, 1783.

Id. July 1-Dec. 5, 1783.

These returns of Brook Watson are similar in appearance and form to those in the Commissariat Office Papers. Some of them are on huge sheets, pasted together and backed with linen.

Lists of garrisons, with rosters of the men, amounts of food furnished, etc.

581. 1639-1641. Entries of defalcation of sundry parcels of tobacco, from Barbadoes, St. Christopher, and Virginia, for which the merchants "did not only refuse to pay custom but did violently take the same away, without paying any duty for the said goods" (pp. 31-33). The other volumes contain a few similar items. In 587 there is mention of West India hides brought in as prize (1654) among payments made by the Commissioner of the Customs. 1672, "Pd John Jeffries Esqr for Edward Digges, Esq, surveyor of the customs in Virginia"; "Jamaica goods custom free by virtue of his Majesty's privy signet and signe manuel dated September 23, 1664, and Lord Treasurers Warrant dated June 13, 1666"; "Collector of the duties on the Act of Navigation, Sr. John Shaw". Such are the items, of little importance, but occasionally valuable.

(3). 1685-1686. Id.

(5). 1786-1787. Id.

Statistical table including ports, collectors’ names, duties by 25 Charles II., 6 George II., 4 George III., 6 George III., 7 George III., seizures by officers, seizures by ships of war, total. Signed, Chas. Stewart. Also payments: to whom paid, salaries by establishments in America to July 5, 1776 (valuable). Belongs to the papers of the American Board of Customs Commissioners.
1786-1787. Supplemental Account. Deals with the winding up of the affairs of the board, Apr. 5, 1786-Jan. 5, 1787.

912. 1754-1780. Hospitals.
Receipts for pay, various hospital officials in America. 1762-1763.
Two warrants authorizing payment, 1762-1763, 1779-1780, with names of the general and staff officers and officials of the hospitals “attending our forces in North America”.
Account current of His Majesty's hospitals in North America, signed by James Napier. 1754-1764.
Account of the deductions of 12d. per £ and one day’s pay in the year for one year, Dec. 25, 1779-Dec. 24, 1780, covering the entire army, with sections devoted to the officers and garrisons in North America. These deductions were for the benefit of the paymaster-general of the forces (see p. 131 and note 2).

1255-1280. 1703-1783. Stamp Duties, General Account.
These accounts are valuable in that they contain lists of the newspapers of the period and the names of their proprietors. The papers are British and the volumes contain nothing regarding colonial stamp duties. See next item.
Accounts, Various

1391. 1765-1772. American Stamp Duties.
The general account of American stamp duties, by virtue of an act passed 5 George III. and repealed 6 George III.; a paper book containing:
Distributors' abstract, with names of distributors, districts, consignments, transfers, totals, cash, returns, and balances.
Account of Tonson and Company, stationers; warehouse-keeper of stamped goods; warehouse-keeper of unstampd goods; the charge and the discharge, and the net produce.
Statement of the account of Gov. John Wentworth of New Hampshire, directed to be paid to him by Richard Rigby, paymaster-general, by warrant under the royal sign manual, July 4, 1780.
(Parchment, much damaged, out of place in this bundle. Cf. Decl. Acc.,
A. O., 1295. 432.)

1398-1399. 1689-1786. Treasurer Solicitor's Accounts.
The earliest references to colonial matters are of date 1700:
Pirate cases.
Law charges.
Expenses paid about pirate goods.
Then, 1732-1733:
Regarding an agent for an independent company on the Island of Providencc.
Quit-rents in South Carolina.
Murder at Placentia.
Seignory and quit-rents at Annapolis Royal.
Treasonable practices in Jamaica. 1743.
For publishing the charts of Merryland, king against Torbuck. 1745.
In 1399 are a few items:
Regarding passing the patent for the surrender of Georgia. 1752.
Patent, Georgia, South Carolina. 1752.
Earl and Countess of Cardigan's claim to St. Lucia. 1763-1764.
Wilkes and Almon cases. 1764-1765.
Fraser and forage contract. 1780.
A few other items.
The series is less satisfactory than that in the Declared Accounts.

1590-1591. 1570-1830. Warrants, etc.; 1651-1703, Treasury Orders to Auditors.

1590. Among the many accounts in this bundle is one for the wages of laborers employed at Louisburg, unloading wood for the garrison at Louisburg. 1745.
Among the warrants are:
Placing Worseley of the 2d battalion of the 60th or Royal American Regiment on half-pay.
Messrs. Baker, Kilby, and Baker for victualling.
Oglethorpe, for £40,000 (part of £66,109 granted by Parliament for extraordinary expenses incurred in the service in Georgia from Sept. 22, 1738, to Sept. 29, 1743).
Gen. Burgoyne, £1890, to enable him to replace 126 horses belonging to the 16th or Queen's Regiment of Light Dragoons, which were lost or killed in service during 1776-1777.
Civil establishment of East Florida. 1782-1783. Four papers.
1591. Entry book of letters received by auditors of the imprests or receipts and by other officers of the Exchequer, 1651-1702, though some early entries go back as far as 1643-1650.

No. 23. Account of the Commissioners of Transportation, including hire of ships transporting soldiers to Jamaica, 1694, and to Newfoundland, 1697.

Contain copies of patents, warrants, letters of attorney, assignments, indentes, etc., many of which concern colonial appointments and interests.
For example:
   Patent to Charles Stewart, cashier and paymaster of the customs in America.
   Warrant allowing Jared Ingersoll, judge of vice-admiralty in America, £238 16s. 8½d., out of the sale of old naval stores.
   Letters of attorney from Ingersoll to Thomas Life of London to receive this money.
   Many half-pay warrants, off-reckoning assignments, etc.
DECLARED ACCOUNTS.

From the Pipe Office and the Audit Office.

The declaration of accounts meant the final settlement of accounts with the government on the part of those who were entrusted with funds for disbursement or to meet their contingent and extraordinary expenses.

"The practice of declaring accounts before the Lord High Treasurer of England or before the Chancellor of the Exchequer and two or more of the other Commissioners of the Treasury seems to have been introduced in the sixteenth century and established in the seventeenth.

"When the system was in full operation, the practice was as follows:—Two copies of a particular account were prepared in the Audit Office, the one written on paper, and the other on parchment. Both were sent to the Treasury and there declared before the Lord High Treasurer, or before the Chancellor of the Exchequer and two or more of the other Commissioners of the Treasury, and both were alike signed by the proper Auditor, or, in later times, by the Commissioners for Auditing Public Accounts, and by the Lord High Treasurer, or the Commissioners of the Treasury as above. The account was at this stage registered at the Treasury in volumes known as 'Declared Accounts' and 'Auditors' States of Accounts', which are now preserved in the Public Record Office. The copy on paper was then returned to the Audit Office, and the copy on parchment was sent to the office of the King's Remembrancer of the Exchequer, where it was enrolled in a series known as 'Enrolments of Public Accounts (Exchequer Q. R.)'. Thence it was forwarded to the office of the Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer, where a brief abstract of it was entered among the 'States and Views of Public Accounts'. Finally it was forwarded to the Clerk of the Pipe, who, until the practice was abolished, enrolled an abridgment of it, and retained the original. Thus the Audit Office series should consist of documents on paper, and the Pipe Office series should consist of duplicates on parchment. In some cases, however, accounts on parchment have found their way into the Audit Office" (preface to List and Index of the Declared Accounts from the Pipe Office and Audit Office (1893). Also D. K. Rept. 55, 16-17).

The following statement from P. R. O., Chatham Papers, 231, shows the practice at the end of the colonial period.

"Every person receiving public money passes an account for the same before the proper auditors. In ordinary accounts, after having passed the examination of the auditor and been signed by him, the account is presented to the Chancellor of the Exchequer for declaration. In extraordinary accounts, a state of the charge and discharge, together with such articles as may not be regularly vouched, and cravings for fees or otherwise, with the auditor's observations thereon, is previously laid before the Treasury Board; the Lords allowing those articles in whole, or in part as they think fit, and a warrant is granted to the auditors, authorizing them to state the account for declaration accordingly.

"The chancellor usually appoints two days in a year for the declaration of Public Accounts, one at Midsummer, the other at Christmas; tho' other days are sometimes appointed for particular accounts."

Except for the receipts from customs, the accounts here listed are entirely of monies issued out of the British Exchequer. That the Treasury intended the royal revenues from the colonies to be similarly declared is clear from the instructions issued in 1703. Godolphin ordered that all accounts of Her Majesty's revenues in the plantations should be kept more systematically than before, and should be properly prepared for declaration every year by the auditor general, at that time Blathwayt. The deputy auditors in the colonies were to put their accounts into suitable form for declaration, have them examined before the governor and council, sworn to by an accountant, in this case the collectors and receivers general in the colonies, attested by the governors, and signed by themselves. The colonial deputies were furthermore instructed to give an authority or letter of attorney to an agent in England in order to procure their quietus. Should any deputy auditor fail in his duty he was liable to a process issued out against him to compel him to obey the Treasury's orders.

Blathwayt made strenuous efforts to have these instructions carried out, and his own books and the minutes of the Treasury show that his accounts were more or less regularly declared. But his successors, Walpole and Cholmondeley, seem to have neglected this part of their duties, if we may judge from the absence of such accounts in this series or elsewhere. No declaration of royal receipts from America is to be found among these papers.

For a statement of the fees taken at the Exchequer when an account was declared see Treas. 1: 337. 83-84. The Declared Accounts, with other similar papers, were removed to the Public Record Office in 1859.

In the following lists selected rolls are described in full; others are entered by title only.

Inasmuch as all parchment rolls of date later than 1714 that duplicate the paper rolls of the Audit Office have been transferred to the Bodleian Library, the Pipe Office rolls in the Public Record Office are but few in number as compared with those of the Audit Office. In the printed list they are entered by rolls only, 1-3816, while the Audit Office rolls are entered by bundles, 1-2541, within which are the rolls, separately numbered. Therefore, when a given subject covers more than one roll, the numbering is continued through the series of rolls, thus: "Indians", bundle 1530, rolls 1-6; 1531, rolls 7-11. To obtain an Audit Office roll both bundle number and roll number must be given; for a Pipe Office roll the roll number is sufficient, as follows:

AUDIT OFFICE, DECLARED ACCOUNTS.

Bundle. Roll.

12. 34. The declaration of the account of Richard, Lord Viscount Howe, one of the Commissioners for Restoring Peace in North America, from Apr. 30, 1777, to June 6, 1778. Contingent expenses chiefly.

ARMY.

PAYMASTERS-GENERAL.

66-92. 84-123. The declared accounts of W. Pitt, H. Fox, Richard Rigby, Edmund Burke, Isaac Barré, and others who were paymasters-general of the forces from 1746 to 1783. These accounts fill forty rolls in all and contain items of importance for the financial history of the various wars in America.

COMMISSARY OF ACCOUNTS.

113. 191. The Declaration of the Account of Samuel Bean, Esquire, as Commissary of Accounts and Commissary of Musters to the Southern Army in North America, Dec. 15, 1781, to Sept. 30, 1783, of the money by him received of the Paymaster-General of His Majesty's forces by the hands of the Deputy Paymaster in South Carolina, and of the expenditure thereof for the pay of Clerks, Office Rent, sundry necessaries for the use of the Spanish sick officers at Charlestown, and other expenses in the Commissary of Accounts and Musters Department. See also "Commissariat, Abroad", 493-496, rolls 97-106.

BARRACK-MASTERS (ABROAD).

147. 355. The Declaration of the Account of Lieut.-Gen. James Robertson, Barrack-master General in North America, from May 1, 1765, to June 30, 1776, of the money by him received of the Paymaster-General and of the expenditure thereof, purchasing barrack furniture, wood, candles, repairs at the several ports by warrant of Maj.-Gen. Gage, fuel, candles, rent of houses, supplying officers and soldiers with lodgings.

Bills were drawn on Gen. Robertson by commanding officers and barrack-masters at Fort Pitt, Pensacola, Newfoundland, and other forts in Canada and Florida. The accounts contain some interesting details but in general are rather juiceless. At the end is, “Barrack expenses at the several Posts: Quebec, Three Rivers, Montreal, Oswegatchie, Michilimakinac, Fort George, Halifax, Mobile, Pensacola, St. Augustine, Fort Chartres, Crown Point, Fort Frederic, Fort Pitt, New York, Boston, Boston (Castle William), Providence”. Then follows an abstract of each year's expenses.

The arrangement of the accounts is quite different from that noted above, but the items given are about the same.

357. Id., R. Murray, deputy, Quebec. 1776-1779.

358. Id., D. Brehm, deputy, Quebec. 1779-1783.

BRIDGE-MASTERS.

157. 410. Declaration of the Account of money paid for the salaries and wages of the several persons in the Bridgemaster’s department, by Robert Fenwick, Bridgemaster in North America, together with an account of money received from the Paymaster-General from Sept. 26, 1776, to Mar. 31, 1779.

The account covers:
- Salaries to bridge-master, assistant bridge-master, sergeants.
- Wages to carpenters, boatmen, sawyers, pontoonmen.
- Expenses for pontoons, planks, cordage, anchors, canvas, foraging bags, scantling, white paint, paint brushes, hammers.
- Rents of various kinds.

The lists of expenses are more elaborate than in the previous case, including in addition to those given above such items as bar-iron, hinges, files, padlocks, chest handles, small cables, pitch, calking-irons, chains, staples, hooks, anchors, ring bolts, stanchions, staples, and “Scaw for the use of the Ferry over Herlean Creek”.

COMMANDERS-IN-CHIEF, MILITARY GOVERNORS, ETC.

162. 441. Declaration of the Account of James Ogilthorpe, Esq., Genl. and Commander-in-Chief of his Majesty’s forces employed and to be employed in the Province of South Carolina and Georgia in America, from Sept. 22, 1738, to Michaelmas, 1743.

This account covers:
- Expenses of stores, provisions, arms, ammunition, and other necessities of war.
Presents to the Indians.
Pay of rangers or cattle hunters, Highland Independent Company.
Wages of boatmen.
Hire of sloops and other vessels.
Charges of garrisons and fortifications.
Cost of building barracks and other military works.
Subsistence of sick and wounded, prisoners of war, etc.
Charges for letters of intelligence.
It is of value for its detailed exactness, both as to items and dates, and to the movements of individuals and troops.

454. Id., Enoch Storey, various disbursements, chiefly for clerk hire and stationery, pursuant to the directions of the commander-in-chief, Sir William Howe. 1777.
455. Declaration of the account of John Smith, secretary and paymaster to Gen. Sir Henry Clinton, of the money received of the paymaster-general, from May 25, 1778, to June 30, 1782, and sundry contingent disbursements in the secretary’s office.

Many interesting items in addition to those covering contingent expenses, such as:
Cost of a “map of the road in the country between the Delaware and the Susquehanna, delivered in June, 1778.” Charges “for extraordinary duty and trouble in going to Virginia with clothing for the army of the Convention”.
“Geo. Wallaner, a refugee from Baltimore, for an allowance to enable him to subsist at £50 per ann.”
Pay for Maj. John André, deputy adjutant-general, for certain sercices, etc.

Contains a few interesting details, such as £5 Halifax money equivalent to £4 13s. 4d. stg.; but chiefly concerns stationery, etc.

166. 458. Id., Lieut.-Col. Fringle, commanding officer at Newfoundland. 1778-1782.
462. Id., Lieut.-Col. Clarke, commander in Georgia and East Florida. 1780-1782.

463. Id., Lieut. Haldane, secretary and aide-de-camp to Lieut.-Gen. Cornwallis, commander in North and South Carolina and Virginia. 1780-1781.

465. Id., Lieut.-Col. Pringle, commanding officer at Newfoundland. 1780-1782.

468. Id., Maj. Lewis, commandant of the Provincial Regiment of Jamaica Rangers. 1783.

168. 469. Id., Lieut.-Col. Huddlestone, commandant at St. John's, Newfoundland. 1783-1786.

CONTRACTORS, PURVEYORS, ETC. (ABROAD).

189. 585. Id., Thomas Revell, contractor for victualling the regiment of foot under the command of Gen. James Oglethorpe, in the province of Georgia. 1738-1744. Brief but valuable.

190. 590-591. Id., Halifax (1750-1760), St. John's, Newfoundland (1752-1760).

592. Id., John Thomlinson and John Hanbury of London, merchants, contractors for providing money for the subsistence and payment of the land forces sent from Great Britain and Ireland to Virginia and other parts of North America, and for such other forces as may be raised there for the service of the expedition under the command of Maj.-Gen. Braddock, according to the terms and conditions of their contract with the Treasury, dated Dec. 29, 1754. Which said accountants do yield and make this their account of all the monies received and had from the respective paymasters-general of his Majesty's forces between Dec. 24, 1754, and May 27, 1757, and of their investing the same in the purchasing Spanish milled dollars and other Spanish coined silver and Spanish and Portuguese coined gold either in England or in the colonies and shipping the same to North America, and for their commission, brokerage in purchasing gold and silver consigned to America, for insurance, freight, and sundry other disbursements. This account covers also the valuations, by what vessels shipped, and to whom consigned.

592-594. Id., contractors for remitting money for the forces in North America: Thomlinson and Hanbury (1754-1765), Fludyer and J. Drummond (1767-1769).

191. 595-597. Id., Harley and J. Drummond (1769-1770, 1770-1778), Harley and H. Drummond (1770-1778).

192. 601. Id., J. Colebrooke and Nesbit, contractors for remitting money to the garrison at Louisburg. 1759-1767.

193. 605. Id., J. Kennion, victuals for the expedition against Havana.

606. Id., A. Bacon, victuals for Tobago, Dominica, and St. Vincent. 1764-1770.

607. Id., Cuming and Mason, victuals for East Florida. 1764-1776.

608. Id., Major and Henniker, victuals for West Florida. 1765-1767.

194. 609-610. Id., E. Codrington, victuals for West Florida. 1767-1775.

611. Id., E. Lewis, contractor for remitting money for the garrisons of Pensacola and Mobile. 1767-1781.

612. Id., Stephenson and Blackburn, victuals for West Florida. 1775-1778.

613. Id., Mason and Jones, victuals for East Florida. 1776-1778.

615. Id., Stephenson and Blackburn, victuals for West Florida. 1781.

624. Id., J. Durand, victuals for the “Ceded Islands” in the West Indies. 1770.

197. 627-631. Id., various purveyors of rum and victuals for North America. 1776-1777. As for example:

631. Declaration of the Account of Anthony Bacon, Esq., of the money by him received of a late Paymaster General of the forces pursuant to warrants under the royal sign manual, and of sundry quantities and species of provisions by him delivered into store for the supply of a body of his Majesty’s forces serving in North America pursuant to five contracts with the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty’s Treasury dated, etc., 1780.

From this and other similar accounts it is possible to determine the price and character of the provisions furnished, the allowance per capita to a given number of soldiers for a given length of time, together with (in some instances) the procedure employed in conveying the provisions to America, and the various fees and allowances. Rum from St. Vincent, Grenada, Tobago, and elsewhere bulk large in these accounts.

198. 632-635. Id., various purveyors of rum and victuals for North America. 1776-1777. As for example:

633. The declaration of the account of Sir James Cockburn, contractor for delivering 100,000 gallons of rum for the use of the forces in North America.

The contract is dated May 2, 1776; the rum came from Grenada.

637. Id., Jacob Jordan, contractor for furnishing a carriage train for the service of the army under the command of Lieut.-Gen. Burgoyne in the year 1777.

Covering horses, carts, harness, and drivers. The declaration mentions 970 horses, 528 carts, 970 sets of harness, as having been taken or destroyed by the enemy. The contract is dated June 10, 1777.
638. Id., stores for North America. 1777.
200. 641-643. Id. 1778-1779.
644. Id., Harley and Drummond, contractors for remitting money for the forces in North America; also expenses of the forces in the West Indies. 1778-1781.¹

201. 646-649. Id., various contractors, victuals for North America and the West Indies. 1778-1782.
203. 654. Id., contractor for victuals for the Carolinas. 1781.
204. 655. Id., contractor for victuals for the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, Baltimore, and the Bahamas. 1781.
205. 656, 658. Id., various contractors for victuals for America and North America. 1781-1782.
207. 661. Id., Harley and Drummond, contractors for remitting money for the forces in North America. 1782-1783.
208. 668. Id., purveyors of victuals for South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida. 1782.
211. 676, 677. Id., various purveyors of victuals for the West Indies.
212. 679, 680. Id., various purveyors of victuals for the West Indies.
213. 681-685. Leeward Islands, Jamaica, West Indies in general, roll 684 including also Nova Scotia.

EXPEDITIONS.

217. 730. Declaration of the account of J. Arnott, paymaster of the forces on the expedition to Canada in 1711.
731. Id., D. Campbell, commissary on the expedition to the West Indies. 1749.
218. 734. Id., Lieut.-Col. J. Hale, secretary to the Earl of Albemarle, commander-in-chief of the expedition against Havana in 1762.
736. Id., Col. Foster, commander of the expedition to the Cedres. Bills of exchange drawn for the same, and for the government at Oswagatchie in North America. 1776.
219. 737. Id., Col. Barry St. Leger, commander of an expedition against Fort Stanwix, of the money by him received from the Paymaster-General of his Majesty’s forces by the hand of the Deputy Paymaster of Quebec and of the issue and expenditure thereof for the pay of the military artificers, guides, batteau-men, conductors, horses, wagons, fresh beef and sundry contingent expenses, also for stands of arms and for cattle lost or destroyed. 1777.

¹ The contract with Harley and Drummond was made June 17, 1778, and expired June 17, 1783. The specie thus remitted was sent in ships of war, without insurance, and for the carriage the commanders of the ships were allowed one per cent. freight. (See below, p. 247.)

Gives equivalents of colonial currency in sterling.

738. Id., Sir Archibald Campbell, of the money received and expended in commanding an expedition against the province of Georgia. 1778-1779.

Many interesting details, including such items as “gratuities to distressed Loyalists”.

739. Id., J. Christie, commissary-general on the expedition in the West Indies. 1778-1779.

740-741. Id., Capt. Goldfrap, secretary to Maj.-Gen. Grant, commander-in-chief on the expedition to the West Indies, 1779; also money for secret service.

PAYMASTERS AND TREASURERS OF THE FORCES, ETC.

These rolls, small at first but of great size during the period of the Revolution, contain the allowances made to the deputy paymasters in America for salaries and expenditures there, from 1700 to 1783. The pay and allowance lists include inspectors-general, superintendents of hospitals, deputy commissaries, superintendents of forage, quartermasters-general, and colonial governors; the expenditures include the pay and entertainment of officers and privates of the regiments, and chaplains and surgeons of the garrisons; cost of provisions for the garrisons in Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, and elsewhere, of trains of horses and wagons, of mustering foreign troops (in Germany for service in America), of postage, stationery, etc.

In the early rolls we find the expenses of the few troops in America, at New York, Newfoundland, and New England; these expenses in constantly increasing bulk can be traced through the campaigns of 1745-1748, 1754-1763, and 1775-1783, covering all general items and allowances and furnishing the names of every official—general staff, military officers, officers of hospitals, etc.—in the pay and service of the British government. The rolls furnish many valuable bits of information regarding dates, movements of officers, messengers, and envoys, number of dead (killed in battle), sick and wounded, and other matters in connection with which indebtedness was incurred. The accounts are, of course, strictly military and have nothing to do with naval matters, convoys, or customs, except incidentally. A more particular account of a selected number of rolls is given below.

312. 1236. Declaration of the account of Gov. Stapleton of the Leeward Islands. 1672-1686.

316. 1257. Id., T. Fotherby, paymaster of troops, commissary-general of provisions and stores of war, and deputy judge advocate on an expedition to the West Indies. 1692.

1286. Id., T. Dunn, Quebec. 1775-1784.

325. 1287. Id., Robert Mackenzie, Paymaster-General of the Provincial Forces raised for his Majesty’s service in North America, to which office he was appointed by Commission from Gen. Sir William Howe, K. B., Commander-in-Chief there, bearing date, Aug. 14, 1776, of the monies by him received of the Paymaster General of the forces by the hands of his deputies in North America. 1776-1782.

1288. The British Legion, Volunteers of Ireland, Garrison Battalion, Bucks County Light Dragoons, Diemer’s Troop of Hussars (mention of Chaplain Seabury receiving £20 for 60 days’ service), the Bateaux Company, Royal Georgia Volunteers, Gov. Wentworth’s Volunteers, the Nassau Blues, South Carolina Royalists, Georgia Light Dragoons, Georgia Loyalists, Rogers’s Rangers, the United Corps of Pennsylvania and Maryland, West Florida Foresters, Carolina Dragoons, Stewart’s Dragoons, the Light Infantry Company, Wilmington Light Dragoons, North Carolina Highlanders, North Carolina Independent Company, Loyal Foresters, and several special companies. See below, pp. 302-303.

The data furnished regarding these provincial companies, though varying in the different instances, generally consist of names of commanding officers, periods of service, and pay of special officers and the rank and file. 1776-1782.

1289. Id., John Macomb, Paymaster of the Provincial Forces with Gen. Burgoyne, of the monies by him received in pursuance of warrants of the said general and of the expenditure thereof. 1777-1778. Of little importance.

1290. Id., Maj.-Gen. J. Campbell, expenses in West Florida, and pay of the staff of the late garrison at Pensacola.

326. 1291. Id., Robert Grey as deputy paymaster and paymaster successively to the militia and distressed refugees in South Carolina in 1781 and 1782.

The account furnishes no names, simply recording payments “To Sundry Refugees”, and to the militia.

1292. Id., J. P. Collins, Charleston. 1781-1782.

This account is much more valuable than the last because it gives the names of individual refugees from South Carolina—Col. Thomas Fletchall, William Elfe, John Doak, Capt. Paris, John Gibson, Mary Crowther, widow of a distressed refugee, etc.
1293. Id., Capt. Charles Handfield, appointed paymaster to men of absent corps by order of his Excellency Sir Henry Clinton [ ... of monies issued and disbursed] to sundry soldiers drafted from the Convention army, being the intermediate pay due them from the days they were settled with by their former regiments to the days they commenced pay in the corps to which they were drafted and for Bounty Money to sundry soldiers who had been prisoners with the rebels and made their escape into New York. Jan. 1, 1782–Dec. 24, 1783. Of little value.

1294. Id., Thomas Aston Coffin of the Money by him received of the Paymaster-General of his Majesty's Forces and of the expenditure thereof as storekeeper at New York, Feb. 1–24, 1783, and as paymaster of contingencies and extraordinaries not payable by the Deputy Paymaster-General at the same place, Feb. 25–Dec. 5, 1783. Also at Halifax, Dec., 1783–Apr. 24, 1784. This account contains many interesting items—payments to refugees, allowances for widows of provincial officers, allowances to distressed Loyalists, as well as salaries, etc., paid in course.

327. 1298. Id., Col. Edward Winslow as Deputy Paymaster of Contingencies for New Brunswick, between Oct. 19, 1785, and Nov. 9, 1787; and as Muster-Master-General of the forces in North America from Aug. 1, 1776, to Aug. 24, 1777, of the money by him received of the Paymaster-General of the forces and of the issue and expenditure thereof for his pay for mustering the loyalists in New Brunswick, for pay to officers, artificers, and laborers, and for expenses incurred in the engineer and barrack departments, for pay to clerks, storekeepers, and others employed in the commissariat for freight, wood, cartage, etc. The account is very detailed.

INSPECTOR OF PROVINCIAL FORCES.

335. 1338. Declaration of the account of Lieut.-Col. A. James, inspector of provincial forces. 1777-1782.

QUARMASTERS.

1339-1342. Declaration of the accounts of Lieut.-Col. Bradstreet (1756-1766), Lieut.-Col. Robertson (1757-1765), and Lieut. T. Gamble (1765-1773), North America, and of Lieut.-Col. Irving (1760-1765), Quebec.

336. 1343. Id., Maj. William Shirreff, Deputy Quartermaster-General of his Majesty's forces in North America, of the money by him received of the several deputy paymasters there in pursuance of warrants of Lieut.-Gen. Thomas Gage, Commander-in-Chief, and of the several sums of money by him issued and paid for freight of vessels, marching of troops, transporting of stores and provisions, payments to artificers and laborers and sundry other contingent disbursements. 1768-1773.

1345. Id., Maj. J. Maxwell, Montreal. 1770-1772.

1347. Id., Maj. T. Campbell, Canada. 1775-1779.
1351. Id., Col. T. Carleton, Canada. 1778-1782.
1352. Id., Lieut.-Gen. S. Fraser, North America. 1779-1782.
1354. Id.. 1780.
1356. Id., Capt. A. Durnford, Georgia and East Florida. 1780-1783.
339. 1359-1360. Id., Lieut.-Col. Moneypenny, expedition to Martinique and Havana. 1762-1763.
1361-1362. Id., various quartermasters in the West Indies. 1779-1784.

CANADA AND NOVA SCOTIA.

376. 1. Declared account of Col. A. S. De Peyster of expenses incurred in the public service at the upper posts of Canada. 1775-1784.
2. Id., Sir J. H. Craig, public expenditure at Halifax. 1779.

CLAIMS FOR COMPENSATION, ETC.

458. 1. Declaration of the Account of John Thomlinson and John Hanbury, merchants of London, of the sum impressed on them out of the Receipt of his Majesty's Exchequer by virtue of a warrant under the royal sign manual dated March 3, 1756. Which sum was granted to his Majesty pursuant to a resolution of the Hon. House of Commons out of the supplies for the year 1756 to be distributed to the colonies of New England, New York, and New Jersey in such proportion as his Majesty should think fit, as a free gift and reward for their past services and an encouragement to them to continue to exert themselves with vigor in defense of his Majesty's just rights and possessions. Which said accountants do yield and make this their account of the said sum of money by them received as aforesaid and of the payment of the same into the hands of the governors of the said colonies in the several proportions and agreeable to the directions mentioned in the said warrant. This account gives in exact detail the sums paid to the northern colonies for the expenses incurred by them in the expedition of 1756, of which one may find a full discussion in C. O. 323 and C. O. 391, in volumes of that date.
4. Id., J. Forster, secretary to the commissioners appointed to inquire into the claims of American Loyalists, 1783-1785, based upon their losses and services in consequence of their attachment to the British government.
5. Id.. 1785-1791.
   These accounts contain little of importance regarding the Loyalists.

466. 47. Account of the payment of demands of American claimants of ships and cargoes captured at Martinique by the forces under Sir John Jervis and Sir Charles Grey. 1794.

467. 52. Account of the secretary to the commissioners appointed for distributing the money to be paid to the United States as claims for compensation. 1802-1804.

COMMISSARIAT (ABROAD).

493. 97. Declaration of the account of Daniel Chamier, commissary-general in North America. 1774-1777.

494. 98. Id., Joshua Loring, Commissary-General of the Prisoners in North America, of the money by him received of the Paymaster-General of his Majesty’s forces and of his issuing and paying the same for sundry expenses as commissary-general between Aug. 27, 1776, and Sept. 30, 1782. And also an account of the money received for the subsistence of French prisoners between July 24 and Oct. 31, 1780.

This account contains a few interesting items regarding the quarters of the French prisoners on Long Island and elsewhere; and regarding the rebel prisoners taken at the battle of the Brandywine, with detail of their duties and employments and attempts to escape. Important for a study of the treatment of prisoners in the hands of the British. 1774-1783.

100. Id., Daniel Wier, Commissary-General in North America, of the money by him received of the Paymaster-General of his Majesty’s forces . . . and of the expenditure thereof for provisions, forage, vessel hire, rent of stores, cartage, pay of assistants, clerks, carpenters, cooperers, laborers, and repairs of magazines, etc. 1777-1782.

A very detailed list; among the items is a valuation of a number of vessels (names given) taken by the Americans.

102. Id., Maj.-Gen. Roy, commissary-general for the sale of stores remaining (after the march of the troops into winter quarters) in the camp magazines of the five campaigns of the late war in America. 1778-1782.

103. Id., F. W. Hecht, assistant commissary-general in North America. 1779-1786.

104. Id., P. Paumier, acting commissary-general in North America. 1783-1783.

105. Id., Brook Watson, commissary-general in North America (from Nova Scotia to West Florida). 1782.

496. 106. Id., G. Brinley, deputy commissary-general in North America. 1783.
514. 192. Id., J. Fraser, commissary of captures in South Carolina. 1780.
193. Id., Stedman and Boote, commissaries of captures in North and South Carolina and Virginia. 1780-1782.
579. 514. Id., M. Forster, commissary-general in the Leeward and Caribbe Islands. 1780-1782.

CUSTOMS.

FARMERS, COMMISSIONERS, AND COMPTROLLERS GENERAL (VARIOUS).

This series of 791 rolls contains very little of importance for colonial trade. 607, 65, is "Money recd for the Navigation Duty", 1660-1662; 607, 67, is "The Declared Account of the Farm of Logwood or Blockwood for twenty years, imported into England, Wales, or Berwick on Tweed", 1662; 607, 68, contains an elaborate introductory statement of the nature of the farm (cf. Treas. 64: 137 for a copy of an agreement for farming the revenues); 611, 93, 612, 98, are separate accounts of the tobacco receipts, but as these receipts are combined with the sugar receipts and are given in lump sums they are of little use. The first separate account of tobacco receipts is 644, 244, 1714-1715, but is likewise of no value in determining the colonial output. More important than these rolls in the Audit Office series are those from the Pipe Office, entitled "Farmers of Duties on Tobacco", 667-672, 1632-1639, and "Collectors of New Impositions on Tobacco", 911-917, 1615-1628. Though these rolls cover but a brief period of time they are of considerable value, and the use to which they can be put can be seen in Beer's Origins of British Colonial System, pp. 87, 109, 110, 112, 117, 126, 127, 134, 141, 147, 148, 160, 168, 170, 171.

RECEIVERS GENERAL AND CASHIERS (VARIOUS).

Certain rolls of this series are of first importance for the history of colonial customs. Those containing the tobacco and sugar accounts (separated after 1698), and those containing the coinage, wine and vinegar, and silks, linen, and calicoes accounts furnish nothing of value. From the early rolls (described below) we learn that Michael Wicks was the first receiver of the duty on plantation goods ("Tobacco and other Merchandize from the Plantations") and of the duty on wine and vinegar. The most important rolls are those containing the general accounts of the customs, which begin (for our purpose) with 759, 808. These rolls, often bulky and frequently in bad condition, contain the full customs establishment for England and the plantations, and record the amounts of receipts, allowances, salaries, and sometimes money remaining in the hands of the collector. A complete list of all these entries beginning with 756, 792, 1671-1672, has been prepared, and is now to be found in the Library of Congress. It is desirable that some day this list should be printed.

The contents of the early rolls, as far as they concern the colonies, are as follows:

756. 792. Sept. 30, 1671–Sept. 29, 1672. Includes money accounted for by Michael Wicks, receiver of the duty and customs payable on goods brought from the plantations. Also his payments of half subsidy, additional duty, and abatement of x li. f. c. (ten pounds in the hundred) to those who paid ready money "in discharge of the new imposition layd upon linnen, Tobaccoes, or any other commodities imported from the said Plantations."
Audit Office

796. Sept. 30, 1672–Mar. 25, 1673. Money had of Wicks; salaries to Digges, surveyor for Virginia, Calvert, Maryland, Wicks, Elton, and watermen.

797. Mar. 26, 1673–Sept. 29, 1673. Id.

798. Sept. 29, 1673–Sept. 29, 1674. Items as in 792 and 795.

801. Sept. 30, 1674–Sept. 29, 1675. Money from Wicks, and from the collectors at Antigua and Barbadoes; salaries paid to Wicks, Elton, and to Shaw as collector of the Act of Navigation.

802. same dates. Money from Wicks; from the plantations remitted by the collectors ("though they have not transmitted account of particulars"), viz., Barbadoes and Antigua, payment by Wicks of half subsidy and additional duty, as in 792.

758. 803. Sept. 30, 1675–Sept. 29, 1676. Money from Wicks; from the collectors at Antigua, Barbadoes, Nevis, and Virginia.

804. Sept. 30, 1675–Sept. 29, 1676. Id., with the addition of salaries paid to Wicks, Elton, Shaw, and Molesworth, clerk for the plantation business.

807. June 24, 1677–Sept. 29, 1677. Money from Wicks; from Bridger, collector at Virginia.

The contents of the rolls from this time on (759, 808, to 829, 1086) may be briefly summarized. They contain the English and colonial establishments for all the ports, and enter the names of collectors, surveyors, riding surveyors of various kinds, searchers, tidesmen, waiters, weighing porters, and boatmen. On the English establishment will be found the names of those who had to do with the plantation receipts, such as, plantation and western clerk and (later) his assistant, husband of the four-and-a-half per cent.; surveyors of the Act of Navigation and attending watermen; and surveyor of the plantation trade in Ireland. The colonial establishment includes all the customs officials from Halifax to Barbadoes, from 1676-1677, to the close of the colonial period. For the establishment in America, 1767-1783, see Custom House, Registers, Series I., Establishments, 310-410, and the Custom House Establishment Books now in the Custom House, London, below pp. 118-119. For the years 1697, 1717, and 1720, see Treas. 38: 346-348, Treas. 42: 23, and for 1744, Brit. Mus. Add. MSS. 8831.

The colonial establishment begins in 1676-1677 with four collectors; in 1685 we find surveyors and collectors; in 1716, nine surveyors, one riding officer, one preventive officer, and collectors; in 1730-1731 appear two surveyors general, one for the northern and one for the southern part of America, and a comptroller in addition to the other officials; in 1761, surveyors general, surveyors and searchers, surveyors, comptrollers, collectors, and land-waiters; in 1763, the offices of collector, surveyor, and searcher, surveyor and searcher, and waiter and searcher are occasionally held by single men; in 1767, three surveyors general appear, one for the northern, one for the eastern middle, and one for the southern part of America. At this time boats and boatmen are included. With the names of the officials and the amounts of receipts, salaries, etc., are sometimes found additional information (as for extra charges and losses), incidental details of their experiences, and the names and charges of special officials. The receipts cover enumerated commodities or plantation duty, prize duties (from Jamaica), fines and forfeitures (Philadelphia), and duties from 6 George II. and 4 George III. (rum, sugar, etc.). Charges against both the four-and-a-half per cent. and the plantation duty will also be found. The customs officials received their authority from the Commissioners of the Customs and Treasury establishment warrants (see Treas. 11: 1-82), and we learn that in 1761 before receiving their pay, they were obliged to furnish certificates that they were “living at their respective times” (818, 1064), a suggestive commentary on previous practices.

COMPTROLLERS AND CASHIERS.

(West Indies and America.)

843. 1132. Declaration of the Account of the Duties and Impositions of the Four-and-a-half per cent. Duty, payable to his Majesty in the Island of Barbadoes and also in the Leeward Islands, vis.; Nevis, St. Christopher, Montserrat, and Antigua. 1684-1685.

1133. Id. 1684-1685.

1134, 1135. Declaration of the General Account of the Customs and other Duties in his Majesty’s plantations and provinces in America, exhibited by James Porter, Comptroller of the Customs, 1767-1777; containing an account of the customs and duties on sundry goods or merchandize imported into or carried from any of his Majesty’s colonies, plantations, or provinces lying or being on the Continent of America, from Davis Straits to the Capes of Florida, and islands and territories thereto belonging or adjoining, together with Bermuda and the Bahamas.

Roll 1135 carries the account from Jan. 5, 1777, to Apr. 5, 1786, but is much smaller than roll 1134 and much less complete. There is also charged in the general account (roll 1134) the money received by Charles Stewart, cashier and paymaster of the revenues of customs and other duties in America.

Porter was appointed by letters patent under the great seal, Sept. 11, 1767, and he calls his account “the first general account of these revenues”. It records the money received from the collectors of customs in the colonies, in pursuance of several acts of Parliament (25 Charles II., 6 George II., 4 George III., 6 George III., 7 George III.), by them received from duties on sundry goods imported, from seizures made by officers of the customs, and from pecuniary penalties imposed in the colonies. The account, which runs from Sept. 8, 1767, to Jan. 5, 1777, contains an enumeration by years, and the figures are given for every port of entry or clearance. These rolls are of great importance for the revenue history of the period and deserve careful attention.

844. 1136. Id. 1691-1697.

See also Pipe Office, 1249-1252, where will be found the accounts of the receiver general and cashier of the four-and-a-half per cent. for 1775-1797; 1254-1265, id., for 1670-1677, 1721-1748, 1765-1770. Also Audit Office, under “Receivers General and Cashiers (Various)”; 756-829. Other references are given below, p. 217.
1137. Id., Charles Stewart, Cashier and Paymaster of his Majesty's revenues of customs and other duties imposed by several acts of Parliament, etc., to which office he was appointed by letters patent under the great seal, Sept. 11, 1767.

The account shows the revenues received by Stewart or his agents from the several collectors within the years 1767-1776, and records his issuing and paying the same for salaries of the commissioners and other officers of the said customs, and for incidental charges attending the management thereof, and the money remitted to the receiver general.

1138. Id. to 1781.
1139. Id. to 1788.

These accounts are also of the utmost importance for the history of customs in America during the years named.

1140. Id., John Martin Leake, agent for the commissioners of his Majesty's customs in America, of the monies imprest to him to pay sundry contingent expenses in England respecting the said commission, Nov. 5, 1768, to Apr. 5, 1786.

Contains a few items of interest. Leake received the money from Stewart, and certain additional sums from Nuthall, solicitor of the Treasury, to reimburse money advanced and expenses incurred by the solicitor for the American Board of Customs on account of the appeal relative to the Mohegan Indians (£22), by the collector of Rhode Island to defray the expense of appeals from that colony (£430), and by the same in the case of Dudley vs. Clark and Nightingale, and of Dudley vs. Shaw (£310).

EMIGRANTS AND REFUGEES.

(PENSIONS AND ALLOWANCES TO.)

850. 1. The Declaration of the Accounts of Col. Robert Morris, Inspector of the claims of refugees in North America, of the money by him received of the Paymaster-General of the Forces by the hands of their deputies abroad. Jan. 1, 1779–Mar. 31, 1783.

Contains no names; merely a record of the money, £23,848, paid for allowances.

ENQUIRY COMMISSION.

GOVERNORS, AGENTS, ETC.

1255. 100. Declaration of the account of Gov. Knowles of Cape Breton and the town and fortress of Louisburg. 1746-1747. See 1282, 314.
1259. 139. Id., Josiah Martin, Governor of North Carolina, of money received from the Paymaster-General of his Majesty's Forces, by the hands of the deputy paymaster there . . . and of the expenditure thereof in disbursements for necessities to distressed refugees and other expenses in North Carolina; as also for the pay and subsistence of several officers and soldiers in a corps of provincial forces raised in North Carolina pursuant to authority, from January 10, 1776, to October 24, 1779.

£300 were spent to supply the necessities "of divers persons well affected to the government who have been obliged by the persecution of the rebels to take refuge on board the shipping in Cape Fear River"; also other items regarding prisoners and provincial officers, medicine, attendance, provisions, etc. The names of individuals are given and a large amount of detailed information of interest for North Carolina. 1776-1779.

140. Id., Gov. Melville of St. Vincent, Dominica, Grenada, and Tobago. 1765-1772.

Roll 147 contains Moultrie’s account of the expense of building the state house at St. Augustine (£3283 19s. 2½d.) and the costs incurred in making roads in East Florida. Roll 148 contains an account of contingent and extraordinary expenses, in which the object of the expenditure is stated. Alexander Skinner was the keeper of "Indian presents" and many unitemized entries of such presents may be found. This roll furnishes an elaborate and interesting account, in form different from the usual declaration. Roll 149 mentions money spent for presents and for the expenses of the Indian congress. Roll 150 mentions the salary of William Gerard de Brahm as £150 a year with £30 for an assistant. Roll 151 is valuable for the names and official titles given; it shows that Florida was not actually handed back to Spain until 1786.

Roll 152 covers presents to the Indians, sundry expenses in settling the various trade treaties, in determining boundary lines of possession with the various tribes of Indians surrounding West Florida, and for attending congresses held with the Choctaw, Chickasaw, Cusatee, and all the Creek Indians. The items furnish many interesting details, including references to congresses with the Indians and other forms of intercourse. Roll 153 mentions a congress held at Pensacola with the Creeks, May 24–June 7, 1765. Roll 154 contains an account of money received and expended for the "Distrest Greek Settlement at Smyrna in East Florida", 1769-1770. Total £2000, spent for provisions, tools, implements, and necessaries. Andrew Turnbull had the matter in charge. In all these rolls are references to Elias Durnford. Roll 155 (in bundle 1261 not in 1262 as List says) contains interesting items of expense, many details with dates of payments for the Indian Department.

1262. 156-159. Id., Agents Ellis and Leake.
1263. 162-170. Id., Georgia, Agents B. Martyn, C. Garth, J. Campbell, J. B. West. 1752-1783. For example:

162. Declaration of the Account of Benjamin Martyn, Esq. Agent on behalf of the Publick for the Colony of Georgia in America, to which office he was appointed by warrant under his Majesty’soyal sign manual, dated February 14, 1753, of money imprinted to him out of the Receipt of his Majesty’s Exchequer for the use of the said colony and of his issuing and paying the same for salaries and incident charges paid by the President and Assistants of said colony in Georgia; as also for the charges attending the silk culture and other disbursements and allowances from the surrender of the Charter by the late Trustees, etc. 1752-1773.
This account records not only the financial history of the colony but also its official organization; among the items are such as these:
“for cleaning the council room”, “for medicine and provisions and necessaries for sick people and Indians”, “for wine supplied on rejoicing days and for firing the cannon and other disbursements”, “for gunpowder, paint, and other goods for presents to the Indians”. The entries contain considerable information regarding the culture of silk, and mention is made of parcels of raw Georgia silk sold at public auction in London. This series of Georgia accounts extends to 1783.

1273. 242. Id., Lieut.-Gen. Keppel, governor and commander-in-chief of Havana. 1762-1763.

1274. 248A-253. Id., various accounts relating to Jamaica. 1661-1675.
Rolls 248A, 248E, 249, contain statements of Sir James Draxe and Thomas Povey, members of the Council for Plantations, and of the committee appointed on the affairs of Jamaica and New England, as to certain expenditures for brandy and the maintenance of ministers incurred in behalf of that island. The other rolls contain declarations by Governors Windsor, Lyttelton, Modyford, and Lynch of various charges and expenses.

1275. 254-256. Id., Gov. Keith of Jamaica, Lieut.-Gen. Dalling, governor and commander-in-chief, Gen. A. Campbell, governor and commander-in-chief. 1774-1784.

1295. 432. Id., John Wentworth, governor of New Hampshire, of the money received for the value of bills drawn by him on the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, which were paid at the Bank of England; also for money received at the Treasury by Paul Wentworth, for his use, and of the several sums of money by him issued and paid for the support of himself and family, and to aid and succour sundry refugees, etc.; for the hire of a vessel for their passage from Boston to Halifax and New York; for sundry stores and necessary, etc. 1775-1777.

From the record it would appear that Gov. Wentworth did not hesitate to charge the British government with whatever he wanted in the way of luxuries—wine, walnuts, rum, porter, etc.

1300. 473. Id., Maj.-Gen. W. Tryon, Captain General and Governor of New York, also late Gov. of North Carolina, of the money (received Nov. 26, 1776-Apr. 26, 1779) and of disbursements between Jan.
19, 1775 (“the time the Rebellion broke out in those Parts”) and Mar. 22, 1780 (“when he was superseded in the said government”), including extra services and expenditures occasioned by the said Rebellion, and his loss by fire when the governor’s house at Fort George was destroyed.
Every item in this account is of interest and value.

1301. 482-483. Id., Agents Kilby (1749-1758) and Cumberland (1758-1785) of Nova Scotia.

626. Id., Robert Dinwiddie, late Lieut.-Governor of Virginia, for the sum impressed to him by the Paymaster General of his Majesty's Forces . . . and the application thereof for defraying the charges and expenses for clothing, provisions, and necessaries supplied the independent companies of several provinces, employed in the expedition to the Ohio, for presents made to the different tribes of Indians, for the charge in building a fort in the Cherokee Nation, etc. 1755.

This roll contains the expense account of the Braddock expedition, rendered by Gov. Dinwiddie. It shows the character of the equipment and the expenses en route.

627. Id., The Right Hon. John, Earl of Dunmore, governor of Virginia, of the money received from the Paymaster General of his Majesty's Forces . . . and of the expenditure thereof in raising several regiments in North America, between Nov. 1, 1775, and May 2, 1777, including bounty money to recruits.

This account mentions the Ethiopian Regiment, Queen's Own Loyal Virginia Regiment, Troop of Light Horse; and among the many items has the following: "This accountant for keeping open table for the officers of the army and navy and for persons coming for protection or on business on board the fleet in Virginia, £861."

HANAPER.

KEEPER OR CLERKS.

The accounts of the clerks of the Hanaper, extending from 1665 to 1783, are in bundles 1363-1412 of the Audit Office series, and in rolls 1640-1722, 1665-1715, of the Pipe Office series.

The clerk of the Hanaper received all the sixpences (23 George II., c. 25) due the crown for affixing the great seal upon charters, letters patent, commissions and writs. Either he or his deputy was obliged to attend the keeper of the great seal, usually the Lord Chancellor, every day in term time and at all times when the seal was to be affixed, with hampers in ancient times but later with leather bags, wherein were put all sealed charters, patents, etc., which were afterward delivered to the comptroller of the hamper. He paid a regular allowance to the Lord Chancellor for diet, liveries, robes, wax, wine, etc. One of his duties was to take account of all grants that passed the great seal and to register the same in his office (see Guide, I. 272, note 1). The name "Hanaper" arose from the custom of keeping the papers "in hanaperio". For payments from the Hanaper Office see Treas. I: 382, f. 194, and for the fees paid on passing a patent through the seals, id.: 340, ff. 42-52, 391, ff. 128-133. The office was abolished in 1845, 8-9 Victoria, c. 34.
The hanaper accounts are occasionally of value for colonial history. See, for example, the Report of the Connecticut Historical Society, 1899, pp. 17-20. They show the money received on sealing writs and commissions and on granting various kinds of patents. The names of persons in whose favor the patents were granted are given and historical notes are frequently added.

HOSPITALS AND INFIRMARIES.

1504. 206. Declaration of the account of J. Cathcart, director and purveyor of the hospital for the sick and wounded in the expedition to the West Indies under Lord Cathcart. 1740-1742.

1505. 211. Id., J. Cathcart, director and purveyor of the hospital for the sick and wounded in the expedition to North America under Lieut.-Gen. St. Clair. 1746-1747.

1506. 213. Id., J. Napier, director of the hospitals for the forces employed on an expedition to North America under Maj.-Gen. Braddock. Also inspector general of the regimental infirmaries and chief director of the hospitals there. 1755-1763.

217. Id., J. A. F. Hesse, appointed to issue money to several officers of hospitals in (among others) Jamaica, Guadeloupe, and Havana. 1758-1764.

1518. 261. Id., J. Mallet, purveyor to the hospitals in North America. 1775-1783.

263. Id., W. Barr. 1776-1784.

1519. 264. Id., Dr. G. Young, surgeon to the hospital in St. Vincent. 1777-1779.

265. Id., J. McNamara Hayes, physician to the hospital with the army in North America. 1777-1778.

266. Id., R. Roberts, director and purveyor to the hospital for prisoners in America. 1778-1779.

267. Id., Dr. J. Jeffries, purveyor to the hospitals at Halifax in Nova Scotia. 1778-1779.

268. Id., J. Stewart, Leeward Islands. 1782-1784.

1522. 278. Id., Andrew Turnbull, purveyor to the General Hospital in the West Indies. 1795-1798.

INDIANS (NORTH AMERICA).

1530. 1. Declaration of Account of Benjamin Martyn, Esq., late agent for the Province of Georgia in America . . . of money imprest to him by the Paymaster General of his Majesty's Forces, for purchasing of presents to be sent to the Indians bordering on the Province of Georgia, and of his issuing and expending the same to sundry tradesmen for goods, wares, and merchandize bought for presents sent to the said Indians and sundry expenses in the insuring of said goods and in the lading and carriage thereof, in the years 1755, 1756, 1758, 1760, 1761, 1763. This account gives detailed statement of the character of the presents, the value of which amounted to £9322.
2. Id., Sir John Johnson, legal representative of Sir William Johnson, Bart., later sole agent and Superintendent of Indian affairs in the northern district of North America, of the sum of £146,545 expended between the years 1755 and 1774. "Which said accountant stated to the Court of Exchequer the impossibility of rendering any vouchers in support thereof, his father's property and papers having been plundered and destroyed by the Rebels, owing to the active part which he took in favor of the British Government."

The items, which were allowed by the Exchequer, included salaries, expenses of negotiations with the Indians, presents, and contingent and incidental expenses. The destruction mentioned occurred when Johnson Hall in Tryon County, New York, was plundered and burned in May, 1776. The account contains no detailed statement of the nature of the presents, but is full of information regarding the working of the Department of Indian Affairs.

3. Id., John Pownall of £4000 expended in procuring presents for the Indians bordering on the colonies. 1756.

The presents were sent from London to New York and a long detailed list of them is here given. No particular Indian tribes are mentioned.

4. Id., James Wright, late agent of the province of South Carolina, of expenditure of £2000 for purchasing "an assortment of goods, such as should be thought proper by the Lords Commissioners of Trade and Plantations to be provided and consigned by him to the governor of the province of South Carolina and distributed as presents in order to preserve and strengthen the friendship of other Indians and for the more effectually establishing and securing the British power and dominion in the southern portion of North America". 1758.

Lists of articles sent, which differ somewhat from the presents mentioned in other lists.

5. Id., Col. Guy Johnson, late superintendent of Indian Affairs in the Northern District. 1774-1783.

This account contains no detailed lists of presents, but mentions in many instances the Indians to whom the presents were sent. It refers also to numerous expeditions and gives many important and interesting bits of information.

1531. 7. Id., Capt. Alexander Fraser, superintendent of Indian Affairs in the Northern District. 1776-1783.

Many interesting and peculiar items such as "a cow for a war feast, £5"; also information regarding Indians in the service of the British government.

8. Id., Daniel Claus, agent of the Indian Department of Six Nations in Canada from 1777 to 1802.

Such items as "Hogs for war feasts", pay of an Indian schoolmaster and clerk of the Indian church; reference to "Gen. Ross' Expedition to the Rebel Country".
9. Id., Lieut.-Col. Thomas Brown, as superintendent of Indian Affairs in the Atlantic Department of the Southern District of North America, of money received and spent for salaries of assistants, interpreters, and others, for rations, rum, and sundries. 1779-1784.

Interesting and valuable; references to presents, etc., chiefly for Creeks and Cherokees. For Johnstone's account, 1764-1767, see A. O. Accounts, Various, 126 (2).

10. Id., Lieut.-Col. John Graham, Superintendent of the Affairs of the Choctaws, Chickasaws, and other nations of Indians in the southern district of North America, lying on the Mississippi, 1782-1783.

Longer and fuller than the other rolls and of value, as are all the accounts, for a study of the British policy toward the Indians in America. Items concern salaries, presents, provisions, carriage, etc.

11. Id., John Douglass, of the money by him received and expended as Deputy Superintendent of Indian Affairs for the western division of the Southern District in North America. July 1, 1783-Dec. 31, 1784.

Deals with Choctaws and Chickasaws.

NAVY: PAYMASTER OF MARINES.

1827. 530. Declaration of the account of T. Dunn, Quebec. 1775-1786.

POLICE.

1949. 1. Declaration of Account of Andrew Elliot, Esq., Superintendent General of the Port and Police of New York, appointed by proclamation of Maj.-Gen. William Howe, of money received and of the issuing and expenditure of the same for salaries and sundry necessary disbursements, between July 18, 1777, and Nov. 1, 1782.

The disbursements covered printing proclamations, stationery, office furniture, repairs, etc. But no clear idea of the functions of the department in question can be obtained from this document.

2. Id., James Simpson, Intendant General of the Police of South Carolina and Secretary to the Commission to restore peace to the revolted colonies of North America, of money received and of the issue and expenditure thereof, for salaries, expressage, stationery, printing, etc.

Two items refer to the proclamations issued by the commissioners:

"For the use of the Rev. Mr. Leydecker for translating into the German language a long manifesto and Declaration, £21..15..6$";

"For the use of Mr. Sowers for translating the Declaration of the Commissioners into the German language, £6..10..8". There are also included Simpson's expenses in travelling as secretary of the commission from Georgia to New York and thence to South Carolina and back to New York.

SECRET SERVICE.

2122. 1, 2. Declaration of Account of Maj. Robert Mathews, as military secretary to Gen. Haldimand, of the money received by him from the Paymaster General through the deputy paymaster at Quebec, and of the expenditure thereof for sundry private and particular services, gratuities, procuring intelligence, fitting out Indian scouts, expresses, stationery, etc., from June 24, 1779, to Nov. 11, 1784.

The information furnished by these accounts is meagre. The fact is mentioned that the office of comissary of prisoners was discontinued in Dec., 1782.

3. Id., Maj.-Gen. Edward Mathews, of the money by him received of the Paymaster General, whilst on service in the West Indies, for pay, secret service or otherwise, from Oct. 26, 1781, to July 24, 1784, and from Oct. 20, 1787, to Dec. 24, 1792.

Of little importance. No suggestion as to the character of the secret service.

4. Id., Brevet Maj. George Beckwith, of the money received by him of the Paymaster General by the hands of the deputy paymaster at New York and of the expenditure thereof for secret services by order of his excellency Sir Guy Carleton, from July 19, 1782, to Nov. 18, 1783.

Total amount £4495; no mention of the character of the service.

SETTLERS IN NOVA SCOTIA.

2131. 1, 2. Declarations of the accounts of various persons charged with the business of settling emigrants in the colony of Nova Scotia; and of transporting foreign Protestants to the same colony in 1751, 1752, 1753. pursuant to an agreement with the Board of Trade.

Roll 1 is of no particular importance except for the subject in question; 2 is of considerable value.

STAMP DUTIES.

2192. 207. The Comptroller General's Declaration of the General Account of the several duties arising on stamped vellum, parchment, and paper in the British colonies and plantations in America, 1765.

This account is of great interest and value. It shows that the total amount received by the government for the stamped paper sent to America was £224,119 6s. 4d.; that of this sum the government paid to the three warehouse-keepers of stamped goods, who acted as intermediaries and took the paper from the government, £160-043 7s. 10½d., for salaries, incident charges, and allowances for stamps and goods returned from North America; and that there remained in the hands of distributors in America unaccounted for (destroyed ?), at the time the account was made up, goods and stamps to the value of £64,155 12s. 5¼d. The account further states that the government was enabled to sell damaged parchment paper returned from America to the amount of £1481. It contains also a complete list of all the colonial receivers of stamps with the arrears due in goods, money, or bonds, as, (Name) Jared Ingersoll, (Colony) Connecticut, (Amount) £1909 10s. 3½d., from Canada to the West Indies, including Florida.

TRADE.

2303. 1. The Declaration of the Account of William Popple for the sum of £450 by him received and laid out of the Receipt of Exchequer upon account to be by him expended and laid out for incidental charges relating to the Commission for Trade and Plantations; being in part an order for £1000 payable to him for that service, the tenour whereof ensueth [recital of warrants follows], and of the issuing and expending thereof between Mar. 25, 1696, and Mar. 25, 1701.

A few items of interest for the history of the Board of Trade and the establishment of the Plantation Office.

2. The Declaration of the Account of John Lock[e], secretary and treasurer for the late Council for Trade and Plantations, viz.: of the money by himself or his agents received and had (whereas his Majesty by his commission under the Great Seal bearing date 27 September, 1672, hath for the better carrying on of his service been pleased to grant to this council the yearly sum of £1000).

This account itemizes the expenses of the council during its period of service.

TRANSPORT SERVICE.

2305. 12. Declaration of the account of Atkinson and Roope for transporting troops from England to Spain and the West Indies. 1702-1703.

TREASURY SOLICITOR.

2311. 1-6. ) This long series of rolls beginning as early as 1657 con-2312-2337. 7-128. tinues in an almost unbroken sequence to 1827. Each roll is entered in the printed list by the name of the solicitor for the year, and the same name, as for example that of Joshua Sharpe, colonial agent and brother of Gov. Horatio Sharpe of Maryland, will be found recurring regularly for many years. The rolls before 1660 are of no importance for colonial history, but after that date they contain a great many references to colonial matters, particularly to the costs and charges attending suits and causes. The business of the treasury solicitor was to prosecute law-suits in the Exchequer Court and elsewhere. The expenses incurred, which are itemized in these rolls in detail, include the cost of searching records, drawing and carrying documents, attendance on the suit, fees to council and witnesses, obtaining information, employing messengers, passing patents, deeds, warrants, etc. The rolls vary considerably as to the amount of information furnished; they tend to grow more elaborate as they increase in number.

In order to show the character of the data given in these rolls of value for colonial history a few selected items are here printed:

2311. 5. “To several officers and other clerks for their fees in passing a patent under the Great Seal of England with several instructions thereby empowering Mr. Randolph to be Customer and Comptroller of his Mats Customs in New England.”

“To the Attorney Genl for perusal thereof . . . xliii sh iiiii d.”

“To the Master in Chancery for acknowledgement and enrolling thereof in Chancery . . . xxxv sh. vi d.”

1 There was another brother John Sharpe, who was also a solicitor and colonial agent. For Sharpe correspondence, see B. M. Add. MSS., Catal. Index, 1882-1887.
9. “For the charges and expenses in the prosecuting a quo warranto against the corporation of Massachusetts Bay in New England and for obtaining judgment and seizing the liberties thereof . . . £181.9.10.”
   “For charges in the proceedings made for avoyding the Lord Culpeper’s Commission as governor of Jamaica . . . £82.2.10.”
   “For charges upon a quo warranto against the Barrnudus Company a judgment being recovered and an exemplification sent over . . . £79.18.2.”

10. “Expenditure in the cause between Mr. Atty. Genl Plf. and Capt. Shales and others Defts, for receiving of money twice pd upon tallies struck on the Barbados revenue for pay of Col. Stapleton, kgt. etc.”
   “To Mr. Jowle for carrying on the prosecution against planters of tobacco in England, by order of the treasury.” July 30, 1684.

2313. 12. “In the cause between Mr. Culmer, Plt. and Mr Randall [Randolph] Def. for money due on the defendant’s bond, defended by order of their Lordships Comrns of the Treasury hee being in the King’s service in New England [three items] vi li xii s vi d.”
   “In the cause between Mr. Atty Genl, Plt. and Massachusetts Bay Defd., upon an information for several misdemeanors in the King’s Bench.”
   “To Councell for drawing the Informaçon and for a copy thereof and filing the same . . . lvi sh viii d.”
   “To the sheriffe for serving the processe and returns thereof . . . xxx sh.”
   “To Mr. Atty Genl and others of his Maj. Council for moving the Court that the Def. should appear . . . vii li xi sh viii d. And for drawing the Rule thereupon . . . vi sh viii d.”

16. “Proceedings on a quo warranto agt Connectucote Island to reserve them to obedience, viz:
   Ffor preparing Instruccons for a Quo Warro: and to the Sheriffe for his summons thereupon and to Mr Normandsell for returning a suumons on the Quo Warrto: and to Mr. Jones for moving the court for Judgmt thereupon . . . iii li xxl sh viii d.
   And for drawing the Rule for Judgmt and Letters to and from the Island etc. . . . xviii sh vi d (total . . . v li x sh ii d).” The account was from Mich. Term, 1686–Mich. Term, 1687. “Mr Jones” was “his Maties Councell”.

2315. 24. “For fees paid to the Atty Genl and his Clerks on his attending thrice on the Comrns of Trade by order of the Lords of the Treasury about the Conduct of Col. Fletcher, late govr of New York.”

25. “To Jno. Towers for ix cases, for ix commissions under the Great Seal of England for trying pyrantes in America . . . iii li xv sh.
   “And for sevll expenses about a pretended discovery of a treasure in England and about Pirates goods taken and sent from America
   . . . xx li xv sh vi d.
   “For the remaining part of £1218.5.6 by Sd Atty paid for ix commissions under the Great Seal of England directed to ix of his Maj. Governors in America for trying of pirates there, the charges of each commission coming to £79.16.2, for which the accountant hath produced no acquaintance" (1702).

2320. 45. "To John Watt in full of all claims and demands and in recompense to him for his service in the transportation of several families of Palatines to Germany."

"To John Grubb, Clerk of the Patents, for the fees and charges of passing at the several offices xxty commissions for pardons to Pyrates in the Plantations."

47. "Against the Proprietors of the Bahamas Is. to maintain the King’s Rights to the Civil and Military Governt there [fees in great detail] . . . lviii li xvii sh vi d."

"Against the proprietors of Carolina for abuse of their charter."

"The Attorney General for fees with a Brief and attending a Committee of the Council twice, as also with a draught of Scire Facias and for a Consultation xxxii sh xv d; Sergt Pengelly for perusing the Draught of the Scire Facias, viii sh, vii d. Edward Salter for fees for Council attending committees of the Privy Council at the Cock Pit, xxx sh; William Rook, Clerk of the Rolls Chapel for a copy of Carolina Charter, vi li iii sh ix d; and to the Atty Genl, the Solic. Genl, and Sergt Pengelly, their Clerks xxv sh vi d.‘ The total charges were £84 8s. 3d.

2328. 8½. “The Honble Charles Yorke, his Majesty’s Attorney Genl, for 17 Reports and Draughts prepared by him for the Lords of the Committee of the Council for Trade and Plantations (1767) . . . lxv li xv d."

WORKS AND FORTIFICATIONS.

2531. 662. The declaration of the account of Lieut.-Col. Harry Gordon, as engineer employed in building and repairing several forts and places in North America, from Aug. 18, 1756, to Nov. 26, 1761; and as chief engineer from Sept. 16, 1764, to Nov. 25, 1767.

Valuable as disclosing the activities and movements of this British engineer, who was constantly travelling westward and southward repairing forts, making discoveries, draughting maps, etc.

The money was spent in erecting and repairing forts and batteries, barracks, magazines, and other public works.

666. Id., Col. William Zwiss, comptroller of the works in Canada, July 1, 1776–June 30, 1778; and as commanding engineer in the same province, July 1, 1778–June 30, 1784.

669. Id., Capt. M. Pitts, commanding engineer at St. Lucia. 1778-1781.

672. Id., Capt. T. Hartcup, commanding engineer at Penobscot, 1779-1784; at Halifax, 1783.

673. Id., Lieut. C. Shipley, commanding engineer at St. Lucia, Antigua, and Grenada. 1781-1784.

Interesting as showing the method of distributing the money received.

2534. 675. Id., James Fraser, acting paymaster in the Engineer's Department at New York. June 1-Dec. 31, 1782.

Taken as a whole these rolls furnish little information of value.
LORD CHAMBERLAIN'S PAPERS.

On warrants issued by the Lord Chamberlain to the master of the Jewel House or Office, orders were given to the goldsmiths to make silver communion plate for use in the churches and chapels of the colonies. When completed, such plate was received from the goldsmiths into the Jewel House and a receipt given therefor. From the Jewel House it was handed over to the governor of the colony or to some one authorized to receive it, and transmitted to North America or the West Indies. In but few instances was it an outright gift. Generally it was a loan to the governor for the use of the chapel or church in the colony, designed to be handed on from governor to governor, or, on demand, or when no longer needed, returned to the Jewel House. In all such cases the plate remained the property of the crown.

The plate consisted of two flagons, one chalice, one or two patens, and a receiver or basin. Though the warrant generally limited the value to £80, the actual cost ranged from £56 to £87, and the weight from 180 to 205 oz. In the volumes noted below entries are made of plate loaned to the following colonies: East Florida, West Florida, Barbadoes, Jamaica, Bahamas, Dominica, Leeward Islands, St. Vincent, Bermuda, Quebec, Nova Scotia, St. John, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, New York, North Carolina, South Carolina, Gibraltar, Minorca, and Senegambia. Gifts are recorded to Christ Church, Boston, to the Indian chapels of the Mohawks and Onondagas, and to Trinity Church, New York. The plate to the Mohawk chapel was valued at £140 11s. 0d., and that for the chapel of the Onondagas at the same amount. In a few instances a marginal entry, "Returned into this office", appears in the delivery books; once or twice only part of the plate was returned, and in a few cases a newly commissioned governor found that the plate in the colony had disappeared altogether.

In the same volumes will be found entries of the receipt and delivery of silver plate to the various members of the peace commission sent to America in 1778 and of the peace commission of 1776 and 1779—the Howes, Clinton, Arbuthnot, Digby, Carleton, Eden, Carlisle, and Johnstone. This plate covered a great variety of table silver—knives, forks, spoons, dishes, tureens, covers, ladles, platters, sauceboats, vases, épergnes, coffee-pots, etc., and in each instance weighed 1200 oz. It is received for in the delivery books by each commissioner or his agent. In the same volumes are entries of collars of the Order of the Bath for Clinton, Carleton, Ligonier, and Rodney.

The Jewel Office was situated on the ground floor of the building in Whitehall north of Whitehall Court and northeast of the Banqueting Hall, in which were the Privy Seal and Privy Signet offices. The quarters were in bad condition, but the Jewel Office was still there in 1772, though the other offices had been removed in 1760. The silver itself was kept in the Jewel Office or House in the Tower, a dark, strong room to the eastward of the grand storehouse or new armory. For a plan of the room in the Tower see Treas. 1: 343. 74. The Jewel Office was in part suppressed in 1782, Treas. 1: 338.
The proper order of the volumes is, 1, Warrant Books, 2, Receipt Books, 3, Delivery Books.

WARRANT BOOKS.

601-608. 1618-1793. Entry Books of Warrants.

Issued by the Lord Chamberlain to the master of the Jewel House. No warrants for colonial plate appear in the first three volumes. Partly indexed.

RECEIPT BOOKS.

Contain entries of plate received from the goldsmiths with details and costs. The volumes are not indexed but marginal headings show the purposes for which the plate was received.

DELIVERY BOOKS.

440, 441, 610. 1700-1796. Delivery Books.

Vol. 440 is rather a day book of deliveries than a classified entry book and is of no importance here. 441 and 610 belong together and are filled with interesting entries of the nature recorded above. The entries furnish date of delivery, the particular pieces of plate, and the weight in ounces, but not the cost.
COMMISSARIAT PAPERS.

At first all supplies for the army were obtained by contract, but later a regular commissariat was established as a department of the Treasury. The head of this department was the commissary-general, who looked after the providing of supplies and of transports, forage, food, drink, etc. The office was not regularly commissioned, as it was called into existence only in time of war and a commissary-general and his deputies were appointed only as part of the customary preparations for war. During the eighteenth century, a constantly increasing number of duties was added to the commissary-general's original functions.

At the time of the American Revolution there existed but three species of contracts—for victualling the land forces abroad; for remitting money for the pay of the troops abroad, and for supplying bread, wood, and forage for the troops at home. In victualling the forces abroad information was first obtained from the Victualling Board of the prices of the several articles of provision that formed the ration; then the Treasury made its proposals to the contractors, received from them proposals in return, and finally struck a bargain in the form of a compromise between them. Victualling contracts were made annually, the provisions were delivered at Cowes or Cork to agents appointed by the Navy Board, and then transported to America by the Commissioners of the Navy. The agents granted certificates to the contractors, which the latter produced at the Treasury. The Treasury referred them to the comptroller of army accounts for review, on whose endorsement the money was paid. The commissary-general in England does not appear to have had supervision of provisions sent to America, but to have been concerned only with the bread, wood, and forage for home encampments, the contracts for which were often "very fallaciously stated". Provisions shipped to America were received by the commissaries-general there.

The accounts here listed are Treasury papers, but are collected separately under their own title. Other commissariat accounts will be found in the Treasury and War Office series. The numbers here described are the reports of Brook Watson, commissary-general in New York at the end of the Revolution. They consist of long rolls mounted on linen.

Brook Watson, afterward Sir Brook, was known as "the wooden-legged commissary", having lost a leg in 1749. He came to America before the French and Indian War and remained here, residing at Halifax, Quebec, Montreal, Boston, and New York, until after the peace of 1783. He travelled widely and acquired an intimate knowledge of colonial conditions, so that after his return to England he was frequently called upon by the government for information. His experiences as commissary began as early as 1755, when he served under Monckton at Beauséjour and later under Wolfe at Quebec, and were continued during his tenure as commissary-general under Carleton in 1782 (W. O. 28: 9). There is a brief life of him in the Dictionary of National Biography, but it is very deficient in all that concerns his American career. Watson went to England in 1774, in the same ship with John Singleton Copley, who painted his portrait, and again in 1775, in the ship that carried Ethan Allen, who had been captured at Montreal shortly before. He was a man of character, integrity, and ability.

11. 1782. Table of Clothing, Provisions, etc., received and issued in North America, 1782.
Contains a general account of clothing, blankets, stores, horses, wagons, provisions, rum, vessels, hulks, scows, boats and stores thereunto belonging, fuel, candles, forage, from June 30 to Dec. 31, 1782. From Brook Watson, commissary-general.

12. 1782. "Account General with the Crown, being for receipt and expenditure of £248,594..0..10^4 stg. received and expended by him in the district of New York, between the 22d day of May, 1782, when he took charge of the Department, to the 31st day of December, following, when with the approbation of the Commander in Chief he delivered over the King's Stores to officers appointed to different departments under his direction and control, the said Commissary General continuing no longer a Public Accountant, but for the purpose of closing and finally passing his accounts being all composed in this general state."

13. 1782-1783. "A General Account of all provisions and rum—fuel and candles—forage—horses, waggons, etc.—clothing, blankets, stores, and materials—vessels, hulks, scows, boats, etc.—Received, issued, etc., in the district of New York, Under the direction and comptrol of Brook Watson, Esq, Commissary General to the army in North America, serving under the Command of his Excellency General Sir Guy Carleton, Knight of the Bath, Commander in Chief, etc., Commencing on the twenty seventh day of May, anno 1782, when he took charge of this commissariat and ending on the fifth day of December, anno 1783, when the army sailed from the port of New York and the said commissary general's charge terminated."

A very large manuscript roll, mounted. The length of the roll is about fifteen feet, its height six.

CUSTOM HOUSE PAPERS.

INTRODUCTION.

Until 1671 the customs duties of England were let out to farm, but in September of that year the king appointed a board of commissioners to manage the customs revenue, though some of the farms were not wound up till 1676. The appointees were Sir George Downing, Sir William Lowther, Sir William Thompson, William Garway, Francis Millington, and John Upton, each at £2000 a year, and they had a secretary and a solicitor. The board served for England and Wales only, until 1723, when Scotland was added and the number of commissioners was raised to fourteen, seven of whom were to reside in London, five in Edinburgh, and two, travelling commissioners, were to take charge of the outports. In 1742 the commission was divided, nine for England and Wales and five for Scotland. This arrangement continued until 1823.

The duties of the commission were to collect the revenue, to appoint or remove inferior officers under warrant from the Treasury, and in general to administer the whole customs service. Some time later a receiver general was appointed to keep separate accounts of the standing customs and temporary imposts, and surveyors general, to visit and inspect "all ports and creeks throughout the realm". Goods could be landed in London at some twenty specified wharves between the Tower and Blackfriars Station, from Tower dock to Puddle dock, while certain commodities could be discharged or laden in midstream. For the collection of the duty enjoined by the act of 25 Charles II., special collectors of customs were appointed in America and the West Indies, and such officials were directly under the control of the commissioners in England until 1767, when a board of American commissioners was created with headquarters at Boston. The collectors of Bridgetown (Barbadoes), Roseau (Dominica), Grenville Bay (Grenada), Kingston and Montego Bay (Jamaica), Sandy Point (St. Christopher), and the ports of Montserrat and other Leeward Islands remained subject to the old board, but those of Accomac, Bermuda, Boston, Beaufort, Brunswick, Chester and Patapsco, Charleston, Halifax, James River, upper and lower, Mobile, Nantucket, New York, New Haven, Newfoundland, New London, Potomac, Philadelphia, Patuxent, Pensacola, Piscataqua, Plymouth, Pocomoke, Rhode Island, Rappahannock, Sunbury, Salem and Marblehead, Savannah, Salem and Cohenzie (Cohansy), and York River were transferred to the establishment books of the board in America.

Certain officials and clerks were appointed in the London Custom House to have charge and supervision of the revenues from the plantations. These were the "western and plantation clerk" (£250), "the solicitor of debts standing out in the plantation receipts" or the "examiner of officers' security and the solicitor of the payment of debts standing out in the plantation receipts" (£100), with a clerk (£20), the "viewer and examiner of tobacco, inward and outward" (£250), and the "surveyor of the acts of navigation" (£100), an assistant (£30), and two watermen (£60). From 1663 to 1684 the four-and-a-half per cent. duty was farmed, first for £7000 and then for £5000 a year, and managers were appointed in Barbadoes and the Leeward Islands to collect the duty and render an accounting to the farmers.1 In 1684 the control of the duty was taken over by the commissioners, who appointed a “husband of the four-and-a-half per cent” (£100), a clerk (£50), and a “check to the husband” (£40). In the islands the duty was generally paid in sugar, which was sent to London and stored in a separate warehouse, where three times a year it was put up at auction and sold.2 This duty, according to a conservative estimate, produced about twice as much as all the other plantation duties put together. After 1768 the staff of clerks in the Custom House, that had to do with American revenues, was reduced by the discontinuation of the offices of the assistant plantation clerk and the assistant to the husband of the four-and-a-half per cent.3

The Board of Customs in England had to do largely with the enforcement of the acts of trade, and with the collection of the plantation duty imposed by the act of 1672. This duty was established not so much as a source of revenue as to prevent trade with Europe, and the collections in the earlier years, particularly from Virginia and Maryland, where the large rivers and the great distances rendered the work of the collectors difficult, were very meagre, the whole produce of the imposition being little more than sufficient to defray the officers’ salaries and the incident charges for boat hire.4 After 1696, with the increased number of collectors and the improved condition of the service, the amount became larger and the net returns sufficient to constitute an item in the commissioners’ states of the revenue.5

The Commissioners of the Customs had no power of appointment, but they were able to control the personnel of the establishment through their right to nominate and approve. They named the leading customs officials in America and approved or disapproved of the minor officials selected by the surveyors general there, but in all cases the actual appointment lay in the hands of the Treasury.6 Apparently all the officials on the colonial establishment received their authority, pay, leaves of absence, instructions, and power to 2 Atton and Holland, The King’s Customs, I. 102-104, 146; Treas. 38: 255. “Four and a half per cent. is remitted from the West Indies in sugar, etc., to the husband of the 4½ per cent., and by him sold, and the nett produce brought to account. There are pensions, salaries, etc., payable out of the fund by patent, by privy seal, and by king’s warrant. Some of these are payable by the hands of the husband, who having satisfied the same, as they become due, pays the surplus into the Exchequer, which is applied to satisfy the charges upon it payable at the Exchequer. The payments by the husband are made without any further instrument than that originally granting them. Those at the Exchequer are paid pursuant to warrant and order, as there is money to satisfy the same; except the Treasury think fit to grant a preference. This revenue is under the management of the Commissioners of the Customs.” Chatham Papers, 231 (1782-1783).

6 “Appointments to all places on the establishment of the Customs are by instruments arising at the Treasury. Some hold by patent, some by commission under the hands of the Lords of the Treasury, and others, by much the major part, are by warrant to the Commissioners of the Customs to issue their deputation to the person therein named. Incident officers are appointed by the commissioners themselves and deputies to patent officers by the principals, when the Treasury does not interfere; but the person is more frequently recommended to the commissioners and to the patent officers by a letter from the secretary of the Treasury. When the commissioners find any incidental officers necessary to be continued, they by memorial recommend the establishment of such officers, which is done by warrant on the commissioners memorial.” Chatham Papers, 231 (1782-1783). hire boats and boatmen by means of Treasury warrants. From 1767 to October 16, 1783, this method of procedure was changed by the creation of the American board. During those years, some of the incidental officers, but not those on the establishment, were appointed by the board in England, others by the surveyors general in the colonies, with the approval of the American board, and still others by the American board itself. The commissioners in England not only drew up special instructions for the colonial officials, but also wrote the general instructions to the governors, as far as these instructions concerned the part which the governors were to play in upholding the collectors and surveyors in the performance of their duties. The same was true of all colonial laws that affected trade. Such laws were sent by the Board of Trade to the Customs Commissioners for approval and ratification.

Before the end of the colonial period the British customs organization and administration had become hopelessly complicated and inefficient, involving great losses of revenue through smuggling, corruption of officials, and snares. The systems of collection and account were "preposterous", and bookkeeping at the Custom House itself was a "hopeless muddle". The figures given for the plantation revenues must always be used with caution, as the accounts were invariably in arrears, and it is far from clear that the sums recorded actually represent the net produce for each year. In fact, it is evident that in many years the collection charges exceeded the gross revenue.

There have been five custom houses in London, all on the same or approximately the same site. Three of these houses were destroyed by fire. The first was built in 1385, on the site occupied by its immediate successors. The second was built in Queen Elizabeth’s reign and burned in 1666. The third, designed by Sir Christopher Wren, was built in 1668, at an expense of £10,000, and was destroyed by fire in 1711. This building was principally of brick, but the lower story, which was of the Tuscan order, had stone columns. The upper story was in the Ionic style, with pilasters and pediments. While the new quarters were in preparation, the commissioners had offices in the house of Lord Bayninghe in Mark Lane. The fourth structure, a much larger and more commodious building, designed by Ripley, was erected a short distance west of the old site, and it too, somewhat altered later, was burned down on January 12, 1814. At this time the papers, which seem to have been saved in 1711, were in large part destroyed. The fifth and present building was erected in 1817.

Congreve, Rowe, and Prior, the poets, Sir Dudley North, and Adam Smith all served either as officials or commissioners of customs.

1 For an elaborate statement of conditions at this time, see Atton and Holland, op. cit., pp. 356-379.

2 An illustration of the second building is given in Allen, London, III. 744, but a better print is the frontispiece to Chester’s Chronicles of the Custom Department. Many illustrations of the third building may be found, Besant, London in the Seventeenth Century, p. 191, Lambert, History of London, III. 385, Chester, Chronicles, p. 75. For references to the fire of 1711 see A. O., Deel. Acc., 788, 988, and 1 George II., c. 2 (private acts). See also Hatton, New View, II. 601. For illustrations of the fourth building see Microcosm of London, I. 217, Dodsley, London and its Environs, II. 212, Chester, Chronicles, p. 76 (both original design and alteration); and for the building burned, Pennant, London, II. 64. For the present structure, see Shepherd, Views of London, Chester, Chronicles, p. 78 (original buildings).
Bundles and volumes containing Custom House accounts may be found among the Colonial Office Papers, the Treasury Papers, and the series described below, which is composed of original Custom House documents, the greater part of which appear to have been deposited at the time in the Treasury. Some 565 volumes were transferred thence to the Custom House in 1835 and of these 438 were removed to the Rolls House in 1848 and the remainder in 1851. Many volumes were brought directly from the Treasury Chambers in 1846, 1847, and 1853. A number of volumes were returned to the Custom House in 1853 and 1854.

Except for certain volumes, hereafter to be described, there are in the Custom House today no volumes of correspondence, minutes, or accounts of date earlier than 1814. There are, however, in the Custom House library nineteen volumes of minutes of the Scottish board, 1723-1783 (described below), a calendar of outport records (Grenock), letters to the commissioners of the port of Whitehaven, 1775-1785, and a collection of “Customs Papers, Seizures after 1814”, which contain many documents relating to smuggling in the Canadian provinces and the seizure of American vessels trading contrary to the navigation acts.¹

The bundles in the Treasury series that contain customs accounts will be found in Treasury, Classes 38 and 64, to which the searcher may be referred (pp. 215-220, 237, 238); those of the Board of Trade series may be found among the Colonial Office Papers, Class 390: 5-12, already described in the preceding volume (pp. 262-265), but of which a supplementary account is given here, together with a brief entry of a few volumes now in the Modern Board of Trade series.

The significance of the letters AP, AD, and AK is not apparent. All of these volumes belonged to the regular Board of Trade series and are those referred to in other Board of Trade volumes and the calendars, as “Custom House Accounts” (see preceding volume, p. 105). But the calendar (11) omits many of the documents here bound up and lists others which are not here. Some of the latter can be found in the old Plantation General series (C. O. 323: 1-29) or in the old Trade series (C. O. 388: 2-58). The calendar enters documents for the period, June 17, 1726, to about Feb., 1732, only. Some other arrangement of the Custom House accounts that were sent to the Board of Trade must have been in vogue when the calendar was made, since we find references to volumes that cannot now be identified, as "A, 1743-1745", and "Large Books of Custom House Accounts".

6 is an entry book of the Board of Trade, containing tables of exports and imports, arranged under the name of colony or subject—Newfoundland (fishery and inhabitants), Jamaica (goods), Barbadoes (goods), Leeward Islands (goods), Virginia (goods exported and shipping), Maryland (goods exported), Italy, Spain, Portugal ("State of the Trade"), East India (goods and ships), Coinage, Naval Stores (from all countries, including the plantations, 1701-1723). Also a "Scheme of the Fishery of Newfoundland", 1720, 1722-1727, 1720-1731, by Capt. Percy. Also tables of goods imported and exported, Jamaica, 1718-1722. Also "Account of all Gold and Silver coined in the Tower, from the last day of December, 1689, to 1710".

9 is also a Board of Trade volume, containing the original reports sent from the Custom House at the request of the board in the years 1760-1772. There would seem to be some duplicating of information in the lists. Early returns are of hemp and rice imported, 1752-1762; hats exported, 1735-1738, 1750-1753, 1759-1762; beaver skins, imported and exported, 1735-1738, 1750-1753, 1759-1762; beaver wool, exported, 1735-1738, 1750-1753, 1759-1763; beaver skins, imported, 1749-1763.

83-88. 1780-1786. Commercial Intercourse.

These bundles contain many Custom House accounts, chiefly of date after 1783. They concern commercial intercourse with America and the West Indies, American intercourse with Great Britain, and American intercourse with Newfoundland and Nova Scotia. They are of considerable value for a history of American commercial relations after the attainment of independence by the colonies.

ACCOUNTS.

INSPECTOR GENERAL'S ACCOUNTS.

1-10. 1696-1702. Imports and Exports.

Each volume contains summaries of imports and exports from London and the outputs to and from the English plantations. Also, an abstract of the amount of the several estimates of the goods imported and exported into or out of London and the outputs for each half year, reckoned from Lady Day to Michaelmas and from Michaelmas to Lady Day. The dates and contents of each volume are as follows:

1, Imports, 1696-1697; 2, Exports, 1696-1697; 3, Imports, 1697-1698; 4, Exports, 1697-1698; 5, Imports and Exports, Michaelmas to Christmas, 1698; 6, Imports and Exports, Christmas, 1698-Christmas, 1699; 7, Imports, 1699-1700; 8, Exports, 1699-1700; 9, Imports and Exports, 1700-1701; 10, Imports and Exports, 1701-1702.

Imports and Exports.

1-80. 1697-1780. Ledgers of Imports and Exports.

These volumes contain statistics not only for foreign countries (including Newfoundland under that title) but for the plantations also, under the headings given below. Although the order differs in the various volumes and the headings are not always the same, the information here recorded covers essentially the entire series of volumes. The period is sometimes Michaelmas to Michaelmas; sometimes Christmas to Christmas. This series and the inspector general’s accounts contain practically the same information for the brief period covered by the latter volumes.

An account of the imports from the British and Foreign West Indies, parts southward of Cape Finisterre, in Europe, Africa, and the Wine Islands... distinguishing the goods which have paid duty at the port of importation from such as are free or have paid duty at ports not under the management of the American Board of Customs.

XII. An account of the articles on which duty has been paid on importation from the British and Foreign West Indies and on exportation at the several ports in North America.

XIII. An account of the produce or manufacture of Great Britain and Ireland imported into the several ports of North America from Great Britain and Ireland.

XIV. An account of the foreign goods and produce imported into the several ports of North America from Great Britain and Ireland.

This list contains but a few of the titles of the documents included in this bulky volume. The statistics are based on the reports sent home by the American Board of Customs Commissioners. Each table covers but one year, and the tables as a whole vary considerably in form and often in content. In some cases the accounts are combined, in others they are rendered as separate tables. The volume is of great value.

Registers.

This series, of which many volumes are missing, relates as a whole to the customs establishment in England only. Vols. 310, 312, however, contain in addition, as follows:

310. "The Establishment of the officers of his Majesty's customs in the Plantations for the half year ending the 5th July, 1767" (not including Jamaica).

312. "The Establishment of the officers of his Majesty's customs in the Plantations from the 5th day of July to the 8th day of September following, exclusive, the date of the patent appointing commissioners of the Customs in America" (Treas. 1: 465).

The two lists are nearly identical, except that 312 has a few additions and an extra column of "Sums due". In 314, 316, 320, etc., the list of officers for Jamaica appears.

A series of 29 volumes of American Custom House Establishment Books, now in the Custom House, London, containing a full record of the quarterly accounts of officers employed and salaries paid in North America from Sept.
8, 1767, to Jan. 5, 1776. These accounts were sent to the Lords of the Treasury from the Custom House, Boston. The dates of the volumes are as follows:

1, Quarter ending, Jan. 5, 1768; 2, Apr. 5, 1768; 3, July 5, 1768; 4, Oct. 10, 1768; 5, Jan. 5, 1769; 6, Apr. 5, 1769; 7, July 5, 1769; 8, Oct. 10, 1769; 9, Jan. 5, 1770; 10, Apr. 5, 1770; 11, July 5, 1770; 12, Oct. 10, 1770; 13, Jan. 5, 1771; 14, Apr. 5, 1771; 15, July 5, 1771; 16, Oct. 10, 1771; 17, Jan. 5, 1772; 18, Apr. 5, 1772; 19, July 5, 1772; 20, Oct. 10, 1772; 21, Jan. 5, 1773; 22, Apr. 5, 1772; 23, July 5, 1773; 24, Oct. 10, 1773; 25, Jan. 5, 1774; (the accounts for the quarters ending, Apr. 5, July 5, Oct. 10, 1774, are missing); 26, Jan. 5, 1775; 27, Apr. 5, 1775; 28, July 5, 1775; (the account for the quarter ending, Oct. 10, 1775, is missing); 29, Jan. 5, 1776.

These volumes can be inspected by permission of the Commissioners of the Customs, Custom House, Lower Thames Street, London.

In the Custom House is another volume containing the customs establishment in America just prior to Sept. 8, 1767. The information given is of the same character as that in the 29 volumes noted above and in the main duplicates 312 of the Public Record Office volumes. From the salary lists, the headings of which are given below, we are able to discover the manner of appointment of the incidental officers. The established officers were appointed as before by Treasury warrant.

As we have already said (above, p. 92), a complete list of American customs officials has been prepared from the rolls of Declared Accounts in the Audit Office and is to be found in the Library of Congress. Similar information can be obtained from the out-letters of the Treasury Board (Treas. 11: 1-32). See also references, above, p. 93. An establishment list for 1723 is in Acts of the Privy Council, Colonial, VI. 632; and other lists are in Treas. 42.

MISCELLANEA.

This volume is an entry book of letters sent by the register general of shipping of the American Board of Customs Commissioners to the various collectors and comptrollers of customs at the different ports in the colonies, from Halifax to Savannah, under the management of the board. The letters are dated Boston, chiefly before 1771, and are signed J. W. Malcolm and James Murray. From these letters it appears that the board was trying to bring order into the customs system in America, and the writers are constantly finding fault with the returns sent in to the board. They instruct the American officials—collectors and others—to send no more accounts to England, because "the general accounts in this office originate with the commencement of the American Board and those in England terminate at the same time".

SUPPLEMENTARY CUSTOM HOUSE PAPERS.

1. SCOTLAND.

1-19. 1723-1783. Minutes of the Scottish Board of Customs Commissioners.

These bulky volumes are in the library of the Custom House, London. They are not indexed before 1776, and, because large and completely filled with the minutes of proceedings and other matter, are not easy to use unless a given date be known. At best the series is of but slight value to students of colonial history, except perhaps for the period of the Revolution, and even for that period the entries relating to American affairs are relatively few in number.

The earlier volumes contain some references to plantation trade, particularly to that of tobacco from Virginia and Maryland, rum from New England, and coffee from the West Indies. They give information about passes issued by the Privy Council for the re-exportation of tobacco, and something about tobacco raised in Scotland. In the volume dated 1755-1759 is a mention of the deportation to South Carolina of three men sentenced for "deforc Shipping Registers. 1785-1911.

Book of Seizures. 1702-1734.

Liverpool had a good plantation trade and the volumes record the arrival of plantation vessels, with names, occasional seizures of prizes, suggestions as to seasons for trade, especially with the West Indies, statements about re-shipped tobacco smuggled into Scotland and about the tobacco duty, references to the operation of the Stamp Act in connection with the stamping of clearances in America and the question as to whether or not vessels whose clearances were not stamped should be entered at Liverpool.

The year 1769 shows extensive export trade in wheat from America to Leghorn, Lisbon, etc., and the volumes for that and following years contain references to trade with Newfoundland, to tea returned from Hampton, Virginia, because the colonists there would not allow it to be landed, to the extent of trade with the colonies in 1775, with many interesting items relating thereto. Beginning with 1776-1777 we get many references to privateers brought to Liverpool as prizes (Aurora, Capt. Hutchinson, of Virginia, for example), many vessels taken and retaken, Paul Jones’s squadron, ships captured by Kelly and Dowlin, American privateersmen. The series is valuable for the War of 1812 and the Civil War, particularly as to the fitting out of Confederate cruisers.

In the shipping registers are certain particulars of Confederate cruisers, and in the book of seizures a few entries of colonial vessels.

Bristol.

The Bristol Custom House was burned in 1831 and the records destroyed.

Letter-Books of the Port of Barnstaple. 1727-1835, 1847-1878. 29 vols.

With the decline of the Barnstaple trade in woollens (1722), the trade in tobacco came to the front and continued to be conspicuous until 1732. Until the rise of the tobacco trade, except for a small amount of oil from Newfoundland, Barnstaple did no import business. An account is given, with names of ships and number of hogsheads, of the tobacco trade with Maryland and Virginia for these ten years. Between 1753 and 1772 ships from Barnstaple went to Piscataqua, Massachusetts, New York, and Virginia. In the volumes of the Revolutionary period there are many entries concerning pirates and privateers, including probably Kelly and Dowlin.

Dover.

Letter-Books. The Board to the Collectors.

Both series begin with about 1750, but as the trade was chiefly with France, the volumes are of little importance here.
Portsmouth.

Id. The Collectors to the Board. 1748-1750, 1760-1761, 1764-1814. 143 vols.
Account of Incidents. Portsmouth. 1689-1702.

These volumes contain very little relating to American affairs. There are a few items regarding stamps returned from Nova Scotia because of the repeal of the Stamp Act; Palatines from Rotterdam, via Portsmouth for Philadelphia, 1774; arrival of passengers via East Indiamen; smuggling and quarantine. Beginning with 1776, there are a few references to America, such as to the attack by Americans on Parker's fleet in Charleston harbor, with a list of casualties. The second series is the more important of the two.

Exeter.

Letter-Books. The Board to the Collectors. 1676-1805.
Id. The Collectors to the Board. 1743-1860. 49 vols.

Exeter at the end of the seventeenth and the beginning of the eighteenth centuries had an extensive traffic with Europe and the plantations. We meet with items regarding convoys, and information that East India goods were concealed in casks of Barbadoes sugar which the officers were instructed to split open. The tobacco trade was large, much tobacco being exported from Virginia and repacked at Exeter for export. After 1744 this trade declined. In 1738, 400,000 lbs. were imported and 398,000 exported, but in 1744 the figures had dropped to 6094, and in 1745 to "Nil". Trade with Newfoundland kept up the prosperity and life of the city. The volumes contain a great deal about smuggling.

Dartmouth.

Letter-Books. The Board to the Collectors. 1675-1731.
Id. The Collectors to the Board. 1775-1779, 1782-1860. 36 vols.

Not particularly important for colonial history, though of some value during the period of the Revolutionary War. The volumes contain items relating to shipping, smuggling, and American privateers.

Falmouth.

The older letter-books of Falmouth have disappeared. There are no volumes for the colonial period.

Penzance.

Letter-Books. The Board to the Collectors. 1722-1761.
Id. The Collectors to the Board. 1738-1741, 1748-1750.
Of value chiefly for smuggling.

Scilly.

Goods Landed and Shipped. 1736-1752.

A few references to colonial ships, but apparently the islands had no direct foreign trade.

Newcastle.

Letter-Books. The Board to the Collectors. 1706—.

Id. The Collectors to the Board. 1724—.

Exact statements regarding the number of volumes at Newcastle are not possible, as the series need to be reorganized. Tobacco from Maryland and Virginia was entered at Newcastle as early as 1727-1734. In 1777 the entries show no vessels inward from the plantations and but four vessels outward, to Newfoundland, Senegal, Montserrat, and Jamaica. The volume for 1778-1780, which might contain entries regarding Paul Jones, is missing.

Stockton.

Letter-Books. The Board to the Collectors. 1675-1819. 31 vols.

Id. The Collectors to the Board. 1763-1863. 25 vols.

Additional Letter-Book. 1709-1794.

Licenses, Passes, Declarations. 1763-1854. 4 vols.

Many references to plantation trade, beginning as early as 1675 (train oil). Such trade seems to have been extensive and is frequently mentioned. In a letter from the Admiralty, 1676, reference is made to the proclamations of Dec. 22, 1675, and Jan. 28, 1676, defining the time of endurance of “sea briefs”; granted in pursuance of the treaty with Algiers and warning the collectors that they are not to grant such briefs under the treaties with Algiers, Tunis, and Tripoli, as the power to do this rested only with the Admiralty. Under date June 22, 1714, we find a definition of such goods as were deemed at that time contraband of war.

Whitby.

Letter-Books. The Collectors to the Board. 1721-1724.

Many volumes apparently are missing. Those examined disclose no references to colonial trade.

Whitehaven.

Letter-Books. The Collectors to the Board. 1775-1785.

These volumes are of considerable value for colonial trade during the war. The trade was with Ireland, North America, and the West Indies, and not with the Continent. Items refer to a vessel from North America with timber and lumber; to the Molly of Virginia, laden with British dry goods for Canada, which tried to carry its cargo to Virginia, June 24, 1775, and to many vessels from Virginia to England, showing the working of the Prohibitory Act. Vessels going to American ports were not permitted to load any goods or provisions whatever. Seven American vessels were seized and brought to port, Apr. 16, 1778. Under date Apr. 20 there is a reference to Paul Jones: “At 4 o’clock a privateer of eighteen guns and one hundred and twenty men landed about thirty men in our harbour and set a vessel on fire and distributed combustibles in several others. The privateer is yet standing on and off and as we just now hear is stretching with wind at east to the WNW” (p. 96). There is a reference to the arrival of the George, belonging to this coast, from Rhode Island, with the Grampus, on board which was Gen. Burgoyne (May 15, 1778). In the latter part of the volume are entries of interest relating to the transport service.
Custom House Papers

Hull.

Id. The Board to the Collectors. 1744-1761, 1766-1811, 1812-1817, 1827-1828, 1848-1851, 1854-1861. 31 vols.
Board’s Order Books. 1726-1754, 1727-1795, 1786-1790. 3 vols.

The letter-books seem to contain very little relating to American affairs. Under date July 28, 1777, there is a reference to a brigantine of Lynn (England), “the captain of which stated that on the 21 he was taken by an American privateer 30 leagues N.E by E from the Spurn” (mouth of the Humber); the privateersman robbed him of all his provisions and stores and put on board him the crews of four other captured English vessels, and these the brigantine, at the time of making statement, was conveying to Lynn. The American ship carried 16 carriage guns, 24 swivels, and 100 men, and had “sent away” the four captured English vessels. In a letter of Sept. 23, 1779, from the collector to the board, we are given information regarding Paul Jones, to the effect that there were three ships in his squadron. The trade of Hull was almost entirely coastwise or with the northern part of Europe. Few if any colonial vessels entered at that port.

Plymouth.

Id. The Collectors to the Board. 1799-1860. 60 vols.

Of interest for the War of 1812. Voluminous entries with regard to prizes. Many American ships detained as prize, possibly on the suspicion of infringing neutral privileges, but with the result of greatly annoying the Americans, to so great an extent indeed as the more famous impressment of seamen. Apr., 1808, case of American East Indiaman, General Clarkson, and others. Also entries showing that American ships landed tobacco in Guernsey contrary to the navigation acts. Twenty vessels engaged in this trade were seized in 1791. Many of the volumes for Plymouth, Truro, and Looe have disappeared.

Scotland.

Greenock (Port Glasgow).

Letter-Books. The Collectors to the Scottish Board.
Id. The Scottish Board to the Collectors.
Id. Deputies at Greenock to the Scottish Board via Port Glasgow.

About 200 volumes in all, dating from as early as 1736. As the collection is in process of reclassification, it is possible that earlier volumes may be recovered.

The books show that from early times there was an extensive tobacco trade with Maryland and Virginia, and that much of the tobacco was re-exported. Items concern this trade and re-exportation, discrepancies between cargoes and manifests, violations at the time of the Revolution of the Prohibitory Act, vessels being licensed in Great Britain and certificated by British commanders and others in the colonies. Passengers suspected of being Americans were carefully watched; many historical and semi-historical allusions may be found as to the work of the Continental Congress. References to the appearance of John Paul Jones so near the land as to be identified; to an American privateer plundering the house of St. Mary's Isle, seat of the Earl of Selkirk (in a letter from Kirkcudbright, Apr. 23, 1781, from John Murdach to the provost or any of the magistrates of Dumfries); to the 70th Foot, proceeding from Glasgow to America, their shoes and linen; to Wexford, an American privateer, Apr. 11, 1778, and an engagement in which Capt. Innes struck to the American; to D'Estaing in the West Indies, May 28, 1779; and to other privateer cases. In these records one can find references to the careers of many vessels which throw light on American trade after 1775 and the working of the license system.

The books have many entries relating to the activities of American privateers off the English coast, to prizes brought into port, to Paul Jones as expected to sail from France "shortly", Aug. 20, 1778, to vessels waiting for letters of marque against the French and the Americans. There is evidence here and in the Liverpool records that the American privateers sometimes cruised in squadrons.

Ayr.

Letter-Books. The Scottish Board to the Officers. 1746-1764.
Id. The Scottish Board to the Collectors. 1764-1767, 1793-1796. 3 vols.

Some foreign trade and much friction between traders and subordinate officers, many references to smuggling, particularly from 1776 to 1780, when something like a state of war existed. Evidence of considerable colonial trade in tobacco, reshipped to France and Norway, the French farmers generally being the chief customers (1752); also trade in rum with the West Indies, the rum being sometimes shipped from Ayr ostensibly to Ireland, but run back from Ireland to Scotland by the Manxmen, who smuggled rum to a large extent before England acquired control of the island. Instructions from the Admiralty regarding Paul Jones, the Prohibitory Act, and licenses, 1778-1779; other interesting references to Jones and other privateers, with a copy of a letter from the Dublin custom house to the provost of Ayr.

Id. The Scottish Board to the Officers. 1764-1776, 1784-1788, 1794-1803, 1806-1811. 10 vols.

Much tobacco, probably colonial, smuggled in by way of the Isle of Man. A reference or two to Paul Jones. On the whole there is very little in these volumes.
Troon.

Id. The Scottish Board to the Collectors. 1763-1771, 1797-1801, 1804-1805, 1809-1811, 1815-1824. 7 vols.

Chiefly of value for smuggling. Some time in the middle of the nineteenth century about a dozen volumes disappeared, which may yet be discovered. As these volumes mainly covered the period 1777-1791 it is possible that they contained references of interest. It is known that in them there was at least one item regarding Paul Jones.

Leith.

Id. Sent to the Custom House, London. 1777-1787, 1790-1791. 5 vols.

Many signatures of Adam Smith. The older orders were to the port of Dunbar. The items concern chiefly the tobacco and rum trade with New York, Georgia, and other colonies. Reference to Paul Jones’s squadron, Sept. 16, 1779, and to Loyalists from New York, Oct. 22, 1783.

Alloa.

Considerable trade with the West Indies, 1752, 1757-1758. A great deal about smuggling, and of legal trade in tobacco, though the latter seems to have been designed for "pretended exportation". Goods were often relanded after clearance outward, and wholesale frauds committed. Direction of trade chiefly to northern Europe. Of little interest for colonial commerce.

IRELAND.

Londonderry.

Letter-Books. The Collectors to the Board. 1773-1829, with many volumes wanting.

These books concern also Letterkenny and Ballylaine.

Id. The Board to the Collectors. 1774-1800, with many volumes wanting.

Precedent Book. 1699-1819.

The Londonderry books contain material of considerable interest concerning smuggled tobacco, the fisheries, privateers, convoys, prizes, prisoners, captures and recaptures, and the like. Under date Apr. 20, 1776, mention is made of a vessel from America carrying the goods of J. Crawford, a Loyalist, who had been compelled to convert his property into cargo and to leave by stealth. There are many references to American privateering during the Revolutionary War, to the experiences of convoys with the privateers, and to mistakes and misunderstandings. Paul Jones’s squadron is mentioned under date Apr. 28, 1778, and again in 1779; mention is also made of Kelly and Dowlin, who did a great deal of damage to British commerce at this time. Mr. Atton comments upon these records as follows, "It may be possible to secure from Custom records a complete journal of his [Paul Jones] cruises on the coasts of the United Kingdom ", and he adds, "the Customs department acted in an energetic and creditable manner on the occasion in question and it appears that the frustration of some of Jones' plans may have been due to this fact."

In the same series mention is made of seizures of American privateers and ships during the War of 1812, and of detentions and seizures of American vessels prior to 1812. In the precedent book is a copy of a register of a prize ship (Philadelphia), 1746, and an account of the quit-rents of Derry, 1753.

WALES.

Cardiff.

Id. the Collectors to the Board. 1746-1861. 24 vols.
Salaries and Incidents. 1733-1759.

A few items relating to colonial goods and shipping, particularly in connection with the "wrecking" of ships cast ashore. Apparently Cardiff had very little foreign trade.

Swansea.

No colonial trade; many references to smuggling.

This series of 1464 bundles contains altogether between fourteen and fifteen thousand parchment books of varying size and thickness, each bundle including on the average eight to twelve books. The latter vary greatly in condition, some being well preserved, others little injured except for the adhering of the leaves, while a few, especially those of Bristol, are so badly damaged by damp and mildew as to be almost illegible.

The great value of the books for colonial history lies in the record they contain of the nature and distribution of colonial staple products and of goods exported from the English outports to America. This record is not confined to the direct trade between Great Britain and America, but includes also a very large body of material showing the reshipment and re-exportation of colonial staples to other parts of Great Britain and Ireland and to the Continent, and the transportation of such commodities inland as well as by water. For the British coastwise trade the books are indispensable, and of this traffic American staples formed an important part. Furthermore, in these lists are hundreds of names of vessels, either colonial or English-built or taken as prize, that were concerned in the trade and passenger traffic between England and America, and these lists date back to the beginning of our history. So far as observed the earliest recorded names are the John from the West Indies (1614) and the Treasurer with the tobacco of Sir Thomas Dale from Virginia (Southampton, 1616). The Charity (1624) is the earliest from New England. A list of such vessels, with the data furnished by these entries, would be unique among the sources for the history of colonial commerce.

Regarding the importance of the Port Books for our early history, Mr. R. G. Marsden says, "I have examined many of those for James' reign and am fairly well acquainted with the character of their contents during that period. The ship that chiefly interested me was the Pilgrim Fathers' Mayflower, and, if my attempt to identify her was successful, the Port Books contain at least a dozen references to her and her master, the 'Mr. Jones' of Bradford's narrative, showing her career between 1610 and 1621, the voyages she made, the cargoes she carried, and who paid customs duties on them. To the historic voyage no reference has been found in the Port Books, possibly because of the decayed condition of some of them, but more probably because of the secrecy and hurry of the ship's sailing. One entry, however, relating to the sailing of a Mayflower to New England in 1624 will have to be explained by New England historians; there is reason to think that the ship referred to is the Pilgrims' ship of 1620 (which returned to England in 1621), but no Mayflower is known to have arrived in New England, or to have sailed for New England, in 1624, and the puzzle is complicated by another entry in another of the Port Books referring to the same ship, but describing her as bound, not for New England, but for Ireland."
"Apart from the Mayflower the Port Books give a good deal of information as to the sailing of ships to and from America and the West Indies, which probably is not to be found elsewhere. In 1634, for example, full details of the cargoes of 19 ships, with their masters' names, are given, with the statement that the New England ships per licentiam Regis paid no customs duty; so in 1625 particulars are given of 14 ships and cargoes bound for America and the West Indies. Similar information may be collected as to the Baltic, Mediterranean, African, and East Indian trades. In most cases the destination, in outward voyages, and the port of sailing, in homeward voyages, is given; and where it is not given the character of the cargo—Virginian tobacco, elephants' teeth, whale oil, or logwood—indicates where the ship had been."

If we omit the books containing entries of duties on wine, as relating in no way to colonial history, the remainder may be classified under three heads: those that record imports and entrances, those that record exports and clearances, and those that concern the coasting trade. The outlets differed greatly as far as their activities in these three directions were concerned. Some of them, such as Chester, had no ocean-going commerce, confining themselves to coast ports in England, Ireland, Wales, and Scotland, and handling a considerable amount of colonial produce in this way. Chester received plantation and colonial products from London, Liverpool, Lancaster, Bristol or Dublin in small vessels, and redistributed these products either inland or to the smaller coast towns by water. The invoices of vessels clearing for Ireland, the Continent, or other British ports are sufficiently detailed to give an excellent idea of the goods transhipped and their destination.

The books are not specially easy to use. The number is very large, the entries are scattered, and the form of the entry is such as to require a certain amount of experience in reading it. The following specimen entries show the character of the information given.

Bristol. The Bristol books show a large plantation trade, as was to be expected, and from the entries of goods exported a good idea can be obtained of the manufacturing activities of the port.

"In the Polly Chas Thomson Mr per Antigua Jamaica and Honduras Permit Thos Frank 61 1/4 Wheat flour Imported by himself 24 Oct. 1775 per Betty and Hellen warehoused under the joint stocks of king and proprietor agreeable to an act of 13 Geo. 3 ", etc.

"Betty of and for Milford Jas Morris Mr (among other commodities) muscovado sugar, train oil, melasses, refined sugar tobacco, snuff, June 21, 1775."

Many similar detailed invoices of goods laden for the coastwise traffic, such as tar, pitch, flour, deal boards, salt, redwood, mahogany, logwood, ginger, potash, pimento, lignum-vitae, rice, Madeira wine, balls of tobacco clay (also in boxes, baskets, pails, casks, and bundles), and tobacco and snuff in boxes, hogsheads, baskets, casks, trusses, and rolls.

In the export books will frequently be found references to goods that were part of a prize cargo, and in this case the name of the prize is always given. Such cargoes were brought in by the merchants and reshipped to America and the West Indies.

"Part of a cargo of the Margaretha Dorothea a prize taken by the Eagle and Charlestown privateers and condemned 7 March 1757." Scores of such entries may be found during the war periods. Only half subsidy was paid.

For an official report on the Port Books see the Deputy Keeper's Report for 1912, pp. 14-16, where it is stated that the books of the Port of London, 1697-1799, "were destroyed years ago ".

PAYMASTER-GENERAL OF THE FORCES.

INTRODUCTION.

The paymaster-general of the forces was the banker of the army. The office originated early in the reign of Charles II., as a device for meeting the expenses of the troops raised to check Venner's uprising.¹ So successful was the first appointee, Sir Stephen Fox, grandfather of Charles James Fox, that in 1661 the office was enlarged and Fox was constituted paymaster in general of all the troops. The position proved an exceedingly lucrative one, as large amounts of money passed through the paymaster's hands and he received as one of his perquisites a stoppage of five per cent. (one shilling in the pound) of the pay of all ranks of the army.² The refusal of Pitt to receive this iniquitous allowance, when holding the paymastership in the years from 1746 to 1755, gave him a wide reputation for probity. On the other hand Lord Ranelagh, paymaster from 1691 to 1702, was convicted of defalcation to the amount of £72,000 and turned out of Parliament, and later the situation became so notorious³ that the House of Commons appointed a committee to investigate the affairs of the army. While in the main the report exculpated the paymaster-general, it brought to light the peculations of Edmond Jones, deputy and cashier to the paymaster of marines, who had lent £90,000 of public money and divided the interest money (£1000) with his fellow deputy Herbert (see above, p. 39). There is ample justification for Lord Rosebery's characterization of the office when he speaks of the gilded subordination of the paymastership, with its vast profits and safe obscurity, and when he

² The paymaster's establishment cost £3000 a year, which came out of deductions of 12d. in the pound and one day's pay in the year and not out of any revenue of the crown. The paymaster was also treasurer of Chelsea Hospital and had a salary of £365 a year and £365 established pay.

³ "Sir, I don't know what the Method of the Treasury is at present, but I humbly imagine, that if you approve the Reduction of the Pay of the Officers and order proper and distinct Advertisements to be put upon the Doors of the Treasury and Pay Office as often as Money is issued for the service of the Army, and throw off[!] the Jargon of Poundage, Hospital, Agency, Offreckonings, Warrant, and several other articles altogether unintelligible, it will be of great Ease to the Army and of vast Service to the Public. The Pay-Office, then, will neither be perplexed itself nor perplex others, as in the time of some Pay-Masters; every Officer will know when his money is in the Pay-Office to a minute, and will not be sent away with a There's no Money, as has been done formerly, when there was really Money, but confounded under such different Heads of Service, that the Officer could not get at it, and perhaps some Clerk was then making a Hand of it in the Alley. A great many gallant men will not then be obliged, as heretofore, to dance Attendance at the Door of the Pay-Office, as I have often seen them do in the most uncomfortable Seasons of the Year, and pay more Court to a little Clerk there than a Sub-lieutenant or Ensign here would to a Mareschal of France." Foreman, A Letter to Walpole (1732), pp. 32-33.

calls to mind the habitual practice of the paymaster "to take poundage of all subsidies paid to foreign princes and to use the great balances at his credit for his own purposes of speculation". Yet under the Hanoverians the paymaster became a cabinet officer and a member of the Privy Council, and the office was deemed, and naturally, one of the most desirable in the gift of the crown. It was held by such men as Walpole, Cornwallis, Spencer Compton, Henry Pelham, Pitt, Henry Fox, Charles Townshend, North, Burke, and Barré.

The functions of the paymaster-general were first regulated by statute in 1782 and again in 1783. Complaint having been made of the financial conduct of the war in America, commissioners were appointed to examine the accounts of the kingdom. The commission reported that the paymaster—Richard Rigby was the official especially referred to—had been accustomed to accumulate large sums of public money in his hands, beyond what was necessary for carrying on the service of the department, and to take and carry out of office with him, upon his resignation or removal, large balances of public money, which he had retained and kept in his hands many years after being out of office. Therefore it was ordered that henceforth all fees of the paymaster's office should be abolished, that all money voted by Parliament should be deposited in the Bank of England, that the Secretary at War should take charge of all the estimates, and that the paymaster, the Secretary at War, the judge advocate general, and other officials should be placed upon a salary. This act entirely altered the position of the paymaster and the Secretary at War, though both offices were continued, one until 1836, when it was merged in that of the paymaster-general, the other until 1854, when it was assumed by the Secretary of State for War until abolished entirely in 1863.

Under the paymaster were the deputy paymasters in America and through them the troops were paid, works and barracks erected, and all other ordinary and extraordinary expenses met. The paymaster received the money furnished him by writ of privy seal, and accompanying such writ were instructions from the Treasury, though disbursements were controlled by the paymaster alone. Books containing the off-reckonings, or clothing accounts of the regiments, are to be found among the paymaster's papers. Twenty-five per cent. of a soldier's pay, that is, during our Revolutionary War, two pence per man per day, was stopped for his clothing, and this stoppage was paid to the colonel who arranged for the supply, though the records of the allowance were kept in the paymaster's office. A fuller discussion of the off-reckonings is given below. The subject is important as the manipulation of the off-reckonings was little short of scandalous.

3 "The monies granted by parliament in each year for military services are issued from the Exchequer to the Paymaster General, in pursuance of a sign manual warrant and order, founded on the general letter of privy seal, which sign manuals, etc., have been of late for £1,000,000 each; and by virtue thereof the Paymaster General has a credit at the Exchequer to receive any sum not exceeding that sum. The money is afterwards issued as occasion requires by the secretary's letter to the auditor, which letter states the sum, the fund in the Exchequer out of which it is to be satisfied, and the service for which it is to be applied by the Paymaster.
   "When this credit is exhausted, another is given, till the whole amount of the year's grants for military services is nearly issued, and then particular letters of privy seal are made out, directing the payment of the remainder, and completing the authority for the payment of the whole. When the money is thus in the Paymaster's hands, he must have the authority of the king's sign manual, countersigned by the Treasury, to authorize him to pay it." Chatham Papers, 231 (1782-1783).
The Pay Office was located at one time in Golden Square and at another in one of the houses west of Wallingford House, facing St. James Park. After the completion of the new Horse Guards in 1756, the office was removed to the southeast corner room on the second (first) floor. The records, covering the period from 1721 to 1835, were transferred about twenty-five years ago to the Public Record Office. Volumes from this series are important for the history of the wars in America, as they furnish information regarding the services of British officers there.

1-5. 1751-1773. Deputy Paymaster’s Accounts, etc.: America.

These volumes include various accounts of the deputy paymasters in America during the period named. Vol. 4 begins with 1769—an account of Abraham Mortier of New York with Richard Rigby (paymaster-general, 1768-1782), covering a great variety of expenses, and extends to 1772-1773. In the same volume is Gen. Maturin’s account of extraordinaries, 1772. Vol. 5 contains the account of Maj.-Gen. Wrightson, deputy paymaster of the forces at Martinique, of the expenses of the expedition under Maj.-Gen. Monckton, 1761-1763. These volumes contain little information except of a financial character, i.e., ordinary and extraordinary expenses, but they do give details regarding works, barracks, the movement of troops, and the like, and are quite likely to be useful in furnishing exact information not otherwise obtainable.

70-72. 1753-1777. Extraordinaries in North America.

Huge volumes containing notes, warrants and by whom drawn, objects of warrants, and dates. Many of the items of expense are interesting, and many of the statements here made are of historical importance. For example, among the items are payments to Loyalists with names and dates. The accounts are by years.

These volumes contain the king's account current with the Bank of England and the record of the disbursement of money received by virtue of letters of privy seal and Treasury directions. They concern only such payments—to contractors, agents, staff officers and others—as were made directly from the king's account.

These entry books contain copies of letters, signed, sealed, witnessed, and delivered in America, conferring powers of attorney on some one in England to receive from the Treasury the pay or emolument due, or to contract for clothing for the regiments, or to make over the off-reckonings or clothing money to such person as the one empowered should see fit. The volumes contain also copies of letters given by persons leaving England for an extended stay in the colonies empowering some one to manage their affairs in England; and authorizations from the colonies instructing the Treasury to make payments to agents, as in the case of the money voted by Parliament to Massachusetts, Connecticut, Virginia, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, New York, and Pennsylvania. Among the entries are letters of administration, king's sign manuals, bonds, instructions from the paymaster-general to deputies, articles of agreement with contractors and others, etc.

The off-reckonings consisted of an allowance for the colonel in command of a regiment, marine or other, to maintain the uniforms of his men, which consisted of coat, waistcoat, breeches, shoes, stockings, and gaiters. The money thus allowed was not specifically appropriated for the purpose, but was obtained by a twenty-five per cent. stoppage on the soldier's pay, taken half yearly at midsummer and Christmas. Hence the off-reckonings were sometimes defined as "pay stopt from the poorer part of the army for their clothing". Abuses arose in the manipulation of these allowances, the most serious of which was the prevailing practice of receiving off-reckonings according to the number of men that should be in a regiment and paying out according to the number that was actually there, and the regiments rarely if ever had their full complement of men. The colonel pocketed the difference. No attempt seems ever to have been made by the paymaster-general to ascertain whether or not the actual men in the regiment conformed to the muster-rolls, and the fault lay of course with the commissary of musters, who, it is said, was frequently bribed by the colonel and other officers. 1 When the regiments

1 "Ought these colonels to put so much of the nation's money in their pockets, when they do so little service and run so little danger for it; at a time when England is so much in debt; and it is self demonstrable, the clothing service can be performed for so much less, as the clothiers give for presents. No doubt but those clothiers have also a round profit by the bargain they take in hand, or they would hardly bid so high for them." Foreman, A Letter to Walpole (1732). Foreman recommends that the off-reckonings be abolished and that "a fund be fixed in lieu of them, no more than sufficient for clothing the army", pp. 29, 34. The reference to "little service" and "little danger" is were in North America or the West Indies, the colonels profited by the difference in exchange, and it was not difficult for them, when so far away, to increase that profit by the insertion in the rolls of fictitious names or the retention there of the names of officers and soldiers that were dead.

The assignments took the form of authorizations to the regimental agent in England to supply clothing or to contract for its supply. They are of very little importance.

The assignee, in this case Calcraft, was the regimental agent in England. The entries cover all troops serving in America—regiments of foot, four companies at New York, three companies in South Carolina, one company at New Providence (Shirley's), and one at Bermuda (Popple's).

There are no in-letters or out-letters among the paymaster's papers. That such must have existed is not only likely from the nature of the business of the office but is demonstrated from references in other correspondence to letters so written.

to the fact that marine colonels, lieutenant-colonels, and majors did not accompany their detachments to sea.

The practice of signing muster-rolls by commissaries, without seeing the troops, was well known and is supported by ample evidence. Report (1746), pp. 73-78. The same report brings out the laxity of the comptrollers of the army, whose business it was to be a check upon the commissaries of musters, but who had never, according to the witness of their secretary, made any attempt (in twenty-six years) to obviate frauds in musters. TREASURY PAPERS.

INTRODUCTION.

The Exchequer in Norman days was one aspect of the curia regis, and though in the twelfth century it had begun to have a distinct organization, it did not separate from the curia regis until after the time of the Dialogus de Scaccario. This document does show, however, a distinct departmental exchequer, that is, the court in session dealing with questions of finance. At its head, as president, sat the Justiciar, with the Chancellor on his left. On his right, once removed, sat the Treasurer and with him were grouped those who had strictly to do with matters of account. The Chancellor seems to have been present as a control or check upon the Treasurer, and when in the reign of Henry III. he severed his connections with the Exchequer, he turned over his duties to a special exchequer chancellor, to whom the Treasurer was instructed to deliver the seal of the department.

The court of Exchequer, as a distinct financial body dealing with the king’s revenue and debts, consisted of two branches, the administrative and the judicial. The administrative branch had (1) its exchequer of account, of which the King’s Remembrancer and the Lord Treasurer’s Remembrancer were the most important officials, the duties of whom were to recover the king’s occasional debts and regular duties, such as rents, fines, amercements, issues, etc.; and (2) its exchequer of receipt, comprising the auditors and the treasury of receipt where the money was received and paid out. The judicial branch consisted of the Lord Treasurer, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and three or four lords, who sat as a court of revenue and a court of equity to adjust and recover the king’s revenue or any goods or chattels belonging to the crown. Though designed as a court dealing with cases in which only the king’s debtors were concerned, it came by process of legal fiction to consider all sorts of personal actions, a result which transformed it from a court of equity into a court of common law held before the Treasurer and the lords only. Any person might file a bill there, though technically he had to be construed as a king’s debtor in order to do so.

After the fourteenth century, when the separation between the administrative and judicial branches was effected, the Exchequer formed a definite financial department at the head of which was the Treasurer. This official was the King’s Treasurer, without control over expenditure, either of the king himself or of any of the royal officials. He was responsible to the king for the revenues due and for the smooth working of the Exchequer machinery. The king, by virtue of his prerogative, controlled the revenue, the administration, the army and navy, and the judicial system, and the Treasurer was simply his servant to do his bidding. Parliament alone could restrain the royal will. Such was the position of the Treasurer until after the revolution of 1688, not the head of a department, but the financial servant of the king.

After 1500 the Treasurer’s office increased steadily in importance, until in Elizabeth’s reign he who had been known only as the King’s Treasurer was transformed into the Lord High Treasurer, just as the King's Secretary had developed into the principal Secretary of State. In rank the Treasurer stood next to the Lord Chancellor. He and the lords under him, all of whom were appointed by the king, constituted the department exercising financial control, as contrasted with the Exchequer proper which was the department of account and receipt. These two departments, which were not departments at all in the modern sense of the word, remained united until 1612 when, the office of Lord Treasurer being for the first time put in commission, they were separated. This separation became complete after the Restoration, when the Treasurer was given an office in the Cockpit, Whitehall, while the Exchequer remained at Westminster, where the records and the money were kept.

From this period, therefore, the Treasury as distinct from the Exchequer began its separate existence.

Before 1714, the head of the Treasury was the Lord High Treasurer, although several times in the Stuart period the office was put in commission (placed in the hands of a group of commissioners), notably after the death of the Earl of Southampton in 1667, when the Treasury as an independently organized department takes it origin and the minutes of the Treasury Board as a regular series begin. The last acting Lord High Treasurer was Robert Harley, earl of Oxford, who retired from office on July 30, 1714. His place, filled for two days only by the Duke of Shrewsbury, was, on the accession of George I., taken permanently by a board, consisting of a First Lord of the Treasury, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and three junior lords. These five men met generally on four days in the week, frequently sitting twice on the same day, and under them was a secretary, generally known as the Secretary to the Treasury.

Before 1680 the King in Council had entire control over estimates and apportionments. This control it exercised in various ways.

I. It ordered the Lord High Treasurer to carry out certain instructions; to prepare a privy seal for the payment of certain money;
   to prepare a warrant for the king's signature.

II. It referred business to the Lord High Treasurer for consideration and report;
    for action without report;
    for reference to other departments and report, or for action without report;
    for a hearing of the petitioner with report or action without report;
    or with instructions to do as he thought fit.

III. It received original recommendations from the Lord High Treasurer, of which it approved or disapproved or to which it consented with the approval of the Lord High Treasurer.

After 1680 the Treasury was again put in commission and the Privy Council issued fewer orders and more instructions. It is evident that in its commission the board had received powers rendering it partly independent of the Council. This independent position was definitely established after 1714.

Until the period of the Commonwealth taxes were granted to the king and added to his own revenues, forming a fund or group of funds that he controlled as he would his private purse. The king, without interference from any one, met both the royal and the national expenses. After 1660, the same practice was continued, though occasional efforts were made by Parliament to define the object for which a specified appropriation was made. After 1689 Parliament took into its own hands the control of the finances and in 1694 established the Bank of England as the depository of funds. Thus it took from the Exchequer the duty of guarding the actual money, and eventually reduced that office to an impotent and useless organ of financial administration. By the middle of the eighteenth century the auditorship of the Exchequer had become a sinecure office worth £8000 a year. As a result of this differentiation of function, three interdependent but separate branches were created: the Treasury, the board of control, in the Cockpit; the Exchequer, the department of audit and receipt, in New Palace Yard and later in Whitehall Yard; and the Bank of England, the place of deposit, first in Grocer's Hall till 1734 and afterward in Leadenhall Street. All receipts were kept as separate funds against which charges were made, involving an enormous amount of complicated clerical machinery. The financial methods prevailing during the colonial period were antiquated and cumbersome, but it was not until after 1787 that a single consolidated fund was established, into which all receipts from every source were turned. The Exchequer was abolished in 1834.

Under Charles II., when the modern treasury system was evolved, the Treasury Board sat in two capacities, executive and administrative, and it continued to exercise these functions throughout the colonial period.

In its executive capacity, the board considered questions of finance, debts, loans, petitions, requests, approvals, appointments, etc. Its activities in these particulars gave rise to the minute books and the original correspondence. The first, at the beginning, are fairly full and informing, but later they become meagre and perfunctory. The second are of great value throughout our entire period. The meagreness of the minute books forces the student to search elsewhere for information. The board kept a series of registers and reference books that contain lists of documents read, and frequently bear, as endorsements, the resolutions of the board. These books are valuable as supplementing the minute books and as giving a key to the contents of the original correspondence.

In its administrative capacity, the board kept a series of books, in which were entered the warrants or orders by means of which expenditure was controlled. The money books contain orders emanating from the Lords of the Treasury and addressed to the auditor of the receipt of the Exchequer, authorizing that official to draw an order for the payment of a certain amount of money to a certain person. Though privy seals for money always began in the Treasury, whence the first warrant issued, countersigned by the board, all Treasury warrants theoretically rested upon a royal order, either a letter of privy seal, a letter of privy seal dormant, a general letters patent dormant, or a royal sign manual. These warrants, which concern every branch and species of Treasury payment, begin with 1660, though the regular series dates from 1676.

The order books contain the entries of the orders drawn by the auditor on receipt of the Treasury warrants and returned to the board for verification and signature. Such orders always recited the authority by which they were paid. After the order was entered in the Treasury book it was forwarded to one of the tellers of the Exchequer on whom it was drawn. The order was also entered in the books of the Pells Office. Of the three series of order books thus established, that of the Treasury is the most valuable historically, though it does not begin until the inauguration of the new system of Treasury bookkeeping in 1667. The disposition books contain entries of the letters drawn by the board, before sending the final order to the teller, stating from which fund the money was to be paid. There existed a bewildering variety of separate funds, and these books are difficult to use and are of relatively less importance historically than are the others.1

Of all the departments constituting the British system from 1660 to 1783, none was so imperious and dictatorial and none so intimately connected with the routine of government as was the Treasury. Its correspondence included the Privy Council, the Secretary of State, the Commissioners of the Customs, the Ordnance Office, the Admiralty, the Commissioners of the Navy, the paymaster of the forces, the excise commissioners, office for taxes, the procurator general and other legal officers, the various auditors and receivers of accounts at the Exchequer, the auditor general of plantation revenues, the commissary of prisoners, the commander-in-chief in America, the commissary-general, colonial agents, many contractors and purveyors, and a miscellaneous body of correspondents in America, particularly those connected with royal revenues and expenditures there, such as the surveyor of customs and the surveyor of the woods. The board made up elaborate reports from its records and sent them to Parliament, the Privy Council, and the Board of Trade, and it took into consideration any matters that might be referred to it from one or other of these bodies. It received a great many petitions, memorials, and proposals from the colonies on its own account, and dealt with them either directly or after consultation with the Board of Trade, the auditor general, or the Commissioners of the Customs. It shared with the latter the control of the customs establishment in America, had general oversight of the acts of navigation, and was in communication with governors and other officials in America regarding matters of trade and revenue. It drafted, or had the Commissioners of the Customs draft, that part of the governor's instructions which related to the due execution of the acts of Parliament. It wrote to the collectors of customs in America, and after 1767, when the American Board of Customs Commissioners was established in Boston, it received directly from that board information regarding the customs affairs of all the colonies except Jamaica and other West India islands, which continued to correspond with the authorities in England. It received shipping returns from the naval officers, and reports, when it could get them, from the collectors. It drafted warrants and commissions, and the former, which were sometimes prepared as a preliminary step to the issue of a letters patent or a privy seal, concerned salaries, contracts, money grants, and remittances, allowances for civil establishments, expenses of all kinds, distribution of prize money, and the like. It received great numbers of accounts from the Commissioners of the Customs, not only in England but in Ireland also.

The Treasury had under its charge not only the Board of Customs, but also the commissariat and the transport service, the Post-Office, the auditor general of the plantations revenues,2 the Registry Office,3 and such occasional commissions as those appointed to investigate the Royal African Company, American Loyalist claims, and East Florida compensation claims,4 and it made all payments resulting from the work of these commissions. It received reports from Blathwayt, Walpole, and Cholmondley, auditors of the plantation revenues; it came into touch with the Bishop of London regarding the allowance of £20 made to clergymen going to the plantations, and with the Lord Chamberlain in connection with communion plate given to Anglican churches in the colonies or loaned to them from the royal Jewel House. All accounts of money spent were settled by declaration before the Lord High Treasurer, the First Lord, or the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and were duly registered in the series of Declared Accounts. The formal declaration, engrossed at the Audit Office from the statement sent in by the person responsible for the expenditure, was returned from the Treasury after declaration and preserved in the Audit Office. A parchment copy went to the Exchequer for enrollment and for preservation in the Pipe Office in Gray’s Inn Lane. The Treasury had its own solicitor, whose office was in Whitehall and whose business it was to prosecute law-suits in the Exchequer Court or elsewhere.

The relations between the Treasury and the Board of Trade were always intimate. The Treasury frequently called on the board for information, and received from the board many appeals from colonial officials regarding their claims, a persistent source of trouble, for the Treasury was constantly in arrears of payment. In time of war it was confronted with that most difficult of colonial questions, the question of protection, and it was accustomed to call for all the information it could obtain regarding the state of the colonies, the number of troops needed, the kind and quantity of arms and ammunition, and the time necessary to supply adequate forces for an expedition. It obtained such information chiefly from the Board of Trade, and handed on the information thus obtained to the Ordnance Board or the Secretary at War with suitable recommendations. It played a large part in the business of apportioning the various Parliamentary allowances to those colonies that took part in colonial military undertakings, though it left to the board the general control of disbursements, carrying out such recommendations as the board saw fit to make.

The relations between the Custom House and the Board of Trade were equally close. At the request of the latter the Board of Customs sent in reports of all kinds, furnishing information regarding exports and imports—of hemp, beaver, hats, rice, etc.—often going back many years for its data. These customs reports have a special value owing to the scarcity of custom house material, large masses of which were destroyed when the Custom House was burned in 1814. Inasmuch as the Customs Board in England was responsible for the enforcement of the navigation acts, having a special official on its establishment for that purpose, and inasmuch as it had under its control the appointment of customs officials in America, it was inevitable that its relations with the Board of Trade should be frequent and regular. The Treasury, the Board of Customs Commissioners, and the Board of Trade shared, therefore, the management of the customs system in America. As the governors acted the part of colonial agents in the enforcement of the navigation acts, their instructions on this point and on all matters relating to trade and commerce, though drafted by the Board of Trade and issued by the King in Council, were either written in the first instance by the Commissioners of the Customs or revised by them at the request of the board. Sometimes the two boards met and considered important details, each board giving the other valuable and helpful information. At the same time the Board of Trade used many of the customs officials in America as agents for the obtaining of direct information. Quary, Randolph, Fitzwilliam, and others, though in no way responsible to the Board of Trade, sent it long letters, frequently biased and exaggerated, but always valuable.

Introduction

Of equal importance, though in a different way, were the relations of the Treasury with the Post-Office. The Treasury appointed the post-office officials, such as the deputy postmasters in America, though probably lesser postmasters, commanders of packet boats, etc., were commissioned by the postmasters general, who also issued all necessary orders and instructions. The postmasters general sent many letters, reports, and memorials to the Treasury and received from it warrants, instructions, and orders in return. They also received any petitions or other similar papers that came into the hands of the Treasury bearing on postal business, and were required to make reports or representations thereon. With other departments the postmasters stood in equally close business relations, for the general Post-Office had under its charge all that concerned communication with the colonies, as far as letters and transmissions were involved. The Post-Office building, during the eighteenth century, was in Lombard Street on the south side.

Outside the Treasury, but in close connection with it, was the office of the paymaster-general of the forces, a post of ministerial rank and political importance.

Before the destruction of the palace of Whitehall in 1698, the Treasury had its chambers in the building that lay between the Banqueting Hall and the privy garden, though the Lord High Treasurer seems to have had an office in Wallingford House during the reign of Charles I., and again after the Restoration when Clifford was Lord Treasurer. After 1700, the Treasury Chambers were located in the Cockpit, but in 1733 a handsome stone building was erected, from designs by Kent, one of the surveyors of the Board of Works, facing St. James Park and the Horse Guards Parade, and adjoining the Cockpit, which lay between it and the street leading from Charing Cross to Westminster. To this building, which still remains, the Treasury Chambers were confined until the completion, in 1846-1847, of the present structure facing Whitehall and stretching from Dover House to Downing Street, the southern wing of which, erected in 1824-1825, was already occupied by the Privy Council and the modern Board of Trade. At the western end of Downing Street, connected with the Treasury by a passageway, was the home of the First Lord of the Treasury, occupied by Walpole in 1731 and probably by his successors. This residence was remodelled about 1750 and continuous occupancy by the First Lord can be proved from 1772 (Lord North) to the present time.

The books and papers of the Treasury date chiefly from the first years of the Restoration, but it was not until the reorganization of the office in 1667 that orders were issued for a more regular keeping of papers and a more efficient despatch of business. A keeper of the papers was first established in 1726, and the latter were described at that time as being in bags and presses, in a disordered condition for want of a proper place wherein to deposit them, and a fit and able person to collect, sort, digest, and put them in order. New rooms were assigned at that time as a repository for the papers. After the erection of the new Treasury building, the books and papers lay for years neglected and uncared for in the cellars, vaults, and lofts of the Cockpit and the structure facing St. James Park. When at the request of the Lords of the Treasury an assistant keeper of the Public Record Office was sent to examine them in 1842, he found them in a condition discouraging in the extreme. "Many of them had received every injury", says the deputy keeper in his report, "to which papers could be exposed. They were found deposited in lofts and garrets, in vaults and cellars, in dust holes and coal holes", where they were exposed "to dust, dirt, and filth of every description, to damp and rain, and more than all to foul water from the common sewer". Operations upon the worst of these papers afterward were sometimes of "a most tedious and dangerous character, the documents having a peculiarly offensive and fetid odour and being agglutinated or adhering one to another and page by page in such manner as to render the use of a paper knife indispensable in separating them, while the gritty deposit or dust found universally on their surfaces was of a saline, pungent, and irritating character."

The papers and books thus examined from 1842 to 1846 included a large number of the records herein described, many Custom House papers (though 565 volumes of establishment books had been sent to the Custom House in 1835), and the papers of the Royal African Company and the East Florida Claims Commission, which had suffered greatly from the inflow of foul water. All these papers were transferred to the Rolls House in 1846 and 1847, a few of those most offensive and decayed being stored in the loft of the engine house in Rolls Yard. The great mass of Treasury Board papers or original correspondence was removed from the Treasury Chambers in 1846 and 1856 and weeded out by order of the Treasury, pursuant to a report of committee, in September, 1863. Additional papers, of date later than 1783, were transferred in 1851; and in 1852 and 1853 was removed a collection of 850 volumes of Treasury books, which having lain for years in the lofts over the Treasury Chambers had been cleaned and sorted in 1842-1843 by the Treasury clerks, who thought that the books might be of value to the department. These volumes consisted of customs and commissariat books, docket books, various money and warrant books, quarterly and yearly revenue ledgers, and registers of declared accounts. In the collection were a few papers relating to Loyalist and East Florida claims.

With the removal of the last of the papers and accounts of the Treasury solicitor in 1855 and of the original correspondence in 1856, all the volumes and bundles originating with the department of the Treasury and containing material for American colonial history had been placed in the custody of the Master of the Rolls.

AUDITOR GENERAL OF THE PLANTATION REVENUES.

Almost the only administrative official, whose office was called into existence because of England's interest in her colonies, was the surveyor and auditor general of the king's revenues in America, whose duties were much the same as those of the auditors of the Exchequer in England. This office was established in 1680 for the purpose of bringing the royal revenues in the plantations "under a more certain method of account," and for other reasons which may be found stated in the commission ¹ to William Blathwayt, who was the first incumbent. Before that date the method of securing the royal revenues, such as they were, had been very haphazard. In England an office of receiver general of plantation revenues had been erected as early as 1663, granted to Chiffinck and Brown, and sublet to Thomas Povey. ² The revenues aimed at were chiefly those from the West Indies, and at most probably never amounted to much, as the four-and-a-half per cent. was farmed and the returns from other sources were meagre. Still the office was filled and the fees were paid. The question of establishing a more efficient system of collecting the royal revenues in the colonies had been debated in the plantation council in 1663, and the larger question of the enforcement of the navigation acts had been considered by the Council of Trade in 1668, with the result that the Privy Council ordered the farmers of the revenue to send over and make choice in the colony and from time to time commissionate and maintain one or more persons in each plantation, to be approved by the king, to take care that the navigation acts be enforced. ³

Virginia had had a registrar of casks as early as 1639, ⁴ and we read of Claiborne as commissioned by royal patent to receive the quit-rents as early as 1643. Henry Norwood had been made escheator and treasurer by Charles II., while the latter was at Ft. Johnstone in Scotland, Sept., 1650, and by the same patent had been made receiver of the quit-rents. ⁵ Norwood probably exercised none of these functions till after 1660 when he held the office for many years. There was also in Virginia an auditor, Thomas Stegg, jr., ⁶ followed in 1670 by John Lightfoot. In 1669 the farmers in England commissioned Edward Digges, a former governor of Virginia, to carry out the instructions from the Privy Council, and Digges, after a struggle, supplanted Lightfoot and held the office until 1675, when he was succeeded by Giles Bland. After 1680 the office came under Blathwayt’s control. With the auditorship, Digges seems to have combined the functions of treasurer, escheator, and collector. ⁷ There were in the West Indies escheators and receivers of quit-rents and managers of the four-and-a-half per cent. serving under the farmers in England.

The royal revenues in the plantations consisted of the four-and-a-half per cent., the quit-rents, returns from fines, forfeitures, ⁸ and escheats, ⁹ shares in prizes and prize goods, the king’s third share of ships seized for illicit trading, imports on strong liquors and export dues on tobacco, sugar, cocoa, etc., in Jamaica. port dues in Virginia, certain customs dues and receipts at the king’s weigh-house in New York, land returns and whale licenses in Bermuda, licenses on wine and ale houses, though of the former probably there were few if any among the continental colonies—Virginia saying that there were no wine houses in that colony—halves of wrecks, treasure trove, and other d riots of the crown, not claimed by the Admiralty, the two shillings a hogshad from Virginia and Maryland, all mines, and tribute beaver from Indian tribes owing beaver, a revenue that the governor of Virginia claimed as a perquisite of office. The auditor also accounted for proprietary payments from the Jerseys and the Carolinas, which were due the crown under the terms of the charters, and which seem to have been always in arrears. In 1703 the New Jersey prop erties were still owing £260, the payment of which had to be shared by some fifty persons, and in 1704 the Carolina proprietaries owed the crown £93. As in time many of these revenues came to an end or diminished almost to the vanishing point, new activities were discovered by the auditor. He audited, or claimed the right to audit, the revenue accounts of territories in America and the West Indies that had been taken by the enemy and held for a short time or acquired and annexed permanently to the crown. He claimed the right to audit all prize money from prizes taken by His Majesty’s ships in time of war, and the accounts of the commissioners appointed to take charge of prizes captured from the French previous to the declaration of war in 1756. Many of these revenues became in time a negligible quantity, and by 1774 had ceased altogether from the thirteen colonies, but in the early years most of them in one form or another appeared in the reports which the auditor sent to the Treasury.

⁹ Escheats arose on the failure of an heir to the property which was declared a seignory though held in free and common socage, or on a failure to fulfill conditions of a grant, or for felony or treason. In Jamaica escheats when they happened were valued by a jury of twelve men on oath and the amount was paid into the Treasury. Escheats could not be granted away. C. O. 33: 27.

Before 1680 all financial relations with the colonies had been very loosely conducted and the revenues due from the colonies were heavily in arrears. Blathwayt took vigorous hold of the situation. He called the colonial receivers to a sharp accounting, demanded regular statements and the payment of all arrears, stirred up the proprietaries, and forced from Culpeper a surrender of the quit-rents that he claimed from the southern part of Virginia. Then in October, 1681, he appointed his own deputy auditors and drafted rigid instructions for their guidance. From this time forward all deputies were to audit the revenues and render an account twice a year. Their appointment had to be approved by the Treasury, and in the case of a vacancy occurring in the colony, the governor was authorized to appoint a successor, as Gov. Martin appointed Archibald Neilson in North Carolina, who could exercise full powers until the approval or disapproval of the auditor general in England was received. All such appointments in America were only during the pleasure of the higher official in England, and, beginning as early as 1680, service by deputy was allowed, the principal officer remaining in England. From the accounts of his deputies the auditor general made up his report to the Treasury. Occasionally he sent his accounts to the commissioner of public accounts, and, as in the case of all officials handling money, he made the usual declaration before the Lord High Treasurer, or the Chancellor of the Exchequer, through the Audit Office. He received from the Privy Council

1 Acts Privy Council, Col., vol. III., § 303.
2 Henry McCulloh, who had had an unpleasant experience as receiver of quit-rents in the Carolinas, wrote in 1755 of the duties incumbent on the auditor or his deputies in the plantations as follows:
through the Treasury or directly from the Treasury itself all petitions from America relating to revenue and financial questions, and he reported on these petitions in writing to the board. He was occasionally called upon to attend the meetings of the board, to answer questions and to furnish information. The office was no sinecure in Blathwayt’s day; his reports display an intimate knowledge of colonial affairs, as far as such knowledge could be obtained from the sources at his command, and he corresponded extensively with governors and other officials in all parts of the colonial world. His successor, Walpole, seems to have confined his activities to his reports, of which many are extant, while the last auditor, Cholmendeley, certainly drew a revenue from the office out of all proportion to the work he performed.

Blathwayt belonged to an office-holding family. His uncle was Thomas Povey, who had been a member of the plantation council of 1660, treasurer to the Duke of York, receiver general of plantation revenues in 1663, and receiver general and treasurer of the affairs of Tangier. He was a cousin of John Povey, secretary of the Lords of Trade until 1696. He himself held many offices. He was auditor general from 1680 to 1717, secretary of the Privy Council and the Lords of Trade, Secretary at War, and member of the Board of Trade. Before his death, a reversionary grant of the auditor’s office was made to Horatio Walpole, younger brother of Robert Walpole. After Blathwayt’s death in August, 1717, a patent was issued to Walpole, October 16, and a commission the next day, conferring on him the office of auditor which he held until his own death in 1757. During that time he served in many important diplomatic capacities, was for a while secretary to the Treasury Board and cofferer of the household, but it cannot be said that he allowed his duties as auditor to interfere with his manifold other activities.

The value of the auditorship as a post of light duties and large pay appears from the fact that as soon as Walpole entered upon the office a reversionary

“They ought to give in charge to the receivers of his Majesty’s revenues in the colonies respectively, a schedule or rent roll of all the money to be collected by them.

“And then it becomes the duty of the receiver or receivers to return to the auditor or his deputy a specifick account, not only of the persons from whom they receive any money, for the use of the crown, but also in what proportion they have paid, whether in whole or in part, and what further to return a list of all such persons as have not paid any part or proportion of the chief rents, or any other revenues arising to the crown, distinguishing the places of their abode. And when such persons as are upon the receiver’s list are non residents or not to be found, from the defects which have been in the records, in such case they are to be marked or dotted accordingly, that proper steps may be taken thereupon to enforce the payment of his Majesty’s revenues. And unless this method is observed, the receiver’s accounts cannot be properly checked.

“And after the receivers have observed the said rules or methods of proceeding, then it becomes the duty of the auditor to make a brief declaration of every [one] of his receivers accounts, and to shew the last year’s arrearages, for the allowance or disallowance of the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty’s Treasury on that head; and if this is omitted, the auditors or the receivers, as either are in fault, are liable to be prosecuted, and to forfeit their commissions.

“How far the above regulations have been complied with or whether the receivers of his Majesty’s revenue in America have acted agreeably to their duty, in regularly transmitting their accounts home to the auditor, will appear by the dates, and likewise by their accounts. And whether the auditor general hath had any objection to the said receivers accounts, or endeavored to correct the same, or laid the said receivers accounts before the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, for their lordships allowance or disallowance of them, may be known to those who have the power to examine into this matter.” A Miscellaneous Essay concerning the Courses pursued by Great Britain in the Affairs of her Colonies (London, 1755), pp. 104-117.

grant of it was obtained by George, Lord Newburgh, poet and general, later George, second earl of Cholmondeley, to take effect on Walpole's death. Cholmondeley himself died in 1733, but already on August 14, 1732, he had willed the office to his youthful grandchildren, Frederick, afterward Lord Viscount Malpas, and Robert, passing over their father George, the third earl, who became lord privy seal in 1735 and was still living in 1760. The bequest, which was secured by letters patent September 6, 1732, was designed as a provision sufficient to render all further assistance to the grandchildren unnecessary. Lord Malpas died in 1751, and his brother, who had become the Hon. and Rev. Robert Cholmondeley, surrendered the office on October 14 of that year, receiving it back by letters patent bearing date November 20 (Patent Rolls, 5 George II., pt. II., p. 20). When Walpole died in 1757 Cholmondeley became possessed of the office, after waiting for it twenty-five years, and he held it largely as a sinecure throughout the remainder of the colonial period. In 1770 one Bradshaw received a patent in reversion of the auditorship for his own life and the lives of his two sons, but he died before Cholmondeley, and the extinction of the office deprived his sons of their expected emoluments.

Robert Cholmondeley had a chequered financial career. He does not appear to have possessed means of his own, and until 1755 seems to have been dependent on his income as a clergyman. But he had influential friends and relatives. His father was chancellor of the court of the duchy of Lancaster, and after retiring in 1742 obtained for his son the reversion of the office of clerk or prothonotary of the court, to go into effect on the death of two incumbents, one of them also a Cholmondeley. Unhappily for Robert Cholmondeley's expectations, this event did not take place until after 1783, so that until 1757 Cholmondeley lived under the hope, long deferred, of two reversions. The situation was relieved in 1755, when Lord Edgcumbe, who had succeeded the elder Cholmondeley in the chancellorship, presented Robert Cholmondeley with two rectories or livings in Herefordshire. The revenues from the glebe lands, tithes, rights, and appurtenances of these livings, added to the income from the auditorship, placed Cholmondeley in affluent circumstances, but he maintained a scale of expenditure which after 1774, when the troubles in America deprived him of most of the advantages of the auditorship, brought him to bankruptcy. Hoping that the suppression of the rebellion would restore to him the emoluments of the office, he continued his usual mode of living, until in 1780 he had incurred debts to such an extent as to compel him to leave the country. To meet his obligations he made over the reversion of his office of prothonotary, the rectory and livings, and the office of surveyor and auditor for the benefit of his creditors, and did not return to England till 1784. He promptly laid a claim for losses due to the American Revolution before the Commission on American Loyalist Claims, and received at the hands of the commission compensation at the rate of £400 a year. He died June 5, 1804, in his seventy-seventh year.

In 1711 Blathwayt reported that his own salary amounted to £600, made up of £150 paid from Barbadoes, £100 from the Leeward Islands, £150 from Jamaica, £100 from Virginia, and five per cent. of the New York revenues, apparently valued at the same sum. He complained, however, that the amounts were in arrears and that he had little expectation of payment from Barbadoes, Leeward Islands, or Virginia. In Walpole's time the amount was not less than £800, as after 1730 each of the Carolinas paid £100, and there were contingent receipts in the form of fees. But according to Cholmondeley's statement, made to the claims commission in 1787, the salary during his incumbency amounted to £950, the Virginia fees (averaging the years from 1750 to 1759) to £636, those from Carolina, New York, and Georgia to £300, the Jamaica allowance to £100, and the whole to £1836, of which less than £500 went for clerk hire. Probably Cholmondeley exaggerated the total, as it was to his advantage to make his losses appear as serious as possible, but even at best the value of the office was very great when compared with the work which the incumbent performed. There are very few reports from Cholmondeley among the Treasury papers and little evidence that he had much work to do.

Mention is made in various places of the "auditor general's office", of the various clerks of that office, and of the books and papers thereto belonging. Though Blathwayt had his private house in the country, he occupied, when in town, quarters in the neighborhood of Wallingford House (on the site of which the present Admiralty is built), and, it may be, held a lease of Little Wallingford House, which George I. in 1724 granted to his son, Lieut.-Col. Blathwayt. If so, probably the Auditor's Office was located there. Blathwayt accumulated large quantities of papers, some of which are in the British Museum, others in the Public Record Office, while the bulk of the collection was taken to Dyram House, Gloucestershire, probably on his retirement from active life in 1710.

Walpole in 1727 acquired a lease of the property on the corner of Downing Street and the "Great Area", which had been the western part of Lord Rochester's house, of which King's Gate till 1723 and the part later occupied by the Board of Trade had formed the remaining portions. On this site Walpole built a house, which must have been used for an office also, for he had a deputy and clerks, and kept books, the present whereabouts of which are unknown. There are no Walpole papers of value for colonial history except such as exist among the Treasury series. Cholmondeley, likewise, has left no papers, except the reports, comparatively few in number, among the Treasury in-letters. An explanation of this fact may be found in the statement made in 1787 that "his papers relating to his receipts and payments [were] in his distress mislaid and lost", and again that "the greatest part of his papers had been lost when a sudden necessity of quitting the country threw all his property into confusion." We know that Walpole kept books of the four-and-a-half per cent. and of the entries for the affairs of New York, and it is probable that both Walpole and Cholmondeley kept a record of all the 1 Blathwayt's Journal, III. 52-53, cf. 61-68. In 1727 the New York assembly flatly refused to pay the 5 per cent. allowance, though Governor Clarke in his letter to the Board of Trade said that the amount had been regularly paid for forty years. N. Y. Col. Docs., VI. 94. Later the payment was changed to a salary of £100 stg., but it is doubtful if this sum was regularly paid as a whole. Ibid., VIII. 454.

2 Cholmondeley gave in his statement the figures covering the fees from the 2s. per hhd. and the quit-rents for each year from 1749 to 1758. He estimated the corresponding fees from the Carolinas, New York, and Georgia at £400 but "to avoid all possibility of an overcharge" he placed them at £300. The fees from other places he deemed inconsiderable.

3 The Blathwayt correspondence preserved at Dyram Park was sold at Sotheby's in April, 1910. An additional lot, from the Phillipps Collection, was sold by the same firm in May, 1913. The descriptions of these papers contained in Sotheby's catalogues of the sales give an excellent idea of their value.
revenues, and entry books of reports, petitions, and letters. Of such books no trace remains. There is some reason to believe that Cholmondeley had an office at or near the Plantation Office in the Treasury, as he speaks of himself in one report as the "auditor of the Plantation Office" and he dates one of his reports from the "Plantation Office". His payments of deputies' salaries shows that he had clerks.

IN-LETTERS.

319-623. 1746-1785. Original Correspondence or Treasury Board Papers.

The Treasury Board papers have been calendared through the year 1745, therefore the description of these papers here begins with the year 1746.

At present the arrangement of the papers in the bundles is partly chronological and partly by subject, while a rough form of classification by geographical sections, Scotland, Ireland, the colonies, has been introduced, but not very strictly adhered to. The present distribution of papers is in a measure haphazard, as many documents that belong together have become scattered, and enclosures are mentioned that are either lost or separated from the enclosing letter. Furthermore the dates of the documents do not always correspond to the dates of the bundles, though in the main the chronological grouping can be relied on. The average number of bundles to a year is between seven and eight and because of the system of classification adopted documents relating to the colonies are apt to be found somewhat grouped together in given bundles. But this grouping is incomplete, as all the bundles contain one or more documents of importance. The total number of documents that bear directly or indirectly upon American history is very great as the following lists will show. The Minute Book, which stands to the In-Letters as does the Journal to the papers of the Board of Trade, should always be consulted, not only for the discussions that took place at the meetings, but also for decisions that have sometimes failed to be endorsed on the original documents.

The documents are of so varied a character as to render a general description of little value. Therefore the plan has been adopted of listing in detail the contents of each bundle, as far as they concern our subject, by means of rapid summaries of the subject-matter. The numbers in parentheses, accompanying the present numbers of the bundles, represent the former arrangement, which remains unchanged except in this particular.

Forbes, commander-in-chief of the expedition to the Ohio and Fort du Quesne in 1758, with a letter from Barrington to the Treasury, Apr. 3. Forbes states “That your memorialist immediately repaired to Philadelphia the place of Rendezvous and with the utmost expedition assembled his troops, But had the mortification to discover disagreement, constant jarring, and animosity among the troops of the different provinces, and coolness and dispondency in the Indians. He first applied himself to remove the difficulties by reconciling his men to one another and to the service they were going on. For this purpose he took a house and kept open table at Philadelphia; he had the leading men of the different provinces constantly with him; he made them acquainted with one another, and by degrees had the good fortune to introduce harmony and unanimity amongst them.” Barrington’s letter is an important declaration of War Office policy.

Some War Office estimates and Barrington papers (scattered).
Inventory of the clothes of James Dundas, master of the Gaspee, which were burned.
Vicualling and ordnance papers. All the bundles of the Revolutionary period contain large numbers of ordnance, vicualling, and subsistence papers that are often of value as showing the condition of the army and the system of organization. Sometimes they give information that is worth while, particularly about the food and clothing furnished, character, quantity, and regularity or irregularity of the supply. They give also information as to the system of distribution, methods of payment, and the contracting business generally, and they deal with the movements of vessels, and with trade, transport, smuggling, and the like. Some of the letters from subordinate officials, such as the collectors, comptrollers, superintendents, and surveyors, in Canada and the West Indies as well as elsewhere, contain details and comments that are informing and suggestive. We have too long got our knowledge of the events of the Revolution from American sources only.
The other side should have a hearing, and all this material is deserving of an examination. These letters were written by British officials from all over the colonial territory, particularly from ports and colonies held by the British, and they show the difficulties, financial and commissarial, under which the British forces in America labored.

REGISTER: ALPHABETICAL-NUMERICAL.

A useful series of small square indexes to the documents. Three volumes cover the period to 1783; thirteen to 1789; forty-eight to 1803, etc. Generally two volumes are given to a year, one alphabetical, the other numerical or chronological. As a register the series is often general in the form of its entries and does not give detailed lists of documents. Each volume is indexed by proper names. The volumes from 1783 to 1803 are of value in that they record claims of Revolutionary origin that were not settled until after the peace. They are consequently well worth examining, though the references to American matters are not numerous.

INDEXES: REFERENCE BOOKS.

The system of separate reference books seems to have been adopted in 1676, but the earliest volume is missing. These books contain an entry of such papers as were referred by the Treasury Board to some official or department for report and advice. Papers were referred to the Customs Commissioners, the Excise Commissioners, the Mint, the Navy Board, the Office of Taxes, the Pay Office, the Secretary at War, the solicitor, the procurator general, etc., but the official who received the greatest number of petitions from the colonies was the auditor general. Some of the petitions were sent from the Privy Council or the Board of Trade to the Treasury and by the latter sent on to the department or official interested. The dates indicate when the paper was referred. The list given below includes, it is believed, every plantation memorial or other paper contained in vols. 2-6 and 12 that was thus referred.

3. Account by Randolph of £471 expended by him for the king's service in New England (p. 28). Mar. 9, 1685.

Petition, "Mr Randolph", for license for the ketch William of Barbadoes for two men and a boy to sail her home (p. 302). Mar. 10, 1690.
Petition, Edward Randolph, for position as collector and receiver general of customs and revenue in the province of New York, made vacant by the death of Chidley Brooke (p. 317). May 11, 1691.
Petition, West India merchants, and planters concerned in and trading to the plantations, regarding new duty on ginger (p. 325). July 9, 1691.
Petition, Edward Randolph, for remainder due him for masts and bowsprits supplied by him to the navy in 1689 and 1690 (p. 337). Aug. 26, 1691.
Id., to be employed as "surveyor in riding the coast of America which is nearly 2000 miles in extent", Oct. 5, 1691 (p. 343). Referred to the Commissioners of the Customs "to consider and examine the petitioner's fitness for the office and if they have no objection to present him to their Lordships".
Id., regarding the survey of woods in America. "For some years past I was surveyor of woods in the province of Maine and being now appointed surveyor general of their Majesties' customs in North America I have an opportunity to make particular surveys of all the woods growing upon that Continent" (p. 350). Oct. 16, 1691. Referred to Blathwayt; and the petition and Blathwayt's report were referred to the Commissioners of the Customs to report "if it doth not interfere with what is granted to Mr. Brenton".
Order of reference from the Lords of Trade on the case of Nicholas Lawrence et al. concerned in the ketch Salisbury appealing from judgment given in court of assistants, Boston (p. 350). Nov. 20, 1691.

Petition, Henry Rycroft, Mathew Rider, Samuel Allen, and others that their ships may go with the governor of New England (Phips) (p. 364). Jan. 18, 1691.

Proposal concerning the erection of a college in Virginia, together with a report from Blathwayt thereupon (p. 390). Apr. 21, 1692.

Petition, Jamaica merchants, to have 80 or 100 seamen allowed them for the year's trade over and above the 200 already granted (p. 427). Oct. 14, 1692. This was on account of the embargo.

This list of petitions, etc., in vols. 2-6 will give an idea of the general value of these volumes for colonial history. Vol. 12 calls for a special listing.

12. 1758-1788.

Application from Gov. Shirley, for clothing for his regiment, his public table, and his intelligence service (p. 1). Referred to the Secretary at War, Jan. 13, 1758.

Applications (very numerous) from Sir James Colebrooke or his representatives, from Kilby and Baker, and from others who had contracts for victualling the forces in America. Generally speaking these applications are of but little value; occasionally, however, one meets with an interesting bit of information, as when mention is made of the fact that "provisions issued irregularly to his Majesty's troops were destroyed and taken by the enemy in March and August, 1757".

Application of Gov. Reynolds of Georgia for raising a troop of rangers (p. 16).

Id., Alexander Hume, praying for the remission of quit-rents from the lands of his brother, Robert Hume of South Carolina (p. 42).

Id., Joseph Sherwood, agent of Rhode Island, regarding reimbursement of that colony for expenses incurred in 1756 (p. 49; cf. p. 127). Oct. 23, 1760. Connecticut and Massachusetts had been reimbursed but not Rhode Island.

Proposal of Benjamin Martyn, agent for Georgia, that the Earl of Shaftesbury be accepted as his security for £1500 and he himself for £11500 (p. 56; cf. p. 237). Apr. 10, 1761.

Proposal of John Roberts, receiver general of quit-rent in Virginia, regarding security (p. 86).

Id., Charles Garth, agent for Georgia (p. 100).

Id., George Saxby, receiver general of quit-rents, South Carolina (p. 121).

Answer of Joseph Sherwood, agent of Rhode Island, to the objections made by the Secretary at War and the paymaster of the forces to certain of Rhode Island demands (pp. 49, 127). Dec. 7, 1765.

Memorial of Peter DeLancey, inspector of stamps for Quebec, Nova Scotia, and New Hampshire, setting forth that since his appointment he had had no advantage whatever from his office and prays some relief (p. 134). July 11, 1766.

A number of similar memorials follow from British officials in Canada for pay, etc.
William Bowden offered as security for Charles Stewart, paymaster and receiver general of customs in America (p. 152). May 2, 1768.

Memorial of John Mason, trustee and agent for the Mohegan Indians, for cost of prosecuting their appeal (pp. 153, 174). May 26, 1768. Cf., Treas. 1:468.

Memorial of bondsmen of Jared Ingersoll, distributor of stamps, that bond be delivered to them and cancelled (p. 169). May 9, 1770. See Treas. 54:41, 120.

Memorial, merchants trading to the sugar colonies, praying reduction of excise duty on plantation coffee (p. 216). Mar. 11, 1774.

Memorial of Liverpool traders to the West Indies on the failure of the African trade (pp. 249, 301). June 11, 1777.

Memorial, John Bourke, praying for payment for sundry articles sent to the Bahamas for Loyalist refugees settled there (p. 320). Jan. 28, 1784.

These volumes are prefatory to the Registers of Papers that follow. In them few clues are given to the contents of the petitions or letters. The names of the petitioners are arranged alphabetically, the date of each petition is generally given, and a comment of the board is added by way of endorsement. If the petition was discussed before the board the decision will usually be found in the Minute Book. A list of the petitions, etc., relating to colonial affairs is here appended.

The items thus given will show the general character of the collection as far as it relates to colonial history. The actual documents themselves can be found, generally but not always, among the In-Letters.
OUT-LETTERS.

These entry books contain copies of letters which were written and signed by the secretary to the Treasury Board as a result of instructions or orders delivered by the board at its meetings. Many of the earlier letter-books were kept in an irregular manner, so that the dates must be taken as approximate only. The letter-books are divided into three groups, "customs", "general letters", and "various", the lines of division between which do not appear to be very strictly drawn. The volumes are generally indexed, so that if name and date be known the letter sought for can be found. Though the board's replies were frequently formal, a number of details are met with that cannot be obtained elsewhere, particularly in the case of appointments, where the reasons are sometimes given. Taken as a whole, these volumes are important and supplement the In-Letters and the Minute Book.

CUSTOMS.

1-33. 1667-1784. Letters relating to Customs.

The first six volumes of this series, extending from 1667 to 1681, form an earlier group of which only vols. 1, 3, and 4, are of interest for colonial history. These volumes contain material similar to that in the later volumes, only less extensive.

6 and 7 are excise volumes. Beginning again with 8, 1681-1683, the series contains entries relating to the breaches of the acts of navigation, employment of foreign seamen and the like, compositions for running plantation tobacco and frauds in the tobacco trade. It contains letters to the farmers of the customs, to the Commissioners of the Customs in England, and to the collectors and others in America, relating to a great variety of matters—ships, convoys, transportation of bullion, exemption from embargoes, troubles in America, illicit trade. Among the most important documents are the entries relating to the plantation customs establishment; lists of leaves of absence, instructions to collectors, and warrants appointing customs officials—comptroller of the customs, collectors, tide waiters, with place, office, and generally name of predecessor—increasing the plantation establishment by the addition of boats, boatmen, etc., and authorizing the payment of salaries and other expenses.

The entries contain information about such surveyors general as Mein, Quary, Keith, Birchfield, Fitzwilliam, etc., for the southern territory, and Randolph, Bacon, Peagrum, and others for the northern, with orders and instructions. They note the changes of 1767 and include many extracts from the letters regarding the troubles in America after that date. They contain detailed lists of the customs establishment in the plantations, so that it would be possible by means of the warrants and the lists to make out a fairly complete series of appointments, thus supplying information similar to that furnished by the customs rolls in the Declared Accounts series. At the beginning of 26 (1759-1762), continued on p. 456 of the same volume, is a list of the officers of customs, with titles, places, predecessors, if any, date of warrant of each officer for the plantations and England. In 27 (1762-1765) is an important body of instructions issued to the collectors, and rendered necessary by the new customs conditions created by the revenue acts (p. 318).
GENERAL.

1-34. 1668-1783. General Letters.

These volumes are of some importance for colonial history. They contain letters to a great variety of people:

Gen. Amherst regarding bills.
Colebrooke and Hanbury regarding transportation of gold and silver to New York.
John Pownall, secretary of the Board of Trade, regarding Adm. Gambier's extraordinary expenses.
Quit-rents in East Florida.
William Story, who wanted to be customs collector at Newport.
Philip Stevens, secretary to the Admiralty, regarding £36,000 to pay the army in America.
John Pownall regarding Monte Christi trade (many papers).
John Thomlinson, coin to America.
To others regarding payment of forces.
Gov. Murray (Quebec) to aid Tarrant and Cross by going to Quebec to inquire into commercial conditions there.
Other papers regarding quit-rents and appropriations therefrom.
Contraband trade, Rhode Island.
On the bill for the repeal of a part of the act of 1733 (1763) preparatory to the passage of the act of 1764.
On other acts—hemp, whale-fins, beaver hats.
On vice-admiralty. 1764.
Case of the Gaspee.
Complaints on illicit trade from the American Board of Customs Commissioners (1668).
Writs of assistance (English practice, 13, 14 Charles II.).
Case of the seizure of the ship Liberty, etc.

Also letters to the Treasury, which correspond to documents in Treas. 1; letters to the Board of Trade, Admiralty, Privy Council, Commissioners of the Customs, Secretary of State, solicitor of the customs, auditor and receiver of accounts, colonial agents, various American correspondents, contractors and victuallers, paymaster of the forces, army officials, auditor general of plantation revenues, surveyor of woods in America, and sundry private individuals. After 1777 the letters become quite formal.

1, 2, 3. 1763-1778, 1778-1797, 1797-1823. Letters relating to America.

In the indexes to the other entry books, these three volumes are referred to as the "America Books", and the entries in them relate solely to the colonies, from Canada to Tobago. For colonial history their importance, which is very great, ends with 2, 185, where is entered the "revocation of the Commissioners of the Customs for America", Oct. 16, 1783. In the main the volumes are colonial warrant and commission books; the commissions and warrants, letters patent and privy seals, given in full and in form convenient to use, making up the bulk of the entries. They concern governors, captains general, judges of admiralty and other courts, chief justices, registers in chancery, agents, surveyors, naval officers (in the instances where the naval officers were named by the king though constituted under the seal of the colony), attorneys general, postmasters general, and special appointees, such as commissioners of peace and their secretary (Ferguson), in fact all officials whose appointment was in the hands of the crown. The warrants concern contracts, money grants and remittances, allowances for civil establishments, expenses of surveys and maps, grants of shares in condemned vessels, allowances for property seized or damaged, governors’ salaries, and distribution of prize money (2, 160, 165). There are also copies of instructions sent to individuals and officials relative to many matters, such as the outrages at Newport and New London. There are also great numbers of papers relating to the American Board of Customs Commissioners, of first importance as supplementing the documents in Treas. 1.

¹ The term "various" indicates that this group contains letter-books formerly belonging to series that have since been discarded.

MINUTE BOOKS.

1-54. 1667-1783. Treasury Minute Books.

These volumes, which are well indexed and easy to use, contain the minutes of the meetings of the Commissioners of the Treasury or Treasury Board. They note every important matter that came before the board and thus furnish a clue to the character of the documents in the bundles already described. They contain also occasional discussions, observations, depositions, and decisions not found elsewhere, and should always be consulted in conjunction with the original documents. Note especially the reports of the auditor general of the plantation revenues. After 1767 the minute books increase in fullness. In order to supplement the description of the board papers (Treas. 1), a few volumes of the minute books are here examined.

Financial accounts with America.
Memorials for impressment and losses of vessels.
Presents to the Indians and communications from the Superintend-ent of Indian Affairs.
Contracts for provisions.
Letter from Andrew Elliot, collector of customs, New York, giving an account of the measures taken by him while the rebels were in possession of New York. Nov. 30, 1776.
Payments to British officials, civil and military.
Many papers about Loyalists, convicts, the American Board of Customs Commissioners.
Letters from Carleton, Clinton, Dunmore, Gage, Howe, Haldimand, De Brahm, Fraser, Glen.
Papers relating to shipment and insurance of specie and issues of the paymaster-general.

47. Feb.–Nov., 1778.
Many papers regarding Loyalists.
Army contracts and contracts for provisions.
Affairs of Florida, the Ceded Islands, Canada, Nova Scotia.
Vice-admiralty matters.
Many papers regarding Loyalists, with names and business and amount of the allowance made, often accompanied with comments by the members of the board.
Appointments.
Contracts.
Memorial from those concerned in the production of "British plantation cotton-wool".
Letters regarding the Peace Commission of 1778 and communications from Dr. Adam Ferguson, the secretary.

Many papers regarding the Loyalists, of whom a good list could be made up with details of their experiences.
Commissariat matters.
Convoys.
Contracts.
Requests for money from the plantations for salaries, losses, etc.
Reports from various officials.
Petitions regarding losses of provisions seized, vessels impressed or sunk (Maryland, Rhode Island, Mississippi).
Proposals, letters, bills, accounts.
Letter from De Brahm, begging not to be superseded as he cannot return home owing to age and infirmities.
Papers regarding condemned ships, New York vice-admiralty court.
Hurricane in the West Indies.
Indian presents.
Affairs of the American Board of Customs Commissioners.
Letters from Haldimand and Clinton.

In the remaining volumes we have many accounts (estimates chiefly) of losses, arrears, and the like. For extracts from the Minute Books see D. K.
Rept., 7, app. 2, pp. 65-69, and many original "Treasury Minutes" among the Treasury Board Papers.

628. 1771-1777. Copies of Minutes relating to the American War.

This volume is an entry book of the Treasury minutes laid before the House of Commons, Feb. 21, 1771, to Dec. 5, 1777. The minutes record the expenditures for carrying on the war in North America and omit all other matters that came before the board during those years. They concern the cost of provisions, clothing, transportation, camp equipage, and the like.

ACCOUNTS.

These volumes contain the elaborate financial accounts of the Treasury, made up yearly and quarterly, with various declarations, registers, customs accounts, fee accounts, prize accounts, auditor's states of accounts, military and customs establishments, and miscellanea. The number of these volumes is very great, and it is not always easy to determine the exact measure of their value for colonial history.
ACCOUNTS GENERAL: YEARLY.

Income and Expenditure of Great Britain.

Of little importance for our purpose, as the entries make no separate mention of the plantation duty and other royal revenues from the plantations. The imposition on sugar and tobacco is rated and the receipts from the four-and-a-half per cent. are entered.

ACCOUNTS GENERAL: QUARTERLY.

1-328. 1701-1783. Revenue Accounts, Quarterly.

Of greater importance than the yearly accounts. The plantation duty is entered, also the expenses of the Board of Trade, the cost of civil establishments in America, and the salaries of British officials there, as far as they were paid salaries and were not dependent on the fees of their offices or the grants of the colonial assemblies.

ACCOUNTS GENERAL: DECLARATION, AUDITORS.

1-191. Declaration of all the sums received and paid at the receipt of the Exchequer, arranged chronologically, payments rendered at Easter and Michaelmas.

These volumes contain brief declarations of receipts and expenses, among which are occasional items relating to the colonies, for example:

75. Receipts.
Custom bonorum import’ a coloniis Anglic’ . . . . cxxii l. i s. iii d.
Debit’ 4½% at les Leeward Is.
Denar’ pro vendicione agrorum in Insula St. Christopheri.

Expenses.
Horatio Walpole Ar’ supervisor et auditor genl Revenç’ dmi Regis in America de annuitat’ s. ad c l. et cc l. per annum . . . . cxxv l.
Jonathan Forward mercator pro transportation felon’.
R. Rogers As. Capitan Genl et Gubernator in capite de Bahama
Insul’ in America super allocacon.

150. Receipts.
Debit’ super Bon’ a colon’.
4½% a colon’.

Expenses.
Georgio Bisset pro transportation ad Rhode Insul’ ut ministr’.
Edward Ellington pro transportation ad Georgia ut ministr’.
Roberto Cholmondeley arm’, Supervisor et Auditor General Revenç’ Dmi Regis in America.
Also payments to governors of various colonies and to agents of Cape Breton and Newfoundland.
151. Expenses.
   John Tabor Kempe Attornat' General apud New York super allo-cationem s. ad cl l. per annum.
   Willo Tryon, Arm. Gubernator N. Carolinae super allocation' s. ad m l. per annum.

   There are no entries in these volumes of receipts from quit-rents; and no declarations of plantation accounts. Among the items of expense are many payments to clergymen, etc., for costs of transportation to the colonies.

   ACCOUNTS GENERAL: DECLARATION, PELLS.

   1-131. 1636-1783. Declaration of all Receipts and Issues of the Four Tellers of the Exchequer made by the Clerk of the Pells.

   The entries in these volumes correspond to those in the collections of auditors' declarations, and probably duplicate them.

   ACCOUNTS GENERAL: VARIOUS.

   SUMMARY OF REVENUE.

   1. 1636-1638. Summary of Revenue and Expenditure.

   The only colonial commodity mentioned is tobacco, but no clue is given to the amount furnished by the colonies, either individually or as a whole.

   ACCOUNTS DEPARTMENTAL: AUDITORS'

   STATES OF ACCOUNTS.

   79-80. 1776-1786. Auditors' States of Account Books.

   These volumes contain a registration of particular accounts, similar to the registration in the volumes known as "Declaration of Accounts".

   (Formerly Accounts Various, States of Accounts, 267-268.)

   225. 1721-1725. An Account of all Monies which have been issued and paid out of the Receipt of his Majesty's Exchequer to any person or persons on account of the privy purse, secret service, pensions, bounties, or any sum or sums of money to any person or persons whatsoever.

   Under "Gifts and Bounties" are entered allowances to ministers going to America, and royal payments to sundry colonial officials. Id. under "Pensions and Salaries" to governors in the West Indies. Cf. 226.

   (Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 195.)
Accounts

Three documents only, showing the receipts from the four-and-a-half per cent. duty since 1685; from the comptroller general in England, H. Holt.
(Formerly Accounts Various, Customs Accounts, 69 (1).)

254. 1713-1734. Receipts of the Four and a Half Percent. Duties from the several Islands, and Payments into the Exchequer.

"An account of the gross produce, as it comes into England of the Four and a half percent, and how much thereof has been paid into the exchequer for twenty one years, distinguishing each colony and each year."
(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 208 (5).)

255. 1713-1734. Sugar taken in payment for the same.

An account of the quantity of sugar, collected in kind, and the quantity for which money has been paid and received on account of the four-and-a-half per cent. for twenty-one years, together with an account of the expense of the officers and of the other charges in collecting the said duty in Barbadoes and the Leeward Islands, distinguishing each island and each year.
(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 208 (4).)

256. 1720-1727. Instructions from the Commissioners of the Customs to the Surveyor General of the Islands and Establishment there.

A small paper book, containing instructions to the officers of the customs at Barbadoes, and explaining what were the duties of the surveyor general of customs of Barbadoes, Leeward Islands, and Bermuda. At the end is an establishment of the customs officers of these islands, with location and salary and forms of customs papers.
(Formerly Accounts Various, Customs Accounts, 67.)

257. 1723-1728. Accounts of Divers Duties.

An account of cash received on the half-crown levy, etc., by George Plaxton, receiver of Barbadoes.
(Formerly Accounts Various, Customs Accounts, 69 (2).)

Large paper folios containing journals of receipts of the four-and-a-half per cent. duty and of the plantation duty.
(Formerly Accounts Various, Customs Accounts, 67, 68.)

269. 1773-1783. "An Account of the Imports and Exports between that part of Great Britain called England and the British West Indies, for the last ten years, vizt.: from Christmas, 1773, to Christmas, 1783, which is as far as the same can be made up, distinguishing each year and the several articles and the value thereof, and the amount of the duties and drawbacks thereon. Pursuant to an order of the Honorable House of Commons, dated 24 February, 1785, presented to the Honorable House of Commons, 29 April, 1785."
The separate islands are not distinguished, but the articles or commodities are listed under the following heads: Foreign Goods exported (In Time and Out of Time), Goods of English Manufacture exported to the British West Indies, British Subsidy Goods exported to the same. Cf. Custom House, Ledgers of Imports and Exports.

(Formerly Accounts Various, Customs Accounts, 65.)

270. 1775-1833. Divers Accounts of Four and a Half Percent. Duties.

Similar to 258-268.

(Formerly Accounts Various, Customs Accounts, 70.)

277. 1729-1735. Accounts of Quit-Rents, Albemarle County, North Carolina.

Accounts of the receipts of one-half of the arrears of His Majesty's quit-rents for Albemarle County, from Sept. 29, 1729, to Mar., 1732, made up to 1735, and computed at the difference of 7 for £1 sterling in the currency of the province.

The figures are arranged under the following heads: By whom paid, number of years paid, number of acres, quit-rent reserved, amount in sterling money, currency at seven for one, total of currency. The names, which constitute a directory of the landed proprietors of North Carolina in 1735, number over 300, arranged by precincts in alphabetical order—Bertie, Edgecombe, Tyrrel, Currituck, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Chowan. At the end is a debit and credit account, showing the expenditures out of the quit-rents—to Gov. Johnston one-fifth of his salary, Auditor General Walpole's salary, salaries of chief justice, chief baron of exchequer, etc.

(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 34 (5).)

291. 1777-1783, 1787-1789. Account of the Receivers General, Quebec.

Two accounts: one marked A, being the account of William Grant, a deputy to Sir Thomas Mills, from May 1, 1777, to Oct. 31, 1783; the other marked B, being the account of Sir Thomas Mills, receiver general of the province of Quebec, from Oct. 31, 1787, to Oct. 31, 1789.

(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 34 (2).)

"Gross and Net Produce of all the Branches of the Revenue under the Management of the Commissioners of his Majesty's Customs in England."

This volume opens with "The Yearly payments into the Receipt of the Exchequer on all the several branches of the Customs from Michaelmas, 1679, to Christmas, 1710". Among the payments we find the four-and-a-half per cent., 1698-1711, and plantation duty, 1699-1711. Then follows an account of the gross and net produce, beginning with 1710 and extending to 1761. Here too will be found the gross receipts from the plantation duty entered for each year, Christmas to Christmas (no entries for 1738-1741), the salary charge, and the net returns; also the four-and-a-half per cent. for each year; and for the years, 1712-1717, 1730-1732, "Prize Duties from the Plantations".

There are in the British Museum and the Public Record Office many lists making mention of the plantation duty or duty on enumerated commodities in the plantations. The figures do not always agree, but they can probably be reconciled by taking into account the differences in the time of reckoning, whether from Christmas, Jan. 5, Lady Day, or Michaelmas; the period of reckoning, whether yearly, half yearly, or quarterly; and the sum, whether gross or net. The following references may be found useful: Treas. 31, Treas. 38: 258-268, Brit. Mus. (Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 50.)

346-348. 1691-1700. Customs Accounts.

Altogether forty-nine papers.

1. An abstract of the receipts and payments of Her Majesty’s customs, new and additional impositions, Dec. 25, 1701–Mar. 25, 1702 (plantation duty).

2. Receipts and payments of His Majesty’s customs in London and outports, for the year ending Michaelmas, 1695 (no mention of plantation duty).

3. Receipts and payments of His Majesty’s customs for the year ending Michaelmas, 1696 (plantation duty).

5. Receipts and payments . . . of enumerated duties collected in the plantations, Michaelmas, 1696–Michaelmas, 1697 (including a schedule of debts in money and bonds owing his Majesty in money and bonds on the Plantation duty, Michaelmas, 1697, and thirty names of plantation collectors with the amounts entirely in money, for example “Xopher [Christopher] Rousby, Gent, late of Maryland . . . £146.6.5½”; and three names, “on plantation goods in London”, amounts in bonds and money).

6. Schedule of overpayments or of money advanced to his Majesty’s use by several collectors of the customs, etc., over and above their receipts, to Michaelmas, 1697 (Wolstenholme in England, Cranefield in Barbadoes, Payne in Maryland, Carpenter and Nagle in Nevis, and John Custis and William Cole in Virginia). In the same bundle is an abstract account of the debts in money and bonds at Christmas, 1698, and the receipts and payments on the customs and other impositions for the year ended at Christmas, 1699, with the debts then standing out. Enumerated commodities in the American plantations: debts in money at Christmas, 1698, £10259; receipt in money, 1699, £3025; overpayment, Christmas, 1698, £863; payment to the receiver general to Christmas, 1699, £1905; on salaries of the collectors of the outports, £498; incidentals “pr detto” allowed by the Commissioners of the Customs, incents, £156, loss by returns, £443; debts in money at Christmas, 1699, £10282; overpayments at Christmas, 1699, £846.

(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 220.)

357. Receiver General’s Annual Abstracts of Customs and New Impositions, 1746-1780, signed by Robert Townshend to 1759 and W. Mellish or deputy to 1779.

These lists are valuable as giving figures for the gross plantation duty from 1746 to 1780, with the exception of the years 1775 to 1778, reckoning from
Jan. 5. The gross amounts, 1746-1761, agree with the corresponding figures in 340. The lists distinguish between London and the "outports", under which term plantation ports are included, and the figures for both the plantation duty and the four-and-a-half per cent. are given. The figures after 1766 are of particular interest, for in addition to the plantation duty, which diminishes and does not recover until after 1772 (£7378 for 1766; £3910, 1767; £517, 1768; £1075, 1769; £20, 1770; £184, 1771; none, 1772; £277, 1773; £1200, 1779) are given the amounts collected under 4 George III., 6 George III., 7 George III., "Fines and Forfeitures", and for two years, 1769, 1773, "Seizures of Ships of War" (4 George III., c. 15). The amounts collected under 4 George III. are significant, £20,685 for 1767; £14,802, 1768; £6047, 1769; £2526, 1770; £2076, 1771; £736 (+£80), 1772; £2006, 1773; £7699 (+£10026), 1774. The additions in 1772 and 1774 were received from Charles Stuart, cashier and paymaster of the revenues of customs, etc. See A. O. Decl. Acc., 844, 1137.

(Formerly Accounts, Revenue, Miscellaneous, England, 59.)

362-363. 1691-1784. English Customs Accounts of Imports and Exports.

Six bundles containing a great variety of papers, of which the following may be noted.

Fees of officers at the port of London. (n. d.)

H. Holt's account of debts for customs, etc., standing out at Christmas, 1698, containing a report from 37 collectors (names given) of enumerated duties in the plantations. 1698.

A schedule of tobacco bonds, due and unpaid. Mar. 25, 1702. Contains names of each merchant, his security, and the amount due.

An account of the net sums paid into the Exchequer by Henry Ferne, receiver general of customs. 1708-1710. Contains figures for the four-and-a-half per cent., and for the plantation duty before Mar., 1701, since Mar., 1701. In a later paper a special note reads as follows: "The 4½% and enumerated duties collected in his Majesty's islands and plantations in America, the produce whereof is about £7000 per annum". 1715. According to the figures in the lists, as noted above, even the gross amount never amounted to anything like this sum before 1715.

An account of the gross and net produce of several of the branches of the customs. Christmas, 1709, to Christmas, 1715.

Enclosed in this account is a letter from the Commissioner of the Customs, containing the following remark: "Through want of several accounts from the Plantations the gross produce of the enumerated duties cannot be compleated." The account itself gives the figures found in vol. 340, but a line has been drawn through the figures for the four-and-a-half per cent., and a note added: "Through the want of the plantation accounts from Bermudas, Rhode Island, and from other places on the Continent of America the gross produce of the enumerated duties cannot be at present compleated, and by the net produce of that duty is meant only what has been returned to England."

Customs salaries under £100 per annum. The following figures here given are of interest: plantation salaries paid in England, £1005; paid in the plantations, £1890; total, £2895; corresponding total cost for England, £65,680. Plantation salaries paid by incidents (fees), in England, £330; in the plantations, £177; total, £507; corresponding cost for England, £2642.

An account of the quantities of foreign coin and bullion entered for exportation from Jan. 16, 1717, to Mar. 25, 1727, distinguishing each year, and the countries for which the said entries were made. The document is dated, Apr. 3, 1728. The only colonies receiving coin and bullion are the West Indies, New York, Virginia, and Carolina. Amounts small. See later documents, same bundle, for 1722-1727.

An account of what duties are payable for iron imported from the British colonies in America, what quantities have been imported from thence for the last ten years and how much the duties paid for the same amounted to, distinguishing each year.

An account showing the quantity of rice imported and exported from Christmas, 1705, to Christmas, 1712, Carolina showing the largest quantity, but New England, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and Maryland exporting a considerable amount. See also another paper giving the figures for 1721-1723.

363. An account of the numbers of ships and names of the masters that have since Sept. 29, 1730, taken licenses and given bond for liberty to carry rice from Carolina to the southward of Cape Finisterre; and how many of the ships have returned and the masters thereof re-delivered the licenses. Feb. 29, 1732.

An account of the importation and re-exportation of sugars from the British plantations for the last fourteen years, distinguishing each year. Mar. 24, 1732.

An account of the exports to His Majesty's sugar colonies in America, Christmas, 1714, to Christmas, 1726, distinguishing how much by certificate-goods and how much by English manufactures. Apr. 4, 1732.

An annual account of the number of ships with their tonnage that have entered at the several ports of Great Britain from the northern colonies, Christmas, 1720, to Christmas, 1730. Apr. 4, 1732.

Id. from the sugar colonies and the northern colonies respectively. Id. from the sugar colonies.

An account of what sugars have been imported from the plantations and exported to foreign parts for five years past. Feb. 20, 1733.

An account of the whole charge of management of the revenue under the care of the Commissioners of the Customs in England. 1721-1732. Separate lists for the plantations. Total charge for England, £2077,558; for the plantations, £55,129; with this note added: "The several accounts of the collectors in the plantations from Christmas, 1731, to Christmas, 1732, not being yet arrived, the Incidents paid in the plantations for the year could not be completed."

An account of the quantities of sugar imported from Barbadoes, Jamaica, and the Leeward Islands for seven years ending 1729. (See next paper.)

The amount of the value of the exports from England to New York and Pennsylvania, 1708-1709, 1715-1716, 1720-1721, 1728, 1729, distinguishing each year, and particularly what was the amount in each year of the woolen manufacture exported to those provinces. Mar. 17, 1731.

Id. for Maryland, Virginia, and Carolina. Apr. 8, 1731.

Id. for New York, New England, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland, and Carolina. Apr. 21, 1731.

An account of the quantity of sugar imported into England from Barbadoes, Jamaica, and the Leeward Islands. 1714-1726. Apr. 21, 1731.

An account of what quantity of pig-iron has been imported into England from Christmas, 1720, to Christmas, 1730. Feb. 9, 1732. Figures for Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and Carolina (very little).

Id., bar-iron. Figures for Jamaica, Virginia, Maryland, Barbadoes, New England (small amount), Carolina (very small amount).

364. An Account of the Quantity of Tobacco imported into England from any of the Islands in the British West Indies. 1780-1781.

An account of the same, which appears by the clearances not to have been of the growth or produce of those islands nor prize tobacco, for the last four years, ending Jan. 5, 1781. Also id., Jan.-Mar., 1781.

An account of the quantity of furs exported from Canada, 1763-1777. Feb. 12, 1783.

An account of goods and merchandise from England to the Dutch islands of St. Eustatius and St. Martin, 1776-1780.

An account of all salted beef, pork, and fish, wheat, flour, biscuit, and peas, exported from England, 1765-1784, with columns for North America and the British West Indies. Mar. 22, 1784.

(Formerly Revenue Accounts, Miscellaneous, England, 77, 82, 78.)

These volumes contain brief registrations of particular declared accounts. After an examination of about sixty declarations in vols. 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, and comparison with the rolls in the Audit Office and Pipe Office series, I can say that all the entries are duplicates in briefer and less valuable form. The declarations are arranged chronologically, but the dates on the backs of the books are not to be relied on.

(Formerly Accounts Various, Declaration of Accounts, 74-81.)
These books contain only occasional entries of fees connected with colonial matters. The entries are difficult to find and of little value when found.
(Formerly Accounts Various, Fee Books, 83-102.)

Account books of the treasurer of the navy, containing the amounts received and paid, with the dates and the names of the persons to whom payments were made. Sometimes also the names of the ships are given.
608-610 contain imprest accounts.
(Formerly Accounts Various, Navy, 156-165.)

620-637. 1704-1710. Accounts of Prizes and their Cargoes.
These accounts are tabular statements, apparently from the comptroller of the navy to the Treasury, of the number of ships taken, their names, masters, burden in tons, names of ships and commanders that seized them, date of condemnation, ladings, appraised value when sold, prices realized at sale, and the total and when paid. Appended are accounts of the receiver general of prizes.
(Formerly Accounts Various, Prizes, 243-246.)

624-637 contain states of account of prize money, monthly receipts and payments of prize money, comptroller's account of prize cash, arrears of prizes, weekly certificates of prize money, day books of prize money (particularly 632), accounts of prize money (no particulars), arrears of prize money, and accounts of arrears on different prizes. They need no special description here.

661. 1701-1709. “An Account of the cost of Provisions and Charges which have been furnished by the Commissioners for Victualling her Majesty's Navy.” Mar., 1701, to Sept. 30, 1709.
Contains very few items relating to the colonies. This account was formerly no. 17 in Miscellaneous, Various, 78; the remaining papers in that bundle have been scattered among the other bundles in Treas. 38.

812-814. 1776-1784. Accounts of the German Auxiliary Troops engaged during the American War that were repaid by the British Government agreeable to the Treaty of Feb. 1, 1777. (In French, German, and English.)
A calendar of these and similar papers in the Public Record Office and the British Museum is in the Library of Congress. The accounts are for losses sustained, money levied, expenses incurred, soldiers' pay and stoppages, subsidies, expenses of transportation, hospital charges, money advanced by wounded Hessian officers, charges for forage, ammunition, cannon, and muskets, repairs, tents, horses and wagons, etc., together with great numbers of muster-lists, containing names of regiments, officers, soldiers, chasseurs, artillery lists of killed and wounded (arranged by years, 1776-1782). The accounts were sent in by Lieut.-Gen. Faucett to Sec. Rose of the Treasury and some of them do not appear to have been settled until 1793. In bundle 814 are a few papers of the year 1756. Bundle 813 relates to 1793 only.
(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 248-250.)
815. 1782-1783. Paymaster-General’s Accounts.
(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 226.)

816. 1794. Account of the Apothecary General.
Of interest when taken in connection with a similar account in Treas. 1:
527. The drugs were ordered by the Secretary at War, who issued instructions from time to time to the apothecary general to forward such medicines to certain quarters. In this case the medicines were for the use of the forces and hospitals at Chelsea and Chatham, armies on the Continent and in the West Indies, and encampments in Quebec, Halifax, Jersey, etc. Cf. Treas. 64: 188, 225.

REGISTERS.
The registers of military establishments, formerly among the Treasury papers, have been transferred to the War Office series.

ESTABLISHMENT LISTS.

1. 1766. Customs Establishment.
“A list of the officers of his Majesty’s customs appointed by patent or constitution.” For England only. From this list, which is dated Aug. 13, 1766, we learn that Henry Hulton was appointed plantation clerk under the commissioners, Oct. 19, 1763, at a salary of £500.

2. 1717. Customs Establishment.
A “list of all the officers employed in the Customs, with the salaries and allowances they respectively receive, distinguishing therein such as are paid out of incidents from those that are placed upon the establishment or paid by dormant warrant, as they stood at Michaelmas, 1717.” Oct. 8, 1717.
Including London and all the outports, followed by a list of plantation officials. The latter is very complete, distinguishing place, name (with remarks), and salaries. The following remarks are worthy of note (f. 102 b).
“There are many persons employed by the Patent officers in London and the Outports as their deputies or clerks, who are paid by their Principals.”
“The Officers at Barbadoes and the Leeward Islands are paid there out of the produce of the duty of 4½ p. cent.”
“The Officers on the Continent of America and the Bahama Islands are paid in London by the Receiver General out of Old Customs, except the Incidents Allowances for Boats and Boatmen in New York and New England which are paid there.”
“The Officers at Jamaica are paid there out of the Enumerated duty.”

3. 1720. Customs Establishment.
“A list of such officers whose salaries or additional salaries have been paid by order of the commissioners for the last year.” These entries furnish additional information regarding salary payments, for example:
South America.

Many of these statements, particularly about the use made of the king’s thirds, are not to be found in the Declared Accounts rolls.

In this series vols. 4 A, 4 B, 6, 7, relate to London or the outports only.

VICTUALLING LISTS.

This register contains lists of officers, soldiers, gunners, artificers, etc., at Halifax. Many similar lists can be found in Treas. 1.

(Formerly Registers, Victualling Lists, 19.)
MISCELLANEOUS.

These lists contain accounts of persons who booked passage on board ships or vessels going out of Great Britain in the years named, and give age, quality, occupation, employment, and former residence, to what port or place they proposed to go, by what ship or vessel they were to sail, with what master, and on what account or for what purpose they left the country.

The lists were drawn up in response to a letter from the Treasury, Dec. 8, 1773, and as here preserved are imperfect, lacking entries for Apr. 13-18, 27-May 9, 1774, and Nov. 7-12, 1775. They have been printed in part in the New England Genealogical and Historical Register (1911), but without adequate appreciation of their importance or significance. The largest group of names includes redemptioners and indentured servants going to Virginia, Maryland, Philadelphia, New York, and (a few) North Carolina, the total number of which runs into the thousands. The servants were indentured for four, five, and six years, and in certain cases the redemptioners rendered themselves liable to a seven years' service. The second largest group includes emigrants sailing from Yorkshire and other north of England ports going to Nova Scotia, Virginia, and New York. The reasons assigned for the migration are “rents being raised by their landlords”, “provisions and every necessary of life being so high”, “the small farms being absorbed into large ones”, and “they cannot support their families”; or “to settle”, “to work as clerk”, to obtain “better employment”, “to travel”, “to see friends”, etc. In these lists the port of departure for America was generally London, Bristol, or Hull. In Sept., 1775, a considerable body of Germans went to Maryland. After that date the emigration to America practically ceased; a few emigrants went to Nantucket, and in Mar., 1776, three went to Boston “to reside”. Bundle 11 covers emigration to the West Indies and the Continent only, except for the three persons going to Boston.

12. Id.

Lists of emigrants, chiefly servants, from the ports of Greenock, Kirkaldy, Wigtown, Kirkwall, Stornaway, Stranraer, Lerwick, and Glasgow in Scotland bound for Nova Scotia, New York, Pennsylvania, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Antigua, and elsewhere. Many details are given, including such specific reasons as “high rents and oppression”, the report from Lerwick especially being an elaborate one.

(Formerly Miscellanea, Refugees, Carolina, 6 (1).)

Additional information can be obtained from a series of valuable letters in Treas. 1: 500, 231-235. Other material is not wanting to throw light upon this remarkable movement, which owed its origin to the rack-renting policy of the Scottish Highland proprietors, from Ayrshire to the Shetland Islands. Thousands of Highlanders were driven to America by fear of eviction due to “the avarice and folly of their thoughtless masters”. A traveller who went to America in 1774 on the same vessel with a number of them, wrote: “It is needless to make any comment on the conduct of our Highland and Island proprietors. It is self evident what consequences must be produced in time from such numbers of subjects being driven from the country. Should levies be again necessary, the recruiting drum may long be at a loss to procure such soldiers as are now aboard this vessel." The particular company to which reference is here made had been driven out of the Fair Isle, and failing to find a vessel at Greenock, had finally embarked at Leith. Another body of emigrants is noted in Treas. 1: 388. In 1776 was raised the Royal Highland Regiment from among the emigrants thus driven to America. See *W. O.

MISCELLANEA.

LOYALISTS.

1-5. 1780-1782. North and South Carolina Refugees.

These volumes contain an account of disbursements for the militia and for Loyalist refugees at Charleston.
1780-1782.

1. The militia receipt book of Capt. John Cunningham, paymaster-general of militia at Charleston, 1781, containing the receipt-signature of each militia man, the amount paid to him, and the period for which it was paid.

Books of payments to several militia regiments, containing the names of the officers and men, rates, amounts, and places where each regiment served. June 14-Dec. 13, 1780.

Alphabetical index nominum to the South Carolina militia. Charles-ston, 1781.

Id., North Carolina militia.

Book of receipts of cash paid by Col. Robert Gray, paymaster-general of North Carolina militia, to the men of Col. Faithful Graham's regiment.

Similar documents. 1782.

Many of the papers in this bundle are damaged and difficult to read.
They are valuable for the names in the lists, particularly those of Col. Graham's regiment. The book of receipts for cash paid on the South Carolina abstracts furnishes a list of royal regiments with the names of the men and in many cases interesting comments added to the names given in the lists.

2. Continuation of the second item in bundle 1.

Indices nominum of distressed refugees who received charitable donations. 1781. No. 11 is of importance as giving names, dates, etc., in full.

Cash book of money received from the commandant of indigent refugees, with contingent expenses (interesting items). Sept. 18, 1781-Jan., 1782.

3. Small packets containing abstracts of pay of North and South Caroolina militia, 1782; the third packet more damaged than the others.

4. Reports touching the cases of distressed refugees, with details, the names of those recommending the case, and the amounts allowed (important). 1781.

Collection of exhibits justifying the recommendation.

Militia and refugee receipts, South Carolina. 1781-1782.

5. Continuation of 4, abstracts of pay and receipts signed by refugees receiving allowances; also contingent expenses of the hospital for refugees in Charleston, 1781, and other similar papers.

(Formerly Miscellanea, Refugees, Carolina, 1-5.)

These valuable schedules are indispensable to the student of Loyalist claims, and furnish information supplemental to that given in the Audit Office series of bundles and volumes of American Loyalist claims.

At the beginning of the war, from a date as early as 1776, the Treasury inaugurated the policy of making payments to Loyalist refugees, who had incurred losses in America. But the methods were faulty and the results unsatisfactory, consequently in 1778 the Treasury notified Gen. Carleton that it would pay no more money on account of Loyalist losses until a further investigation had been made of the matter. Thenceforth Loyalist claims were carefully investigated, and such payments as were made took the form of temporary allowances. The pension lists contained in this series begin with 1782 and extend to 1831, and the earliest allowances entered are temporary, no pensions becoming permanent until after 1783.

These volumes, which are ledgers of actual allowances and payments, are of particular value because the entries show how long the claimants drew their pensions and whether or not the pensions lapsed at death or were continued to widows and children. They also contain other facts of historical and genealogical interest. The tables give the number of the receipt, arrears or advances, names, professions, residences, allowances per annum, entries of payments with dates, and generally the signature of the Loyalist, which served as a receipt for the allowance received. A fine series of Loyalist signatures is contained here, the same names appearing year after year, some dropping out altogether, others showing signs of feebleness and advancing years, and still others continuing in the names of children or grandchildren. When the allowance was not received by the Loyalist claimant in person, the name of the attorney is entered. Incidentally the entries give items of additional information, either as part of the original record or added later in pencil.

A few selected names are here given to show the character of the evidence. The names are entered alphabetically.

6. 1782.

Cooper, Myles, Dr of Divinity, N. Y. 200
Dulaney Lloyd, Gentn of Fortune, Md. 200
Dulaney, Eliz., widow of Lloyd Dulaney, late of Md. (added later).

Kempe, John Tabor, Attorney General, N. Y. 200
Little, Stephen, Surgeon and Apothecy, New Hants. 80 (60)
Martin, Jos. Govr of No. Carolina. 500
Moore, Thos, Gauger. 20
Munro, Revd Harry, of Albany, Clergyman. 100
Morison, John, Barrister, West Florida. nil
Oliver, Peter, Chief Justice, Mass. 400 (300)
Pelham, Henry, Limner, Boston. 50 (30)
Reeve, Richard, Secy of Customs. 50 (100)
Shingle, Saml, Stucco Worker, Annapolis, Md. 40
Snowden, Myles, Brewer, Phila. 60 (40)
Sandford, Philo, Gentn and Planter, Conn. 80
Vanschaack, Peter, Lawyer, N. Y. +100 (80)

The figures in parentheses are in pencil at the side of the original amounts. Against a number of names "nil" is written, and many names are crossed through. In each list are names added in another hand. At the end is “Payments to American Customs Officers”, evidently the members of the board at Boston, which gives the complete establishment there. On succeeding pages are the names of customs officials from other colonies.

7. 1783.

WARRANTS EARLY.

Treas. 51.

These volumes contain entries of all kinds, particularly relating to lands, money, customs, excise, patents, etc.
(Formerly Miscellaneous, Warrants Early, 1-14.)

Miscellaneous warrants touching money, hearth money, lesser revenues, excise, etc. These warrants have very little to do with the colonies, though 15 and 28 contain a few entries.
(Formerly Miscellaneous, Warrants Early, 17-22, 23, 24, 26-29, 39, 40.)

30-32. Abstracts and General Calendars.

A series of eight books containing entries of early warrants, none of which relate to the colonies. 34 contains an appeal to the farmers of the customs and others to loan money to the king (pp. 29-31).
(Formerly Miscellaneous, Warrants Early, 34-38, 41, 42, 44.)

WARRANTS: KING'S.

Treas. 52.

1-68. 1667-1783. King's Warrants.
A series of books containing entries of letters patent, privy seals, royal sign manuals, relating to commissions or salaries or pensions, or payments of money to ambassadors, colonial governors, etc.

1. Entry book of privy seals and king's warrants, among which is a warrant for the pay of the officers of Sir Tobias Bridges's regiment in Barbadoes, one of whom was Sir Edmund Andros. There are also a number of warrants issued to Sir George Carteret relating solely to English affairs, and a warrant for a privy seal constituting the council of trade, Dec. 18, 1668.
(Formerly Miscellaneous, Warrants Early, 15. 2 and 9 were formerly id., 15 A, 16. Former King's Warrants 29-36 are now King's Warrants 36-43.)
5. Warrant to the governor of Barbadoes to appoint a receiver of the king’s revenue there (p. 67).

To Blathwayt and the Lords of Trade (p. 91).

Instructions to the governor of Barbadoes about sending revenue returns (p. 208).

Warrant for payment of £86 to Lord Culpeper for the expense of the sloop Katherine (p. 159).

Letters to Lord Howard of Effingham and to the governor of Maryland about Patrick Mein, who had been appointed surveyor general for inspecting the accounts of the collectors and other officers in Virginia and Maryland, ordering them and all their officers to aid and assist him in the collecting of the plantation duty (p. 214). Nov. 18, 1685.

Warrant for the payment of £471 “to Edward Randolph (who hath ever since the year 1675 been employed in the service of our late dear Brother here and in New England in reducing that Province to the obedience of our Laws and Governors), in full satisfaction as well of his charges and disbursements in eight several voyages made by him to and from thence and in prosecuting the Quo Warranto brought against the charter granted to Massachusetts Bay, as of his great losses he sustained in his goods by storm at sea, which hath been examined by William Blathwayt, Esq. and sworn to by him the said Edward Randolph” (p. 69). Mar. 31, 1685.

Letter regarding the renewal of the office of collector, surveyor, and searcher of customs in New England erected in 1681, and Randolph’s appointment to the post. Sept. 20, 1685.

Letter regarding the seizure of Virginia tobacco by the Dutch and the request of the owner that he be allowed to ship more “free of the impost of the country” (p. 258).

Letters to the governors of Bermuda and New York, instructing them to assist Blathwayt and his deputies (pp. 34, 189).

Id. to the governor of the Leeward Islands regarding the four-and-a-half per cent. (pp. 115, 197).

Warrant for salary of governor of Bermuda (p. 209).

Letter to Andros regarding the Swallow.

The later volumes contain similar warrants addressed to the clerk of the signet bidding him prepare bills for the king’s signature to pass the privy seal; and also warrants with the king’s sign manual directed to the paymaster of the forces, the Commissioners of the Treasury, and others, authorizing the payment of money for civil establishments, medicines, troops, sick and wounded, hospitals, camp necessaries, salaries, special appropriations (as of £200,000 for the northern colonies, Virginia, Pennsylvania, and the Lower Counties, and £50,000 for Virginia, North and South Carolina) for services rendered, rewards (as to Col. John Hale, £500, for bringing the news of the fall of Quebec, and of £400 to Maj. Halkett for the news of the taking of Fort Duquesne), forage money, victualling expenses, presents to the Indians, and governors' salaries. There are also a few warrants for the preparation of commissions for colonial governors. The king's warrants, bearing the king's sign manual, are signed by the secretary or the secretaries of State, "by his Majesty's command". Cf. the preceding volume of this Guide, pp. 227-236.

WARRANTS RELATING TO MONEY.

1-56. 1676-1783. Money Books or Warrants relating to Money.

These volumes, which are well indexed, contain entries of warrants from the Treasury Board to the auditor of the receipt of the Exchequer, authorizing that official "to draw an order or to make forth and pass debentures for paying so much to such a person for such a purpose". The following is an example of such a warrant:

"After our hearty commendation By virtue of his Majesty's General Letters Patent Dormant bearing date 14 August, 1714, these are to pray and require your Lordship to draw an order for paying unto Jonathan Forward of London, merchant, or to his assigns the sum of 264 li without acct the same being paid in pursuance of certain articles of agreement bearing date the 9 day of May last, 1723, and made or mentioned to be made between us on his Majesty's Behalf of the one part and the said Jonathan Forward of the other part, for the allowance of 4 li [it was 5 li later, 48, 56] per head for and upon 66 Malefactors who were lately lying in Newgate in the city of London under sentence of transportation, which said Malefactors were received by order of the said Jonathan Forward on board the ship Anne, Capt. Thomas Wraugham, Comr, to be transported to his Majesty's Plantations in America, as appears by the annexed certificate expressing the names of the said Malefactors. In consideration of which allowance the said Jona. Forward agreed at his own cost and charges to transport the said Malefactors to some of his Majesty's Plantations in America without any charge to his Majesty for their transportation, carrying on board or otherwise, and hath given security pursuant to the said articles accordingly. And let the said order be satisfied out of any money in the Receipt of the Exchequer applicable to the use of his Majesty's Civil Government. For which this shall be your Lordship's warrant. Whitehall, Treasury Chambers, March 7, 1723/4." (31, 76-77).

Then follows a copy of the certificate with the names of the 66 convicts, of which 28 are women, and the statement that they were to be transported to Carolina or Virginia.

The warrants cover a wide range of official grants to those serving in England as well as America and include ministers whose passage to the colonies was paid out of the Exchequer. For example:

"Thos Barclay, Chapl 20 li After, etc, By virtue of her Maj. Genl Lres Pat Dormt bearing date 19 March, 1707. These are to pray and require yor Lop to draw an Order for paying unto Thos Barclay clerke or his assēs the sum of 20 li for and towards defraying the charge of his passage to New Yorke whither he is going chapln

WARRANTS NOT RELATING TO MONEY.

1-44. 1667-1786. Warrants not Relating to Money.

These volumes contain the full text of warrants, reports, accounts, etc., not having to do with the payment of money. The warrants or orders generally authorize or empower some one to do something or require others not to do something else, and are usually based upon some memorial, petition, statement, or account, which, often entered at great length, constitute a most important source of information. The warrants concern the renewal or exercise of offices, accepting security, making agreements and contracts (victualling, transporting, provisioning, etc.), demanding information from law officers, boards, colonial officials, and the like. The volumes also contain sundry answers or reports from legal advisors and others that are of importance as giving the reason for the warrant which follows, and they furnish lists of fees for passing accounts through the Exchequer, an expensive business.

More specifically some of the matters dealt with are as follows:

1. Regarding the working of the navigation acts.

Case of ship going from Barbadoes to Tangier.

Reference to petition of Lord Ashley, and to the king's debt to him as acknowledged in privy seal of Nov. 25, 1661.

Letter to the Council for Trade and Plantations regarding claims to the Caribbee Islands.

Regarding Thomas Povey and the affairs of Tangier.

Appointment of Andros as inspector. Aug. 30, 1669.

Regarding the king's affairs in Barbadoes. Dec. 20, 1670.

2. Ships coming to America not to unlade in Ireland. Mar., 1671.

Letter to Baltimore, stating that strict care be taken that all ships trading to the English plantations for tobacco be obliged to return to England, and saying that the king hath written to that purpose and hath bidden the Treasury instruct him to order his deputy in Maryland to examine all commanders and masters of English ships arriving there. Nov. 17, 1671.

Appointment of Robert Quary as comptroller of customs at Chester.

Regarding the prohibition of tobacco planting in England.

Letters sent to justices of the peace in Worceste, Gloucester, Wilts, Hereford, and also to the governors of Barbadoes, Virginia, and Jamaica stating that the board learns that certain ships (names given), upon pretense of going on a coasting trade to some of the king's dominions in Europe, intend to sail to some of the plantations without giving bond, and ordering that such be seized if they cannot produce a certificate.

Letter to one of the surveyors of customs bidding him see that the order to the justices of the peace is carried out.

Regarding the Augustine from Virginia taking away tobacco, notwithstanding the efforts of tidesmen to prevent it.

Payments in sugar from Lord Willoughby and Barbadoes.
Directions to David Dunbar to execute the office of surveyor general in America.
Vice-admiralty courts in the colonies.
Appointment of Robert Byng as receiver general of the rights and perquisites of the Admiralty.
Requirement that governors settle accounts with Byng or his deputy and pay over what belongs to the king.
Directions to Gov. Slute to pay the same.
Query directed to the governor and council of Virginia regarding the payment of £600 to complete the £1600 asked by Gov. Spotswood for his journey to treat with the Indians at Albany.
Warrant authorizing Auditor General Walpole to have a deputy in the Carolinas for receiving quit-rents, with the same salary as the deputy receives in Virginia and New York, payment to begin July 25, 1729.

38-39. Warrants for transportation of coin to America.
Regarding the distribution of the parliamentary grant to New York, New England, and New Jersey.
Instructing the king's receiver in Guadeloupe.
Regarding West India and New York packet boats.
Accepting security from John Penn to enforce the navigation acts.
Approving the nomination of the deputy auditor of Jamaica by the auditor of that island.
Appointing John Morrison packer and messenger in American stamp warehouse.
Recommending extension of the four-and-a-half per cent. duty to Grenada. Jan. 10, 1764.
Deputing several persons to be distributors of stamps in America. Apr. 3, 1765. Id. May 1, June 13, 15.
Recommending the removal and appointment of courts of vice-admiralty, judges, etc. July 4, 1765.
Among the papers entered are also many accounts supplemental to or duplicating those in the Audit Office declarations, such as:
Account of John Cathcart, purveyor to the hospital in North America (31, 375; A. O. Decl. Acc., Hospitals, 1505, 211).
Account of Jermyn Wright, merchant trading to South Carolina, and Harman Verelst, regarding goods purchased in 1748 as presents to Indians (31, 395 ff., 32, 218 ff.; not in Declared Accounts).
Id. of Lieut.-Col. John Bradstreet (A. O., Decl. Acc., 335, 1339).
Id. of French prizes carried into Boston and Virginia. 1747-1749.

These volumes are worthy of a careful examination, for though the number of documents entered is not great, their importance is considerable. The entries increase greatly in number after 1761. In the rearrangement of the series vols. 1 and 2 were brought from former Early Warrants 33 and 43, and vols. 31-34 were formerly numbered 24-27. Former vols. 31 and 32 are now 38 and 39. 3-7 are in the possession of the Duke of Leeds.
CROWN LEASE BOOK.

Relating entirely to lands and leases in Whitehall, the royal palaces, and English counties, with two exceptions. In the first four volumes are numerous entries (I. 185, 300, etc.) touching the sale of lands in the island of St. Christopher at Cabecattere, Basseterre, etc., and in 2, pp. 210-211, Sir Joseph Eyles, Jonathan Perrie, John Drummond, and Thomas Watts petition for "the equivalent land" in New York, because the same was formerly taken from Connecticut, "in lieu of a like quantity yielded to that colony by the province of New York, upon the settling of their respective boundaries." The territory was bounded on the north by the south line of Massachusetts, at about twenty miles from the Hudson River, running parallel with that river.

WARRANTS VARIOUS.

ORDER BOOKS.

"On receipt of the Treasury authorization to draw an order for a particular payment, the auditor of the receipt drew such an order in the prescribed form and remitted it to the Treasury for the signature of the Lord Treasurer or the Lords Commissioners."¹

These volumes contain copies of such auditor's orders for the payment of money, many of which are for the salaries, etc., of colonial governors, and do not appear either in the Money Books or the King's Warrant Books. An important feature is the occasional indication of the fund against which the payment was charged. For example, the auditor general's salary and the salaries of some of the governors were paid out of the four-and-a-half per cent. Among the payments are the £20 allowances to clergymen, schoolmasters, etc., going to the colonies. The latest date of an order issued for the allowance to a clergyman going to one of the thirteen colonies is June 21, 1776 (North Carolina); the date of the last of such orders is 1779 (East Florida). These volumes are valuable for a study of the disposition of the royal revenues from the colonies and for a general understanding of the financial aspects of British control in America. A typical order is as follows:

"Charles Garth Esq, Agent for Georgia, £4,031 8sh, 8d, for the civil establishment.

Order, etc, this 17 day of March, 1764, by virtue of an act passed in the last session of parliament for raising a certain sum of money by loans or Exchequer Bills and for applying certain monies remaining in the Exchequer for the service of the year 1764 and for applications of certain savings of public monies and of monies arisen by sale of military stores and for further appropriating the supplies granted in that session of parliament and other purposes therein mentioned and in pursuance of a warrant under his Majesty’s royal sign manual dated 15 May, 1760, that you deliver and pay of such his Majesty’s treasure as remains in your charge unto Charles Garth, Esq, agent (on behalf of the publick) for the affairs of the Colony of Georgia in America or to his assigns the sum of 4031.8s.8d. by way of impost and upon account for defraying the charge of the civil establishment of the said colony of Georgia and other incidental expenses attending the same, from 24 June, 1763, to 24 June, 1764, according to such warrant or warrants as he hath received or shall receive from his Majesty in that behalf and these.”

PUBLIC DISPOSITION BOOKS.

These volumes show, by “letters of direction”, “letters of disposition”, or otherwise, the particular fund from which a payment was to be made or upon which it was to be charged.

The “letter” corresponding to the “order” cited above is as follows:

“To the Auditor of the Receipt from C. Jenkinson, secretary to the Treasury Board.

£4031.8s.8d. North
J. Turner.
T. O. Hunter.

My Lord. The Lords Commissioners of his Majesty’s Treasury desire your Lordship will please to issue unto the persons undermentioned the sums set against their names respectively. Pursuant to the proper warrants and orders signed in that behalf.

£2031.8s.8d.

To Charles Garth, Esq, by Exchequer Bills made forth pursuant to an act of the last session of parliament for raising a certain sum of money by Loans or Exchequer Bills for the service of the year 1764 and charged on the supplies that shall be granted £2000.0.0.

MAPS AND PLANS.

Only three relate to the colonies.

No. 98 (formerly no. 96). River St. Lawrence. Feb. 16, 1775.

1 Shaw, preface to Cal. Treas. Pap., pp. xxxvii-xxxix; see also the preface to the volume for 1731-1734, where the reason is given for discontinuing the calendaring of these volumes.

2 Captain Joseph Smith Speer, West India Pilot, containing the Latitudes of the Head Lands, Islands, Keys, Harbours in all parts of the West Indies, with 26 folding maps and plans, including plan of Jekil Sound, Province of Georgia; also plans of the entrance into Cape Fear Harbour, North Carolina (large folio).
MISCELLANEA VARIOUS.

APPOINTMENTS.

3-4. 1705-1723. Treasury Appointments.

Entry books of appointments by the Treasury Board, among which is the record of a few appointments made with plantation merchants, who were summoned before the board. After 1723 such appointments were entered in the Minute Book.

ARMY.

8-11. 1690-1705. Establishments.

8. 1690. Irish Establishment.

9. 1691. Computation of muster-rolls for one year, Jan. 1, 1691—last of Dec., 1691. Entries include "Duke of Bolton's Regiment in the West Indies" (pages blank), "Two Companies of Foot at New Yorke," "A company at the Leeward Islands," and under "Guarrisons", "Virginia—executors of Lord Culpeper, 1660".

10. Apr. 10, 1704. Sign manual, defining regulations for the three regiments in the West Indies—two in Jamaica and one in Leeward Islands—each to be of 12 companies of 2 sergeants, 3 corporals, 2 drummers, and 59 private soldiers, servants included.

Then follow "Rules, Methods, and Instructions", the establishment, and form of a muster-roll.

11. Id., Apr. 30, 1705. Longer and fuller regulations, especially as regards the off-reckonings for non-commissioned officers and soldiers, the deductions being stated: sergeant out of one shilling, 6d.; corporal out of nine pence, 3d.; drummer out of eight pence, 4d.; private soldier out of six pence, 2d., "which will answer for the complete clothing, the poundage, one day's pay, and agency for the pay of the said non-commissioned officers and soldiers".

The papers in these bundles, nearly all of which are in the form of vouchers, have been weeded out and only specimens retained.

20. Capt. Loring's accounts for the transports taken up at Boston on the expedition to Canada, 1759.

Id., accounts and disbursements, containing a choice collection of the signatures of carpenters, sawyers, blacksmiths, sailors, seamen, etc., as well as of captains and lieutenants serving chiefly on Lake Ontario, Lake George, and Lake Champlain. 1760-1762.

Muster-rolls of two troops of rangers in Georgia. 1761-1763. Four bundles.

Thomas Hancock's disbursements for supplies sent to Louisburg, to St. John for the expedition up the St. Lawrence in 1759, and to Halifax for the fortification works there. 1759-1762. Four bundles.

Joseph Scott's disbursements, in pursuance of Col. Forbes's warrants for the works at Halifax, to Dec. 31, 1761, containing much interesting information about construction work. Maj.-Gen. Bastide was chief engineer and Hugh Debbieg engineer in charge.

Id. 1762.

George Croghan's accounts for Indian services. Jan.-Nov., 1761. Croghan was deputy agent of Indian affairs in the southern department.

Vouchers in support of Maj. Robert Rogers's account against the crown. 1761.

22. Muster-rolls of the Rhode Island regiment. 1758.

Billeting rolls of the Massachusetts Bay troops in 1759 and 1760. Two bundles.

Accounts and vouchers.

1. Massachusetts. Returns of the state and numbers of the different companies and parties of Brigadier Ruggles's regiment.

General list of the different companies of the two battalions of Brigadier Ruggles's regiment of Massachusetts forces, mustered, victualled, and paid at Fort No. 4 (a frontier fort on the east bank of the Connecticut River, thirty miles north of Fort Dummer, or Brattleborough). Nov. 24, 1759.

Id., Col. Fitch's company at No. 4, Dec. 2, 1759, with a return of men not mustered in Col. Fitch's company.

Id., Maj.-Gen. Lyman's company at No. 4, Dec. 3, 1759.

3. Rhode Island. General list of the different companies of Col. Babcock's regiment.

List of a party of twenty-seven men belonging to different companies of Col. Babcock's regiment, who being unable to keep up on the march from Crown Point to Fort No. 4 were left behind and not included in the general list.

General list of a detachment from different provincial regiments sent to Crown Point, under the command of Maj. John Hawke of Brig.-Gen. Ruggles's Massachusetts Regiment, to cut a road from thence to No. 4 and dismissed there by order of Maj.-Gen. Amherst.

General list of a party of sick men from the different provincial regiments at Crown Point sent by way of No. 4 under the command of Lieut.-Col. James Smedley of Col. Worcester's Connecticut regiment.

Billeting rolls of Col. Thwing's regiment of Massachusetts troops embarked at Boston for Halifax. 1762.

Billeting rolls of Col. Hoare's regiment of Massachusetts troops, similarly embarked. 1762.

Muster-rolls, being the vouchers for the provision money paid to the provincials of Massachusetts Bay, Connecticut, and New Hampshire, on their return home by way of Fort No. 4 in Nov., 1761.
Id., on their return home by way of Fort No. 4 in Nov, 1762. List of warrants granted by Sir Jeffrey Amherst for public services in North America. 1759-1763. (Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 3-5.)

23. 1783. List of Provincial Regiments.
This paper book contains lists of provincial officers that served in North America, Canada, and the West Indies during the war. It includes also rosters of Canadian Indians, Six Nation Indians, and Indians of the Southern District. See Decl. Acc., A. O., 325, 1287, 1288, W. O. 65: 165. The presence of this volume among the Treasury Papers is probably explained by the fact that in Mar., 1788, the Treasury asked the Secretary at War for “as accurate an account as possible of the Provincial Establishments during the late war in North America” and the secretary in reply transmitted this book and other papers the following June. Treas. 1, year 1788. (Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 179 (2).)

24. 1779-1782. Register of Letters from the Commissaries of Prisoners, containing papers relating to the exchange of prisoners according to the conditions settled by the commissioners at Amboy.

The deputy commissary was David Sproat, appointed in place of Peter Dunant. Sproat was stationed at Staten Island to receive the prisoners of war coming in from captivity. The returns contain lists of the prisoners mustered at Elizabeth, South Amboy, and Staten Island from May 9, 10, and 11, to June 3, 4, and 5, 1783—British regulars, German auxiliaries, provincial troops. Pp. 17-21 contain a general return and recapitulation. Among the schedules is a tariff of exchanges—lieutenant-general, 1044 = an admiral, commander of a fleet; brigadier-general, 200 = a commodore; colonel, 100 = captain in navy, 3 years post, etc.

Similar information follows regarding the exchange of naval prisoners, French, Spanish, and Dutch. From these papers, which are corrected and attested copies, a complete statement could be made up of the prisoners in American hands at the close of the war. (Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 179 (1).)

COLONIES.

41. 1733-1735. Imports, America.
An account of what rum or spirits, molasses, syrups, sugar, and paneles have been imported into any of the northern colonies from any of the French, Dutch, or other foreign colonies, since Dec. 25, 1733, with the amount of the duty collected thereon, by virtue of an act passed in 6 George III., entitled “An Act for the better securing and encouraging the trade of his Majesty’s sugar colonies in America”; distinguishing each colony and each year. Mar. 4, 1735.

42. 1728-1735 An Account of the Quantity of Rum, Molasses, and Sugar which have been Imported into the Northern Colonies from Jamaica, Barbadoes, and the Leeward Islands, distinguishing each year and colony.
Lists of the amounts of each commodity—rum, pp. 1-8, molasses, pp. 9-16, sugar, pp. 17-24—from each West India colony to each northern port; no duties listed.

(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 208 (1) (2).)

43. 1731-1735. Shipping Returns, America.

An account of the quantity of tonnage of each ship and vessel which has entered and cleared out, 1731-1735, from any of the colonies to Jamaica, Barbadoes, Antigua, or other of the Leeward Islands, with lumber, flour, or any other goods or merchandise. Id., to the French, Dutch, or other foreign plantations in America, distinguishing each year and each plantation.

(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 208 (3).)

44. 1750. Representation of the Board of Trade.

To the Treasury, giving elaborate details regarding the part taken by the colonies in the intended expedition to Canada in 1748. Feb. 28, 1750. The representation covers ninety-five pages and refers to one hundred and nineteen appendixes containing the documentary evidence. These appendixes are not here. The account of each colony is presented in turn.

(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 34 (4).)

45. 1751-1771. Two Returns of Customs Fees.

Tables of fees taken by the officers of the customs at ports from Newfoundland, Halifax, and Quebec to Bermuda and Bahamas. Altogether twenty-eight ports are named. The returns give information as to whom paid (collector, comptroller, surveyor, searcher, waiters), and in most cases "how long and by what authority taken". The information varies with each return.

(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 216.)

COMMISARIAT.

A general account of such monies as have been required from the deputy paymaster-general, Oct. 1, 1773-June, 1774, for the carrying on the public works, services, and other contingent and extraordinary expenses. Also a half-yearly return of provisions issued to the British forces in North America, Dec. 25, 1722-June 24, 1773, sent by Haldimand to Sec. Robinson.

Id., from Gage, to Sept., 1775; the last letter, Gage to Robinson, dated Aug. 20, 1776.

Entry book of warrants, returns of provisions, general accounts with the crown, and copies of all letters to the secretary to the Admiralty Board. Valuable.

(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 42.)

102. Letters from Montreal, Berthier, Quebec, St. John's, with tables of returns of provisions, general states of provisions, orders, instructions, lists of commissaries, etc., written to Sec. Robinson, Gen. Carleton, assistant commissary-general, deputy commissary-general, conductors, etc.; also a few answers.

103. As far as p. 46, this volume is identical with 102, except that it contains a letter of Aug. 22, 1777, and certain tables not in the earlier volume, and omits certain lists of commissaries (102, f. 27 b) and letters from the Treasury (31-34 b). After p. 46 the volume contains letters to Sec. Robinson and a series of memoranda, orders, and instructions from Day; letters from assistant commissaries (27 letters in all), Jan. 26-Apr. 25, 1777; and a series of papers of a more general character, of some importance for the Burgoyne campaign.

(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 43, 44.)

104. 1776-1781. Copies of Letters from Secretary Robinson to Nathaniel Day.

Supplements 102-103, extending from Mar. 30, 1776, to Aug. 22, 1781. Contains instructions, authorizations, orders, acknowledgments, warrants, etc.

(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 48.)

From Sept. 30, 1777, to Dec. 15, 1783. Chiefly regarding provisions, equipment, warrants, law-suits, Indian presents, appointments, revenue accounts, leaves of absence, etc.

106-107. 1774-1777, 1778-1783. Letters to and from Commanders-in-Chief in America.

Five entry books (North America, 1, 2, 3, 5, Canada 1) containing copies of the correspondence between the Treasury Board and the commanders-in-chief of the army in North America, upon all the subjects that arose in that connection.

North America, 1. Letters from the Treasury, signed by Robinson and Grey Cooper, to Gage, 1774-1775, Howe, 1775-1777, and to and from Robert Gordon, commissary at Cork, chiefly regarding the provisioning of the army.

Id., 2. Letters to Howe, Clinton, and Carleton regarding salaries, losses, American sufferers, etc. 1778-1783.

Id., 3. Letters from Howe and Clinton regarding the question of disbursement of money, of which detailed accounts are rendered, also a few other documents, such as memorials from Lord Cathcart. 1778-1779.

Id., 5. Letters chiefly from subordinates to Howe and Clinton, with very elaborate accounts.

Canada, 1. Letters from Haldimand, with copies of reports and memorials from subordinates. 1778-1781. On p. 77 is an original letter from Haldimand, June 8, 1779.

This collection is important and forms a part of the series of in-letters and out-letters of the Treasury Board.

(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 35.)

113. 1783. Id.

114. 1778-1779. Correspondence Book and Accounts of Commissariat Supplies, touching the Army during the American War.

The principal correspondent is Daniel Wier, commissary at Philadelphia (formerly commissary at Bremen), and his letters are from Philadelphia, Rhode Island, and New York, Jan. 20, 1778-Dec. 12, 1779. They are important as showing the difficulties encountered by the British army in obtaining oats and hay, the conditions in Philadelphia during the winter of 1778, and the character of the provisions, and in furnishing abstracts of the number of men, women, and children victualled, accounts of damages and losses, sundry agreements, oaths, protests, and receipts. A useful collection.
115. 1778-1781. In-Letters from the Commander-in-Chief in Canada.

116. 1778-1782. Register of Letters from the Commissaries in North America and the West Indies.

This register covers vols. 108, 111, 114, 115, and other books now lost. The letters thus listed are from Gens. Clinton, Haldimand, and Christie, Commissaries Wier and Day, Deputy Commissaries Morrison (Charleston), Foster, Naylor, Fraser, Glasford (West Indies), and others. Nov., 1779–Nov., 1782.
(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 179 (3).)

117. 1776. Copies of Letters from the Treasury to Anthony Merry, merchant of London, relating to the Transportation of Cattle, Sheep, Hogs, despatched from Wales.

The volume covers the period Jan. 24–May 14, 1776, and contains also instructions to George Jackson, under secretary of the Admiralty, to furnish assistance, and letters to Gen. Howe on the same subject.
(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 34 (3).)

118. 1776-1777. Copies of Letters from Daniel Chamier, Commissary General of Stores and Provisions to the Army in America, to Secretary Robinson, and copies of the Answers thereto.

Written from Halifax, Staten Island, New York, June 8, 1776–May 19, 1777, with many tables of returns of provisions, and occasional bits of general information. Robinson’s letters are dated, Apr. 12, 1776–Apr. 8, 1777.
(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 45.)

Copies of letters from Sec. Robinson to Daniel Wier (pp. 1-68), Peter Paumier (pp. 69-70), and Brook Watson (pp. 70-77), commissaries in America, Sept. 26, 1777–June 20, 1783; with many enclosures, tables, extracts of letters, and the like. Valuable as supplementing previous volumes.
(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 49.)

120. 1779. Correspondence and Account Book of Peter Paumier, Deputy Commissary in Georgia.

This volume is only partly filled, containing a few letters, with thirty or forty tables and other enclosures.
(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 47.)

150. 1756. Representations of the Register General of Tobacco for Scotland to the Commissioners of the Customs of Edinburgh.

Of little importance. On p. 3 b is a reference to plantation tobacco. This report was sent in obedience to clause 17 of 24 George II., c. 41, "For the more effectual securing the Duties upon Tobacco", enjoining upon the chief customs officials at London and the outports to transmit information regarding tobacco imported from the plantations. No other representations are known to exist.
(Formerly Accounts, Revenue Accounts, Miscellaneous, England, 48, a series that has been rearranged.)
188. 1763-1783. Law Officers’ Opinions.

Given by the attorneys general and solicitors general, C. Yorke, F. Norton, W. de Grey, E. Willes, J. Dunning, A. Wedderburn, J. Wallace, Ll. Kenyon, J. Lee, and R. P. Arden. Opinions are rendered on the following cases:

- Duties levied by Lord Albemarle at Havana, Mar. 3, May 14, 1764.

Payment of salaries of the Board of Trade, whether the board was to draw pay to May 2, 1782 (date of Shelburne’s letter notifying the board of its dismissal), or to the date of the act of 1782. The first opinion declared that salaries ceased May 2 (pp. 327-329). The board then memorialized the Treasury, requesting that they might receive salaries up to the later date. This memorial, an important statement, is here quoted (pp. 330-335). The matter was submitted a second time to the lawyers and the former opinion was reversed (p. 336). Jan. 9, 1783. (See Treas. 1, 586.)

Harley and Drummond’s contracts for supplying the forces in America. Dec. 7, 1782.

Exportation of goods to New York. Mar. 6, 1783.

(Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 59.)

This correspondence arose out of the proposal to put the transports for victualling the army in America under the management of the Navy Board. Until this time supplies had been sent in armed vessels, but now it was proposed to have them carried under the protection of regular convoys.
201. 1779-1781. Copies of Letters from Secretary Robinson to the Navy Board on the Victualling Service. Jan. 30, 1779–Aug. 21, 1781. (These two volumes were formerly in Miscellaneous, Various, 77.)

PATENT BOOK.

The patents in these volumes are entered in full. Patents to all the governors in America, Board of Trade, collectors, naval officers, secretaries, etc., in the colonies that received their authority by letters patent.

SCOTLAND.

219. 1771-1775, 1781-1785. Shipping Returns. (Formerly Miscellaneous, Various, 219.)

Sent by Humphrey Brent, one of the commissioners of the customs in Scotland. It contains no specific reference to the colonies, but most if not all of the tobacco must have come from America. The frauds occurred at Glasgow, Port Glasgow, and Greenock. The names of ships are given, with dates, and nine cases are reported. Nov. 15, 1722. (Formerly Accounts, Revenue Accounts, Miscellaneous, Scotland and Ireland, 3.)

252. 1772-1785. Linens Exported from Scotland.
An account of the quantity of British, Irish, and foreign linens exported from Scotland in the years named, distinguishing each year, each colony, to what port exported, etc. Jan. 4, 1786. (Formerly Accounts, Revenue Accounts, Miscellaneous, Scotland and Ireland, 25.)

The manifests are often very elaborate. May 14, 1783–Mar. 24, 1784.

315. 1783. Auditor of Imprests: General Certificate, Trinity Term, 1783.

Contains a few items relating to the colonies.

EXPIRED COMMISSIONS.

Under the control of the Treasury were certain offices, since abolished, and certain commissions, since expired, the books and papers of which were formerly open to inspection only by special permission of the Lords of the Treasury. This rule has now been changed, and at the present time all the collections noted below are accessible without special permit. Among the books and papers in general there are four series of interest to students of American history, though but three relate to the colonial period and but two relate directly to the colonies. These series are: Records of the Royal African Company, 1662, 1672-1822, American Loyalist claims, 1784-1812, East Florida claims, 1785-1789, and papers of the commissioners of American ships and cargoes condemned as prize, 1812-1818. Attention may also be called to the records of the commission on courts of justice, 1815-1824, which are of some importance as throwing light on the organization and procedure of the courts held in the hall of Doctors’ Commons. As the report of this commission was printed in 1823-1824, an examination of its papers seems hardly worth while. The papers of the commission on American ships do not fall within our period. Those of the Royal African Company, though relating but indirectly to colonial history, furnish valuable information for the history of the slave-trade and of colonial commerce and are here entered in the form of a list without detailed descriptions.

ROYAL AFRICAN COMPANY.

On Jan. 10, 1662, a company was formed known as the “Governor and Company of the Royal Adventurers of England trading into Africa”, which, starting with a distinguished body of members and at first successful in its undertakings, became financially embarrassed before the end of the decade. In 1672 the company was reconstructed by royal charter as the “Royal African Company of England” and began its new career most prosperously. Before the end of the century opposition to its monopoly of trade was sufficiently strong to bring about a Parliamentary inquiry, the result of which was an act of 1697 which continued the company but restricted its monopoly by the recognition of independent traders under certain conditions.

But the new arrangement proved fatal to the prosperity of the company and in 1730 it was compelled to seek assistance from Parliament, amounting to £10,000 a year. This grant, which was continued until 1743, was increased to £20,000 in 1744. Notwithstanding these appropriations, the object of which was to enable the company to support its forts and garrisons on the west coast of Africa, the company maintained its existence as a joint-stock organization with difficulty, and in 1747 (21 George III.) was dissolved, its forts being transferred in 1752 to the crown (House of Lords MSS., nos. 188-190, 193). The management of the corporation, under the name of the “Company of Merchants trading to Africa” (1750-1821), was entrusted to a committee, to which Parliament made the necessary grants for the maintenance of its forts and which was required to give an account of all its transactions to the Board of Trade once a year. In this fashion, the new company did business until July 3, 1821, when by act of Parliament it ceased to exist (1 and 2 George IV., c. 28).

The property of the company having thus become vested in the crown, its records were removed to the Treasury Chambers and placed in a damp vault.

1 Since the previous volume of this Guide was issued, all the papers of the American Loyalist Claims Commission, both the Treasury series and the Audit Office series, have been thrown open to the public without restriction. The statement made on p. 11 of that volume must therefore be modified in this particular.

2 In 1708 the office of the Royal African Company (African House) was in Leadenhall Street, later in the century it was in Cooper’s Court, Cornhill. For an account of the company in 1708 see Hatton, New View of London, II. 593, and for the company in 1761, see Dodsley, London and its Environs, I. 135.
in the basement of the building. In 1842, for the inspection of an assistant keeper of the Public Record Office, nearly all of the papers were removed to the top of the building and there left until they were transferred to the Rolls House in 1846-1849. A few of the papers, notably the Cape Coast Castle accounts, were among the documents left in the cellar and damaged by the inflow of sewer water in 1846.

The papers in this collection are mainly of a routine character, relating to the actual business and administration of the company. Among the most interesting volumes in the series are those containing the minutes of the court of the company, the papers relating to the various reorganizations, the copies of the company’s charters, and the entries and papers relating to its financial history, capital, stocks, and dividends. Few papers relating to the external or diplomatic relations of the company are to be found in this series. Very large numbers of papers bearing on the history and experiences of the companies will be found among the Colonial Office papers, C. O. 388, 389, Guide, I. 249-252, 263-265, and among the papers of the Modern Board of Trade 6, below, p. 367. The papers in this series have been three times arranged, in 1856, 1892-1894, 1900-1910. For a further account of these papers, see the Transactions of the Royal Historical Society, third series, VI. 197-217.

AMERICAN LOYALIST CLAIMS.

The large collection of papers relating to the claims of American Loyalists owes its origin to the attempts made in the years 1783-1803 to carry out the terms of the 6th article of the treaty of Paris regarding the Loyalists and their property. The acts of 23 George III., c. 80, 25 George III., c. 76, 26 George III., cc. 61, 68, 28 George III., c. 40, and 29 George III., cc. 61, 62, were passed in favor of such Loyalists and sufferers and were repeated four times between 1788 and 1802, owing to the failure of the individual American states to carry out the terms of the treaty and the inability of the United States to compel them to do so. From 1784 to 1794, during the delays and negotiations occasioned by England's retention of the western posts and the many violations of article 6 of which the states were guilty, the British government paid to the Loyalists various pensions and compensations for losses, and records of such payments are contained in the documents enumerated below. In making these payments consideration was given only to debts due to British subjects which had been confiscated, in opposition to land forfeited, professional services rendered, and matters of a like nature.

By 1794 the relations between the two countries had become so strained that Washington sent John Jay to England to negotiate a new treaty. By article 6 of this treaty, which was signed on Nov. 19, 1794, by Lord Grenville for Great Britain and Jay for the United States, a board of commissioners was to be appointed to adjudicate all the Loyalist claims and to settle permanently all debts contracted prior to the peace of 1783, due to British subjects, chiefly merchants, by persons of every description, the recovery of which was hindered or prevented by legal impediments in America.

Owing to the resentment which America felt because of England's interference with her neutral rights, the discussions of the treaty in Congress, and difficulties respecting its provisions for West Indian commerce, the ratification of the treaty was delayed until 1796. In 1797 commissioners sent from England sat with the commissioners of America at Philadelphia and for two years endeavored without success to adjust the difficulty. In 1800 the British commissioners returned to England. On Jan. 8, 1802, a convention was signed by Lord Hawkesbury and Rufus King, by which England and the United States agreed upon a mutual payment of claims, and commissioners were appointed for carrying such convention into effect.

In the meantime the British board of commissioners, appointed under the Compensation Act of 1783 and continued in office by supplemental acts passed from time to time, was gradually meeting the claims which were presented to them, and under the act of 43 George III., passed in consequence of the convention of 1802, carried their work to completion. Claims to the amount of £5,408,766 6s. were preferred of which the commissioners allowed nearly one-fourth or £1,420,000 to be good. The divisible fund was £659,493, and successful claimants received dividends pro rata.\(^1\) Appropriations for American Loyalists or their families continued to appear in the British budget as late as 1850.

The British commissioners were John Eardley-Wilmot, Daniel Parker Coke, Col. Robert Kingston, Col. Thomas Dundas, and John Marsh. Robert Mackenzie was added in 1786. Col. Dundas and Jeremy Pemberton were commissioners for claims in Nova Scotia. Thomas Crafer was principal clerk, and John Pugh, gentleman-assistant. The office of the commission was first in the Cockpit and afterward in Lincoln's Inn Fields. Two sets of records remain to show the work of the commission: one, consisting of the reports and declarations made at the Audit Office, forms a nearly complete body of evidence, preserved in excellent condition; the other, the original series, less complete owing to the circumstances attending its preservation, is among the Treasury papers. After the expiration of the commission these original records were deposited in a vault in Somerset House, where for some years they lay subject to theft and damage from damp.\(^2\) Transferred to the Treasury Chambers they met with a worse fate. Contained in four large deal boxes they were deposited in the cellar where they suffered from excessive dampness and in 1846 were in part saturated with sewer water. When finally, in 1847, they were taken to the Record Office their condition was deplorable. “Many of the papers were much damaged by dirt and damp, many were in a very tender condition, greatly discoloured and the writing nearly obliterated, many documents and portions of documents had been reduced by wet in some cases to tatters and powder and in others by the obliteration of the ink to the state of discoloured and almost blank paper.” Fortunately the Reports of the commissioners and a few other documents relating to the same subject had been deposited in the State Paper Office and received no harm. They were transferred to the Rolls House in 1853.

Of the two series of Loyalist records, that known as the Audit Office series is the largest and most important. It consists of volumes and bundles. The volumes are entry books and ledgers containing the memorials, the evidence of witnesses, either given verbally or in writing, the testimonials, the decisions of the board, and the allowances. These volumes must be supplemented by the ledgers of quarterly payments in Treas. 50: 6-28, 31-48, and by other account books in the same class, 29, 30, 49-56. The bundles consist of the original memorials, certificates, accounts, and vouchers of the various claimants, as presented to the commission. In some cases where the volumes are missing, the bundles supply the desired information. An index to the American Loyalist Records, Audit Office series, was prepared by the late Benjamin Franklin Stevens, and a typewritten copy will be found in the Government

\(^1\) These are the figures given by C. H. Woodruff in his introduction to the manuscript list in the P. R. O. They should be compared with the statements in Commissioner Wilmot's Historical View of the Commission (1815); Lecky's History of England, IV. 268; and Pa. Mag., XV. 350.

\(^2\) See John E. Eardley-Wilmot's letter, Audit Office Series, 134, below. On Dec. 1, 1790, the Commissioners wrote to the Treasury that their lease expired at Christmas and they wished for directions as to the disposal of their papers which were packed in seven chests. With the letter was sent a detailed inventory of the papers which can be seen in Treas. 1: 1790 (formerly bundle 9). Cf. A. O. Accounts, 127, where are given the expenses of the commission.
American Loyalist Claims

Search Room of the Public Record Office. In the New York Public Library are transcripts of many of the volumes listed below, which were made by Mr. Stevens. The most convenient index to the transcripts is the volume (109) numbered 11 in the New York series.

(Note.—The following is the series in the New York Public Library:

II. Transcripts of various papers relating to the Losses, Services, and Support of the American Loyalists and His Majesty's Provincial Forces during the War of American Independence, preserved amongst the American Manuscripts in the Royal Institution of Great Britain, London, 1777-1783. Transcribed, 1903. Eight volumes, folio.

1. Information conveyed to the Commissioners.
2-3. Temporary Support Claims (Old Claims).
4-8. Id. (Fresh Claims).
13. Id. Delaware, Georgia, Maryland, and Massachusetts Claimants.
25. Id. Pennsylvania Claimants.
26. Id. South Carolina Claimants.
27. Id. North Carolina, Vermont, and Virginia Claimants.
28. Determinations in Nova Scotia, etc., on claims from various Provinces.
32. Id., from various Provinces.
34. Examinations in London. Georgia Claimants.
35-37. Id. Maryland Claimants, and in 37, Delaware Claimants.
38-40. Id. New Jersey Claimants.
41-46. Id. New York Claimants.
49-51. Id. Pennsylvania Claimants.
52-57. Id. South Carolina Claimants.
58-59. Id. Virginia Claimants.
60. Id. East Florida Claimants.

This volume of 798 pages contains the examinations in London, memorials, schedules of losses, and evidences in regard to East Florida claimants, and furnishes a record of the losses "suffered in their properties in consequence of the cession of the province of East Florida to the King of Spain. These persons, with but few exceptions, had been the loyal inhabitants of Georgia and South Carolina, and on the evacuation of the garrison at Charleston in 1782 had found an asylum in East Florida".

AUDIT OFFICE SERIES.

1-56. 1783-1790. Evidence, that is, Memorials of Claimants.

57-70. 1785-1790. Decisions, that is, Determination of Claims.
(Copied, N. Y. P. Lib., vols. 28-32.)

71-76. 1788-1790. Examinations: Supplies for the Army and Navy.

77. Index to vols. 71-76. See also 120 and 122.

78-95. 1783-1790. Letters, information, etc.

96-102. 1782-1790. Minute books and examinations on fresh claims.
(Copied, N. Y. P. Lib., vols. 9, 10, 4-8.)

103-106. 1783-1790. Tabular statements for colonies.
(Copied, N. Y. P. Lib., vols. 2, 3.)

107. 1782-1785. Intelligence.

108. 1783-1790. Debts due to Loyalists.

This volume contains a summary of proceedings and includes names of claimants, amount of claims, and particulars of liquidation, in tabular form from A to Z. Thus it constitutes a kind of alphabetical index, furnishing a list of the names of those whose records of claims will be found somewhere in the other volumes of the series.
(Copied, N. Y. P. Lib., vol. 11.)

110, 111. 1783. Names of Claimants.

112. 1785-1787. Claims Withdrawn.

113. 1786-1787. Secretary's Letters.

115. 1783-1790. Recapitulation of Claims.

117-118. 1783. Minutes.

120, 122. Supplies to Army and Navy. Index to 71-76.

121. 1788-1790. Losses sustained by supplying the Navy.

(Copied, N. Y. P. Lib., parts of vol. 33.)

132. 1778-1782. Confiscation Laws, etc.
133. 1785-1788. Minute Book.
(Copied, N. Y. P. Lib., part of vol. 33.)

(Copied, N. Y. P. Lib., parts of vols. 3 and 8.)

(Copied, N. Y. P. Lib., part of vol. 33.)

140. 1785. Causes unexamined.
141. 1785-1789. Reports.
142. 1781. Rough account books.
143. 1784. Losses of divers persons.
145. 1786-1787. Statements to the House of Commons.
146. 1785-1786. Reports.

The following numbers are bundles.

1-10. Examinations, etc. A-Z. Claims for supplies furnished to the army and navy. They correspond with vols. 71-76.
11-26. New Claims, arranged by states and under each state alphabetically.

27-49. Claims.
49-51. New Claims.
54-56. Temporary Assistance.
57-59. New Claims.
60-69. Temporary Support (66, wanting).
70-72. New Claims.
73-75. Temporary Assistance.
76-77. New Claims.
78-79. Letters, etc.
80. Claims received too late.
81. New Claims.
82-85. Various Claims.
86-89. Letters.
137-140. Miscellaneous.
(All these bundles have been listed, calendared, and their contents noted in six manuscript volumes now in the New York Public Library. See note above, p. 261, IV.)
TREASURY SERIES.

60, 61, 64. Letters.

(Of these volumes 70 and 71, which are really Audit Office volumes, have been copied for the New York Public Library.)

73-123. Entry Books of Special Agents’ Reports on Claims.
70. Index of Names.
84. General Index.

(For the declaration of accounts of disbursements to Loyalists see A. O. Decl. Acc., 326, 1291, 1292; 458, 4, 5; 459, 7-43; 850, 1; 1259, 433; 1300, 473; 1324, 637. Thirty-four volumes of Loyalist testimony, taken by Comrs. Dundas, Pemberton, and Mackenzie, and one volume containing the reports of the commissioners in England and America, are in the Library of Congress (N. Y. P. Library Bulletin, 1899, p. 416; Guide to the Archives at Washington, 2d ed., p. 267). These volumes, which contain material more valuable than the corresponding transcripts in the Public Record Office, are printed in the Second Report of the Bureau of Archives for the Province of Ontario (1904). This report contains a valuable introduction giving a history of these papers (pp. 4-25). The reports of the British commissioners are given on pp. 1336-1351; that of the commissioners in Nova Scotia on pp. 1351-1376.)

EAST FLORIDA CLAIMS.

"By the treaty of peace concluded at Paris in 1763, East Florida was ceded to Great Britain as an equivalent for the island of Cuba. In consequence of this cession many British subjects settled there, obtained grants of land, and cultivated estates. During the troubles in North America prior to the Declaration of Independence by the United States of America, East Florida remained faithful to the English Crown. In 1776 the people rejected the invitation to join in the great confederation, raised a militia, and repulsed the Georgians in 1777, and East Florida became the rallying point and refuge for Loyalists from the revolted provinces. In 1780 a legislature was formed, which granted in perpetuity to the Crown of England an irrevocable duty of 2½ per cent. on certain imports.

"By the 5th article of the Treaty of Peace concluded at Versailles, 1783, this colony was delivered up to the Crown of Spain. In 1785 the British Parliament passed an act (26 George III., c. 75) entitled, ‘An Act for appointing commissioners to inquire into the losses of all such persons who have suffered in their properties in consequence of the cession of East Florida to the King of Spain’. A commission was constituted and two commissioners were appointed to inquire into the respective losses of the sufferers by the cession of the above province. A time was limited for the reception of claims, viz.: in the Bahamas, where many East Floridians had taken refuge, March 1, 1787, and in Great Britain, January 1, 1787. A further act was passed (28 George III., c. 40) entitled, ‘An Act for giving relief to such persons as have suffered in their rights and properties during the late unhappy dissensions in America in consequence of their loyalty to the British government and for making compensation to such persons as have suffered in their properties in consequence of the cession of East Florida to the King of Spain’. By the second section of this act the East Florida Commissioners were required to make report to the Treasury, prior to January 1, 1789, and by the third section the Lords of the Treasury were empowered to make provisions for payment to claimants entitled to compensation.” (From the introduction to the manuscript list.)

The records of the East Florida Claims Commission were transferred to the Rolls House in 1847. They had suffered from sewer water, while lying in the Treasury cellar, only less seriously than had the records of the Loyalist Claims Commission.

1-18. 1787-1789. Claims, alphabetically arranged.

Many of these papers were much injured in the Treasury vault. Some of the names in the lists do not represent claimants, but may possibly refer to persons through whom the claimants derived their titles.

20. Miscellaneous Papers.

Allowances on claims, lists of title deeds, etc., of claimants, statements of land laid out, accounts of the inspector general of refugees (cf. Declared Accounts, A. O., 850, 1), report upon the general state of East Florida and its inhabitants, etc.

21. Rough Drafts of Correspondence, etc.

22. Fragments decayed past recovery.

Supplemental to the bundles noted above is a volume among the Colonial Papers, as follows:

Balfour and John Spranger, Esq., commissioners on East Florida Claims, dated from the East Florida Claims Office, Southampton Buildings, Chancery Lane, and transmitted by the secretary of the

I. Report drawn up, Jan. 30, 1787; transmitted, Feb. 5, 1787.

II. Report transmitted, Mar. 13, 1787.

III. Report drawn up, May 9, 1787; transmitted, May 12, 1787.

IV. Report drawn up and transmitted, Nov. 3, 1787.

V. Report drawn up and transmitted, Mar. 14, 1788.

VI. Report drawn up, June 7, 1788; transmitted, June 12, 1788.

VII. Report drawn up, Dec. 20, 1788; transmitted, Dec. 22, 1788.

VIII. Report drawn up, May 20, 1789; transmitted, June 6, 1789.

These reports are very full and complete, covering the entire work of the commission, giving number and amounts of losses, character of claims, etc.
At the end of I. is a preliminary schedule, with the values of the real and personal property lost; at the end of II. are schedules of actual claims and losses, that is, of actual amounts allowed, with "observations"; similar schedules are at the end of III., IV., V.; but only abstracts at the end of VI., VII., VIII.; the last report contains a general summing up. The number of claims was 369; the total amount claimed, £647,405 6s. 9d.; the amount actually allowed, £169,818 18s. 5½d.

In Decl. Acc., A. O., 861, 4, is the declaration of the account of H. C. Litchfield, secretary to the commission. In Treas. Solicitor Papers, 3662, are important documents relating to the same subject.
TREASURY SOLICITOR PAPERS.

All papers from the Department of the Treasury Solicitor, of date earlier than the nineteenth century, are now in the Public Record Office. Originally stored in Whitehall, neglected and in confusion, many of the papers destroyed by damp and others injured and often unreadable, they were finally removed to the Chapter House in 1853 and to Chancery Lane two years later. They filled 230 tin and wooden boxes and chests, the number of bundles as finally arranged reaching 11,000, each bundle containing the documents relating to a single case. The papers always have been and are still kept strictly private, opened to the searcher only with the permission of the solicitor.

After the papers had been sorted and arranged in the Public Record Office, a manuscript calendar was prepared lettered F. 1, 1584-1753; F. 2, 1754-1820; F. 3, 1820-1850, and Index, F. 6. Each bundle is numbered, but there does not appear to be any connection between the sequence of numbers and the chronological arrangement. Great quantities of papers have been destroyed, as is evident from the gaps in the numbers that remain. The collection is disappointing; as no colonial cases are to be found of date earlier than 1756, and the total number of such cases is but seventeen at most. From the declared accounts of the Treasury solicitor (above, pp. 77, 103) it appears that prosecutions involving colonial interests came before the solicitor of the Treasury as early as 1675. For an account of the papers see the Deputy Keeper’s 19th Report, p. 14; and for a list of the Treasury solicitors, 1698-1851, ibid., 14-15.

3888. 1756. Appeal in Privy Council. Old John Uncas and the greater part of the tribe of Mohegan Indians, by Samuel Mason, their Guardian, vs. the Governor and Company of Connecticut and George Richards, Esq., and several other persons intruders on the Land in question.

Mason’s petition, with (1) a copy of the estimate annexed to the petitioner’s former petition in 1741, (2) an account of money disbursed by the petitioner more than was computed in the foregoing estimate (“This exceeding was occasioned by the unexpected length of the proceedings on the last Commission which make a large volume containing 392 pages, close writ in folio”), (3) an account of the charges attending the despatches and execution of the commission of reviews to determine the controversy more than was received in 1741 from the Treasury and of the subsequent expenses on the appeal, as also an estimate of the future expenses necessary for bringing the said appeal to a final conclusion. The account is full of interesting details; the petition was made to the Treasury and referred to the solicitor, Oct. 6, 1752. Cf. Acts Privy Council, Colonial, vol. III., § 392.

Additional papers:
Copy of the order in Council. Jan. 29, 1740.
Copy of Sharpe’s report on the petitions. June 4, 1756.

266
Copy of Mason's petition, with Ferdinand John Paris's letter of Mar. 12, 1756.
Copy of the judgment of the commissioners. Aug. 16, 1743.
Mason's memorial, probably of 1755.
The appellant's case giving an historical outline to 1743.
5158. 1763. A printed paper entitled A Full State of the Dispute betwixt the Governor and the Commons House of Assembly of South Carolina. With the proper Vouchers and Reasons in support of the Proceedings of the House of Assembly, as transmitted to their Agent in Great Britain. Printed in the year MDCCLXIII.
1210. 1766. In the Exchequer, between the Hon. and Rev. Robert Cholmondeley, Surveyor and Auditor General of his Majesty's Revenues in America; plaintiff, and William Mathew Burt, Esq., late his Majesty's agent for Guadeloupe in America; defendant. Bill filed Trinity Term, 1766.
Copy of Cholmondeley's patent as auditor general, Nov. 20, 1752. The immediate question was whether or not Cholmondeley could audit the revenue accounts of Guadeloupe; the larger question whether or not he could audit the accounts of territories in America or the West Indies either taken from the enemy and held for a short time or acquired and annexed to the crown since the date of patent. Cholmondeley's brief quotes many precedents: Blathwayt's claim, and the order allowing the claim, to audit the accounts of New York, even though in the hands of the Duke of York, June 10, 1686 (order addressed to Lucas Santen, collector in New York); Walpole's claim to audit prizes taken in America during the war with Spain after 1718, and to audit accounts of Carolina, 1730 (both claims allowed by the Treasury); Cholmondeley's own claim to examine and audit accounts of commissioner appointed to take charge of prizes taken from the French previous to the declaration of war (allowed by the Treasury in the order of Aug. 1, 1758); copies of other petitions and arguments supporting his case. Burt's answer bears many corrections. Cause appointed to be heard July 1, 1766. Copies of brief, bill, Cholmondeley's case, Blathwayt's commission, and opinion of the attorney general and solicitor general on Cholmondeley's patent, which was adverse to the first claim and doubtful on the second. Evidently the trial was a feigned issue in order to obtain a judicial opinion.
825. 1767. In the Common Pleas, between a number of plaintiffs and Gov. James Murray, "for payment of duties, levied by Murray as governor of Quebec, on the ground that they were unlawfully levied". Hilary Term, 8 George III.
4957. 1768. In the King's Bench, Suit of Major Robert Rogers vs. Gen. Gage, on the ground of trespass, assault, and imprisonment, with damages at £20,000.
Exhibits:
Copy of the proceedings at a court-martial held at Montreal, Oct., 1768, for the trial of Rogers, when in command at Michilimackinac, for forming designs of deserting to the French, and for holding a correspondence with His Majesty's enemies (the court acquitted Rogers, but asserted that "at the same time it appears to his Majesty that there was good reason to suspect the same Major Rogers entertaining an improper and dangerous correspondence, which suspicion the account afterwards given of his meditating an escape tended to confirm").
Copy of Rogers's correspondence, 1766, and other papers in evidence against Rogers.

Copy of his commission to Jonathan Carver, Aug. 12, 1766, and to Capt. James Tuke, of the detachment ordered for the discovery of the river "Ourigan" and the northwest passage.

Narrative of Gen. Gage's proceedings against Rogers, with letters from Capt. Spiesmacher, Lieut. Christie, Potter's deposition, letter from Commissioner Roberts, Daniel Claus's letter to Guy Johnson, and other papers connected with the suit, sixteen in all, in duplicate and triplicate.

3321. 1768. In the Exchequer, the Attorney-General vs. the East India Company, respecting the duties on Tea. Information filed, Hilary Term, IX. George III.

Deals with the exportation of tea to the colonies and the drawbacks thereon, in reference to the meaning and construction of the act of Parliament, 7 George III., c. 56.

Petition of the company to Parliament, May 20, 1767, with the report of the committee of Parliament.

Brief for the crown.

State of the question between the Treasury and the East India Company respecting the tea duties.

65. 1769. King vs. George Robinson, for publishing in The Independent Chronicle from Monday, Dec. 18, to Wednesday, Dec. 20, 1769, No. 36, a libel commencing thus, "When the complaints of a brave and powerful people", etc. (Junius's letter.)

Other similar trials follow, F. 2, p. 402, notably 765, King vs. John Almon for publishing the same.

62. 1775. King vs. John Horne, clerk, for publishing on June 8, 1775, the following libel: "At a special meeting of the Constitutional Society, June 7, 1775, proposed that a subscription be raised for the relief of the widows, orphans, and aged parents of our beloved American Fellow Subjects, who faithful to the character of Englishmen, preferring death to Slavery, were, for that reason only, inhumanly murdered by the King's troops at or near Lexington and Concord", etc.

4710. 1776-1778. King vs. Ebenezer Platt for high treason at Savannah, Georgia.

Ebenezer Platt was a "committee man" of Georgia, who boarded the Philippa at Savannah in 1775, and seized all the gunpowder of the government, carrying it to the rebels. Others, Levi, Shafto, etc., were engaged in the same business by order of the committee. Platt was captured and confined on a ship of war from Mar., 1776, to Jan., 1777, and then taken to England, where he was heavily ironed and imprisoned in Newgate. He petitioned in 1778 for trial or admission to bail. The case is an interesting one.

A mass of papers relating to claims in East Florida, with a few relating to the Mosquito Shore, sent to H. C. Litchfield in 1820, after Florida had been ceded to the United States in 1819. The papers were sent to Litchfield as secretary to the Commissioners on East Florida Claims and are here filed because Litchfield was solicitor of the Treasury at this time.

Among the papers are:

Claims of William Turnbull and Mrs. Harvey, children of Dr. Andrew Turnbull who conducted the Greek immigrants to Florida.

Other claims dating back to 1804.

Bills, accounts, etc.

Great numbers of miscellaneous papers.

Among the last are a copy of the South Carolina and American General Gazette, Apr. 2, 1778, and a “List of East Florida claimants who emigrated to the Revolted American States”; William Drayton, Dr. Andrew Turnbull, James Penman, Spencer Mason, Andrew Turnbull, jr., are named, and valuable comments are made on their careers.

Also a statement from the Commission on American Loyalist Claims regarding whether or not losses of land claimed under grants from the crown, the conditions of which have not been complied with in respect of cultivation, are an object of inquiry under the act. Answer adverse, Feb. 2, 1784. The papers include, also, great numbers of notes or depositions of claimants taken before the Commissioners on East Florida Claims.

Jacob Jordan lived in Montreal and furnished a carriage train and many supplies for Burgoyne's army. He afterward sued Burgoyne for payment and his brief is full of interesting details. Burgoyne's answer, which contains many interlineations and corrections, is given; also the amended bill, Nov. 7, 1782, and Burgoyne's answer to that; copy of the bill; order for the defendant to examine witnesses. The papers are somewhat damaged.

2080. 1786. Re St. Eustatius and its dependencies.

954. 1786. In the King's Bench, between George Macbeth, plaintiff, and Frederick Haldimand, Esq., defendant.

Macbeth was a trader in Canada and sued Gov. Haldimond for money due. A similar suit follows.

151. 1792-1793. Suits against the publishers who issued the whole or a part of Paine's Rights of Man. Also in bundles 2839, 1893, 2910, 2717, 3335, 3419, 4053, 1657.
WAR OFFICE PAPERS.

INTRODUCTION.

During the colonial period the British army was a decentralized force, made up of independent, self-containing regiments of infantry and cavalry, locally raised, and in large part disbanded when no longer needed for active service. Before 1689 the only lawfully permanent forces were the guards of the king’s person and the garrisons in special fortresses. Even after 1689, when an army under the control of Parliament was annually created by the Mutiny Bill, no central board or staff existed that can rightly be termed a war office. War policy was directed by that particular secretary of state, within whose territory lay the seat of the war—the Northern Secretary if the war was in northern Europe, the Southern Secretary, if in southern Europe or the colonies, and both, if the territory of both was involved. At the head of the army was a general-in-chief, and in addition there was a secretary, variously known as the secretary at war to all the forces, the secretary to the general of the forces, or the secretary for the affairs of the army. There was a similar secretary at war as well as an independent military establishment for Ireland until 1800 and another for Scotland till 1707. Such official had nothing to do with the militia, which was under the Secretary of State for the Southern Department and the lieutenants of the counties, and nothing to do with the guards and garrisons, which were under the direct command of the king. All matters of arms and ammunition were controlled by the Ordnance Board, which took its orders only from the king, while the business of victualling and transport was managed directly by the Treasury. The forces were paid by an independent official, appointed by the Treasury, the paymaster-general of the forces, and the establishment and allowances for the companies in the plantations, New York, Jamaica, Leeward Islands, Bermuda, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, etc., the earliest of which was sent over about 1679, thus forming the beginning of a permanent imperial garrison, were fixed by the King in Council. The marines, dating from 1672, came eventually under the control of the Admiralty.

The nucleus of the War Office was the office of the Secretary at War, the origin of which can be traced to the period of the Civil War. William Clarke held that position under Cromwell, and, as Sir William Clarke, was commissioned Secretary at War by Charles II. Jan. 28, 1661. He accompanied the lord general of the forces, the Duke of Albemarle, on board the Royal Charles, to the battle with the Dutch, June 2, 1666, where he was wounded and died two days after. At Albemarle’s request the king commissioned the duke’s private secretary, Matthew Lock, June 20, 1666. Lock had been secretary at war for Ireland, 1661-1662, and adjutant of a foot regiment in England. He was succeeded August 18, 1683, by William Blathwayt, auditor general of the plantation revenues. As Secretary at War Blathwayt accompanied Marlborough

1 The commission to Blathwayt reads as follows: “James II. to all to whom these presents shall come, greeting. Know ye that we reposing especial trust and confidence in the care, fidelity, and circumspection of our trusty and well beloved William Blathwayt, do grant the office and place of my secretary at war to all my standing forces.
and William III. to Flanders during the war with France, and in his absence George Clarke, son of Sir William Clarke, acted as his deputy at Whitehall. Blathwayt held the office till 1704 and under his direction it assumed considerable prominence and the papers relating to his incumbency are numerous and important. He was succeeded by St. John, Walpole, Granville, Wyndham, Gwyn, Pulteney, Craggs, Pringle, Treby, Pelham, Yonge, Henry Fox, Lord Barrington, Charles Townshend, Welbore Ellis, and Charles Jenkinson, the last secretary of the colonial period.

In the seventeenth century, till after 1689, both the general of the forces and the Secretary at War had as much to do with the navy as with the army. Both concerned themselves with minor naval appointments, such as gunners and boatswains, who were fighting officers, and sent instructions to the Navy Board. The secretary looked after embargoes, impressments, and transports, and the distribution of booty, and inasmuch as the army was designed for service at sea quite as much as for service on land, the affairs of the navy were for a long time intimately bound up with the interests of the army. Later these dual functions tended to separate; the Admiralty took entire charge of the marines and the Treasury of transport, and the Secretary at War confined his activities to matters that were strictly military.

The duties of the secretary concerned the army wherever it might be. He saw to the raising of levies and the filling up of the regiments with new recruits, and he sent the muster-masters to inspect the regiments when filled. He looked after the quartering and billeting of the soldiers and gave marching orders. He had to know the rules and regulations governing the raising of new levies, and with the aid of the paymaster-general, the master-general of ordnance, and the treasurer of the navy, he drew up the army estimates. He prepared the first draft of the establishment conformably to the estimates laid before Parliament, and he obtained from the king triplicates of these establishments which he laid before the Treasury for the signatures of the board, one for the Treasury, one for the War Office, and one for the paymaster general. As a member of the House of Commons, he had to move the army estimates and in conjunction with the judge advocate general to meet every attack of the opposition upon the commander-in-chief or his office. He looked after the commissions of the officers and the payment of their fees, and countersigned the royal sign manual authorizing their appointments.

Both horse and foot, which are now raised and of all my forces and armies which at any time hereafter shall be raised in my kingdom of England, Dominion of Wales, and Town of Berwick upon Tweed and other any Dominion and Territories thereunto belonging and him the said William Blathwayt our Secretary at War to all our standing forces both horse and foot . . . We hereby make, ordain, and institute to have, hold, exercise, and enjoy the said place . . . unto the said William Blathwayt during my pleasure, to be executed by himself or such sufficient deputy or deputies as shall be appointed or allowed by us in writing under my royal sign manual, together with all such fees, rights, etc., thereunto belonging . . . to accept orders from us, my general or commander in chief of our said forces for the time being, according to the rules and discipline of war." Patent Rolls, 1 James II., pt. XI., no. 17. The form in later times underwent few changes; see the text of the last commission, 1655, Clode, Military Forces of the Crown, I. 687.

According to Pennant, History and Antiquities of London, II. 83, referring to Reresby's Memoirs, p. 266, William III. offered the office, Apr. 12, 1689, to John Temple, son of Sir William Temple, in Blathwayt's place, but two days afterward Temple committed suicide, giving as his reason his "folly in undertaking what he could not perform".

4 The army estimates are regularly given in the Commons Journal.
5 A sign manual warrant of James II., appointing the captain of a regiment in England, countersigned by W. Blathwayt, Nov. 9, 1688, a few days before the king fled from London, was sold in 1913 at Sotheby's.
He controlled certain distributions of money, though the paymaster-general made up the accounts of disbanded regiments, paying the arrears to the colonels, who stated the amounts to the captains. He provided the king with soldiers for special guard service, and after 1735 saw to the removal, for three days while the polling was going on, of troops quartered in places of election.\(^1\) In the seventeenth century his pay was twenty shillings a day, with five shillings for his clerk. In 1720 the clerical establishment numbered nine, and cost £580. There were also certain fees and perquisites, and the secretary was able to hold his office by deputy. Under Barrington the office assumed the dignity of a great department and in 1760 contained a deputy secretary, a first clerk, and twelve other clerks, fourteen in all.

During the war period from 1754 to 1783 the powers of the secretary were rapidly and widely extended. The records of the office became voluminous, even though hundreds of papers relating to military affairs found their way into the state papers, notably those of the Southern Department. The office was organized in all respects as were other departments of the British government, except that it had no board and kept no minutes. Barrington and his successors sent important despatches to the commanders-in-chief in America and to the colonial governors, and received letters from them in return. They corresponded with the under officers in the field and with a great variety of other individuals, and to a greater extent than in the earlier period directed the policy and operations of the troops in America. They looked after the despatch and transport of troops, received petitions for pay and half-pay, rewards and compensations, promotions and leaves of absence, and had complete oversight of discharges, captures, military hospitals, courts-martial, prisoners of war, deserters, and leaves of absence. They could compel absent officers to rejoin their regiments, could control exchanges of prisoners and the invaliding of soldiers, could use the troops to put down riots, and in general were expected to look after the troops in any part of the British empire, except Ireland and the Isle of Man. They kept a record of the war establishment, made up the army list, first printed in 1754 and published annually thereafter, watched the careers of the men, and controlled commissions of army officers and military governors, promotions, and all matters that related to appointments, regimental successions, and the like, with which the Secretary of State did not often interfere. They filed headquarters records, engineers' returns, garrison and hospital returns, and furnished statistical information on these points whenever desired. They carried out all details touching foreign troops in the pay of Great Britain, their charges, numbers, transportation, and losses.

Beyond the duties mentioned, the Secretary at War had no authority and assumed no responsibility. At first all plans of campaign were formulated by the Secretary of State or the commander-in-chief, though later, partly because there was no commander-in-chief in England from 1759 to 1766 and from 1769 to 1778, the Secretary at War had considerable influence upon matters of policy. This was particularly true of Barrington, a secretary honest and consistent, with definite ideas regarding the conduct of his office and firmness of attitude in their execution. But at best the secretary's powers were limited. He had nothing to do with discipline, which was exercised by the colonel. He had no control over the Ordnance Office. This important department was under the master-general and Board of Ordnance, which had an office in Westminster on the north side of St. Margaret Street after 1752, having formerly occupied quarters in Westminster Hall. It had charge of the artillery and engineer corps, barracks, fortifications, and works, and all supplies of arms and ammunition. The business end of the Ordnance Department was at the Tower, and the office there, located in what was known as "Cold Harbour", was directly under the authority of the board. The Secretary at War could not order a pennyworth of provisions, straw, wood, or bedding, for the Ordnance Board took its commands only from the king.

The Secretary at War corresponded with other departments and, of course, at great length, with the Secretary of State, to whom were referred many cases of departmental disagreement. Letters and petitions received were transmitted from the office of the secretary and generally bear the latter's comments. The Secretary at War received also many orders from the Privy Council, the House of Lords, and the House of Commons for information and for statistics regarding the army. In general he took his orders from the King in Council and the Secretary of State only, and not from the commander-in-chief, if we are to accept the argument in Lord Palmerston's well-known memorandum of 1811. Despite the importance of his office, the Secretary at War had no constitutional responsibility and his duties are nowhere defined by statute. Consequently his office became the centre of much political jobbery and manipulation, particularly in regard to commissions, appointments, and regimental inspections. So unsatisfactory had the situation become by the close of the Revolutionary War, that in 1783 an act was passed which transformed the influential official of Barrington's day into a financial administrator, preparing and submitting the army estimates and the annual mutiny bill to Parliament and framing the articles of war. These duties, further regulated by royal warrant in 1812, kept the office alive until its abolition in 1863.

Of the army itself little need be said here. Each regiment was an independent unit under the colonel, who raised it and was responsible for its finance and discipline. The colonel received the money issued for the regiment by the paymaster-general, and out of it provided for the pay, clothing, and maintenance of his men. The pay of the officers was rather an honorarium than pay properly so called, while that of the men was nothing more than a retaining fee for purposes of loot. From both, stoppages were made for Chelsea Hospital and the regimental agent, and from the soldiers' pay

3 Before 1783 the Secretary at War is mentioned, I believe, in but one statute, that of 1735 requiring him to remove the soldiers at the time of elections.

The various acts for the better regulating the forces, including those in America, are: 11 Anne, c. 4; 1 George I., c. 3; 8 George L., c. 3; 18 George II., c. 10; 29 George II., c. 35; 5 George III., c. 33; 6 George III., c. 18; 7 George III., c. 55; 11 George III., c. 11; 12 George III., c. 12; 13 George III., c. 24; 14 George III., cc. 6, 54; 16 George III., c. 11.

8 The same idea governed the raising of troops in the colonies. In 1744 Massachusetts, wishing to raise a force of 3000 men for the Louisburg expedition, proposed that "each person so enlisting be allowed twenty five shillings per month and that there be delivered to each man a blanket, that one month's pay be advanced, and that they be entitled to all the plunder". Correspondence of William Shirley, ed. C. H. Lincoln (New York, 1912), I. 170.
certain percentages were deducted for medicines, for the paymaster-general, for specified victuallings, and for clothing. Of actual pay the men received practically nothing. After the regiment had been raised, by recruiting agents under the direction of the nobleman or gentleman of rank to whom a commission as colonel had been granted, the muster was taken by the muster-master and examined by the comptrollers of army accounts. Frauds arose in both connections, the muster-master either passing the regiment as complete when it was not so, or giving his certificate without seeing a single man, and the comptrollers, who were bound by their instructions to inspect all musters and muster-rolls, neglecting to find out whether such rolls had been issued or not. The army had also a judge advocate general to administer military law, and an apothecary general whose business it was to furnish the several regiments with good and wholesome medicaments.

The office of the Secretary at War must have been at first in or near the chambers of the Duke of Albemarle at the Cockpit. Locke is mentioned as having an office at the Guards House in 1676, and probably Blathwayt used Little Wallingford House for the same purpose. Clarke dated his letters from the Horse Guards in 1697. We learn that for a time the War Office was located on the south side of Pall Mall, in the old Ordnance Office, built for the Duke of Cumberland, when captain-general. For the greater part of the early eighteenth century, however, the Secretary at War, the deputy secretary and clerks, the paymaster-general of the forces, and the commissary-general of musters had their quarters in a building on the east side of the street leading from Charing Cross to Westminster, about where the War Office is today. This building had a frontage on the street of 55 feet, but was only 46 feet wide at the rear, while the dimensions up one flight of stairs were only 31 feet before and behind. In 1751 the present building of the Horse Guards was begun and completed in 1756, on the site of the old Guards House, the yard, and the stables, and thither the War Office was removed in the latter year. The officers there established were the commander-in-chief, the Secretary at War, the paymaster-general, the quartermaster-general, the commissary-general of musters, and there were quartered later the muster-master general and paymaster-general of marines and the comptrollers of army accounts. The latter had been established earlier in two old houses, worn-out structures supported by buttresses, on the bank of the

1 In 1747 Shirley wrote to the Duke of Newcastle sending an account "of the late Tumult, which happen'd in the Garrison [at Louisburg] upon his publishing His Majesty's Orders among the soldiers for making a Stoppage out of their pay for their Provisions". Correspondence, I. 397. Cf. p. 461. In Nova Scotia a stoppage was made to pay the charges of the chaplain of the garrison. For the deductions, see Treas. 64: 11.

2 On this subject see the Report of 1746 and the pamphlet National Economy Recommended; Clode, Military Forces of the Crown, II. 8-10. The original instructions issued in 1703 to the comptroller of army accounts are given in Clode, II. 668-669. The colonels made large profits out of their regiments, even when the mustering was honestly done. Shirley, who with William Pepperrell was commissioned a colonel on the establishment and authorized to raise a regiment in America, estimated that he cleared £1000 a year. Whether this sum included the profits from the off-reckonings or not is uncertain. Correspondence of William Shirley, I. 505.

Thames behind the Banqueting Hall, at the end of the passage leading from the Privy Garden to the private water stairs. As these buildings were wanted by the Duke of Richmond, the comptrollers removed in 1738 to Surrey Street, but their office was burned down in 1744. Thence they moved to Spring Garden, and in 1759 to the Horse Guards. ¹

The majority of the War Office records are of date later than 1732, the earlier papers being scattered among those of the Secretary of State, the Admiralty, and the Treasury. The Ordnance records date in some instances from Queen Elizabeth’s reign (stores, 1571, registers, 1594). Blathwayt’s correspondence is in the British Museum, and letters from the other early secretaries are among the State Papers, Domestic, and the Admiralty papers. The earliest War Office books date from 1660 and the correspondence from about 1683. The importance of the papers for colonial history runs chiefly from 1754 to 1783. The great bulk of the books and papers now deposited in the Public Record Office were originally stored in 6 Whitehall Yard, a house across the street from the Horse Guards, usually called the War Office Depot. This house was entirely filled with the papers—floors, attic, kitchen, and even the spaces under the eaves being brought into use. In 1854 and 1855 these premises were needed for the increased business of the army and the Ordnance Medical Board, and in the latter year the entire mass of material was transferred to Chancery Lane. The amount was estimated at over 40,000 bound volumes, bundles, and parcels, filling 113 vans. During the following five years other papers were brought from the War Office, the commissariat branch, the Horse Guards branch, and elsewhere. Work on the papers was begun at once and many tons of matter were destroyed as useless. The records were, in the main, in excellent condition, though some had been damaged from water leaking through the roof of the kitchen at 6 Whitehall Yard.

IN-LETTERS.

1-13. 1756-1783. Letters and Enclosures, from Officers in America to the Secretary at War.

1. 1756-1763. Letters and despatches to the secretaries at war, Barrington and Townshend, and Deputy Secretary Walpole from officers in America. Gen. Loudoun, Gen. Abercrombie, Capt. Aldridge, J. Napier, director of hospitals in America, from St. John’s, Albany, New York, Fort Edward, Lake George, London, with enclosures consisting of reports from subordinates, statistics regarding ordnance, regimental returns, schedules of papers, establishment lists, copies of letters referred to, petitions from officers, etc., including “Maj. Gen. Shirley’s answer to the Earl of Loudoun’s representation of the state of the military chest in North America at the time of Maj. Gen. Abercrombie’s entering on the chief command there”.

ton, 1762 (New York), Gov. Dobbs, 1763 (Brunswick), Gov. Belcher, July 6, 1763 (Halifax), and from other officers, dated at Fort Edward, Plymouth, Placentia, Louisburg, Albany, Quebec, Georgia, and on board men of war, chiefly in 1757.

2. 1763-1776. Letters and despatches to Sec. Barrington, the Marquis of Granby, master-general of ordnance, and the commander-in-chief.

Gen. Gage. New York, Boston, London, 1771–July 23, 1776. Thirty-eight letters in all, that of Apr. 22, 1775, containing a description of the battle of Concord, cf. C. O. 5: 92; that of June 25, 1775, battle of Bunker Hill; that of July 21, 1775, distribution of troops in North America; that of Oct. 1, 1775, id.; others contain enclosures giving figures and statistics, copies of letters written by Gage to officers of the 18th Regiment and replies thereto; letters from these officers to Barrington; lists of promotions of commissioned officers, Aug. 24, 1765. Many of the letters from Gage have Barrington’s comments upon them.

4. 1755-1757. Military despatches from Gen. Shirley to Barrington, New York, Dec. 19, 1755–Sept. 4, 1756, together with Shirley’s memorial to the king, Jan. 3, 1757. Twelve letters, with many enclosures, copies of letters to and from Shirley and others, proclamations, declarations, minutes of councils of war. Many of the letters are marked “Duplicate” or “Triplicate” and all but those of Jan. 13, July 4, and Aug. 20 are to be found in C. O. 5: 47. None of the letters are in C. O. 5: 887. In addition to the letters from America are others sent by Shirley to Barrington and the Treasury for the purpose of vindicating himself in his controversy with Loudoun, Feb. 8–June 3, 1757 (six in all, and the memorial addressed to the king).

5. 1758-1763. Correspondence of Gen. Amherst with Barrington, the Duke of Devonshire, first lord of the Treasury, Charles Townshend, etc., New York, Albany, Schenectady, Staten Island. Fifty-one letters in all, with many enclosures; also a few copies of letters sent to officers in America and a letter, New York, Dec. 9, 1763, from Gage to Welbore Ellis, secretary at war. Compare with C. O. 5: 54-63, where letters similar in character but not duplicates will be found. Amherst did not often send duplicate letters even when writing upon the same subject on the same date to Barrington and Pitt, therein following a practice unlike that of Shirley.
8. 1764-1765. Letters from Gen. Gage to Ellis and Barrington. Ten letters in all, with enclosures which are often elaborate, such as those containing descriptions of the Floridas and accounts of dealings with the Indians. Compare 2, above, and C. O. 5: 83-95. Gage rarely sent duplicates. In his letters to Ellis and Barrington, he deals strictly with military affairs, such as concerned the condition and state of the army, vacancies, promotions, estimates of military expenses, and the like, which did not concern the Secretary of State.

7. 1766, Jan. 8-Oct. 11. Id. Concerned largely with Indian affairs along the frontier and with Pontiac's War.

8. 1767, Jan. 15-1769, June 16. Id.

9. 1769, July 22-1774, Dec. 25. Id.

10. 1776-1780. Letters from Gens. Howe and Clinton. Those of Gen. Howe cover the period Aug. 9, 1776-Apr. 13, 1778; those of Gen. Clinton, June 15, 1778-Oct. 31, 1780. They are concerned but little with matters of policy, dealing chiefly with the condition and management of the army—ammunition, clothing, food, housing, sickness—and show a bad state of affairs, regarding which Howe was very outspoken in his comments, presenting evidences of fraud in the furnishing of supplies and medicines. Clinton's letters are briefer and more formal. Enclosures mentioned are frequently missing; but in some cases may be found in C. O. 5: 82-105. In the volume are three letters from Amherst, Whitehall, Dec., 1778-Feb., 1779.

11. 1776-1781. Letters from Gens. Carleton and Haldimand, Quebec and Canada. Those of Carleton cover the period, Aug. 20, 1776-July 17, 1778, those of Haldimand, July 7, 1778-Oct. 22, 1781. Carleton's letters are full of references to colonial affairs and contain comments on current events. Entered between Haldimand's letters of Nov. 1, 1779, and Oct. 25, 1780, are many letters, petitions, and memorials sent to Barrington by officers of the army in America, with the secretary's memorandum in most cases on the dorse. There are also letters from Howe, Jan. 25, 1779, Amherst, Mar. 27, 1779, Phillips, with enclosures, among which are copies of letters from Lord George Germain and a copy of a letter sent to Washington, Dec. 23, 1780.

12. 1781-1782. Letters from Gens. Clinton and Carleton, and other miscellany. Clinton's letters cover the period Jan. 28, 1781-May 4, 1782, those of Carleton, June 14-Dec. 21, 1782. All concern chiefly routine matters, and contain many elaborate statistical returns. The last third of the volume is filled with miscellaneous letters and papers, chiefly from Canada, 1779-1782.

13. 1782-1783. Letters from Gen. Carleton. These letters are chiefly official despatches, of a formal nature, dealing with promotions, appointments, vacancies, leaves of absence, and containing reports and returns, and copies of many memorials received by Carleton and by him sent to the secretary. Entered between the letters of June 16 and 17, 1783, are forty-one enclosures, with schedules of cash and clothing returns. There is also a short account of the King's American Dragoons.
19. 1760-1763. Letters from Governors and Others in Guadeloupe and Martinique to the Secretary at War.

From Lieut.-Gov. Crump, Gov. Dalrymple, Gov. Melville, Gen. Monckton, Maj. Colin Campbell, Gov. Rufane, with enclosures, among which is a copy of court-martial proceedings, 1759. Crump's letters are often long and the secretary's comments upon them elaborate. The letters from Martinique are mainly of local interest. In the volume are also a few letters from Dominica.

49. 1764. Letters and Papers from West Florida and the West Indies.

The first half of the volume contains papers relating to the cession of West Florida after the treaty of 1763. They were sent over by Maj. Robert Farmar of the 34th Regiment in 1764, and narrate the circumstances of the evacuation of the port of Mobile and the country adjoining, beginning Oct. 20, 1763, and extending to Feb., 1764. They consist of the following: verbal process at Mobile of the cession of that port, harangue to the Choctaw nation by Farmar representing England, and by the governor of New Orleans representing France, military appointments, instructions to officers, tables of Indian villages at the post of Aleybamous, store returns, cannon returns, embarkation returns, reports on the state of the forts, on presents to the Indians, on the produce of Louisiana (valuable), list of effects and utensils handed over to Farmar, with valuations attached, verbal process of the cession of the post of Tombekbe, copy of a memorial from Capt. John Farmar to Maj.-Gen. Keppel, letter from Maj. Forbes, commandant at Pensacola, letters from Maj. Farmar to Ellis, lists of inhabitants of Mobile who had taken the oath of allegiance, and a few other papers. This portion of the volume has been copied for the state of Mississippi.

The remainder of the volume contains papers relating to Jamaica, Antigua, and Grenada, Dec. 30, 1760-Aug. 14, 1764.

50. 1768-1777. Letters and Papers from the West Indies.

From Antigua, St. Vincent, Grenada, Jamaica, St. Christopher, and Dominica, chiefly about military affairs.

51. 1777-1788. Id.

From Tobago, St. Lucia, Barbadoes, and St. Eustatius, as well as from the islands mentioned above.

52. 1781-1783. Id.

From the same islands as in 51 and 52. All of these letters and papers, though relating chiefly to military affairs, are of importance for the history of the naval conflicts in the West Indies during the Revolutionary War.

57. 1772-1773. Letters and Papers relating to the West India Expedition of 1772-1773.

404. 1763-1767. Note Book of Intelligence and Business that came before the Committee [Plantation Committee] of the Privy Council.

This book was evidently kept by a secretary or clerk of the committee of the whole Council, but no reason for its presence among the War Office papers appears. The volume contains extracts from a Board of Trade representation, dated Nov. 3, 1763, describing Tobago, Grenada, Grenadillas, St. Vincent, Dominica; notes on proceedings in the Council Chamber, May 7, 1764, on boundary disputes between New Hampshire and New York, on coal mines in Cape Breton, on the boundary of Florida, on prize causes, on plantation appeals (Freebody vs. Brenton, Rhode Island, Cleeve vs. Mills, Virginia, Despay vs. Blaneau, Jamaica, Gov. Boone vs. the assembly, South Carolina, Perrin vs. Witter, Beckford vs. Leake, Howlett vs. Osborne, Camm vs. Hansford, and Fothergill vs. Stover), on Mediterranean passes, on the affairs of Florida and Newfoundland, on the ecclesiastical government of Quebec, on the affairs of New York and Massachusetts, with comments on the argument against the Stamp Act.

Amherst was at this time commander-in-chief in England, and his letters deal with the army in general, having little to do with the colonies. An enquiry into the failure of Burgoyne’s expedition seems to be the most important matter discussed.

678-682, 684. 1756-1784. Letters from the Secretary of State and the Treasury to the Secretary at War.

Original correspondence. The earlier volumes have little to do directly with colonial affairs but are of importance in understanding the conduct of the war. The later volumes contain many letters bearing on American affairs.

683. 1776-1781. Letters from Lord George Germain, Secretary of State for the Colonies, to Secretary Barrington, concerning American Affairs.

Original letters of Lord George Germain, with copies of letters from the Admiralty and many important schedules of papers. The letters supplement the military correspondence, though but few of them deal with matters of general policy. Some of the longest concern West Indian affairs.

823-826. 1763-1784. Letters from the Treasury.
857-868. 1757-1783. Letters from Various Departments, I.
869-877. 1759-1783. Letters from Various Departments, II.

These three series of volumes contain further installments of the Secretary at War’s original correspondence. The letters from the Treasury are similar to those in 678-682, 684, above. The first series of departmental letters concerns the secretary’s relations with the Admiralty, the Secretary of State, etc. The second series, while including departmental letters, contains also letters from various correspondents in Germany, Canada, the West Indies, from governors of colonies, and others. They generally bear the comments of the Secretary at War upon them. Some of the documents are transmitted copies or duplicates. All are important.
890. 1776-1783. Statistics.

This volume relates in part to the war in North America and the West Indies. The statistics include:

Lists of camp necessities and equipages, such as wagons, blankets, watch-coats, "sunks for båt horses with wanties and collars complete"; water-decks, round, square, and bell tents, forage, cords, scythes, whetstones, kettles, canteens, water-flasks, clothing, camp-colors, drum-cases, hand-hatchets, haversacks, knapsacks, powder-bags, nose-bags, horse-pickets, picket-ropes, etc.

Names of transports and victualling ships, with times and places of transportation.

Hospital and medical returns, lists of officers, rules and regulations, allowances, some original correspondence (letter from Gage, Boston, Apr. 4, 1776, p. 219). The American statistics come chiefly in the first half of the volume.

891. 1756-1783. Orders.

Orders of the House of Lords and House of Commons, 1777-1781, requesting statistics regarding the army, etc., in various quarters including America. Orders in Council, 1756-1783, not directly concerning American affairs.

972-1020. 1756-1783. Miscellaneous Letters to the Secretary at War.

These volumes of miscellaneous documents supplement those already described and are of considerable importance for the military aspects of the war. The arrangement is chronological and alphabetical as follows:

Vol. 972 contains a paper regarding the corps at Fort William Henry, some George Clinton letters, papers regarding different accoutrements, Pownall's scheme for quartering troops in America, certain papers regarding transports and subsistence, etc. Similar papers are scattered through the other volumes, which are neither indexed, listed, nor paged. There are many letters from officers of regiments in the colonies: Colquhoun, Cornwallis (973), Brown, Devonshire, Dame, Haldane (974), Hunt, Preston, Grant, Grant,

1 A båt horse was a pack-horse; a sunk was a straw-stuffed pack-saddle; wanties were pack-ropes for binding a load on the back of a pack-horse.

2 Water-decks were canvas coverings for protecting a load.
Out-Letters

More, Russell, Pitcher (974), Hopson (974), Prevost, Hartman, Pownall, Farrell, Glasbrook, de Peyster (975), Barlow (976), Ross, Reede, Sackville, Whitmore (977), Hessians, Cunningham, Bailey, Dalling, Dalrymple, Duff, Gillespie (who offers the secretary advice regarding the use of planks or fronts of cork so as to prevent the repetition of such a catastrophe as at Bunker Hill), Mitchell, Mackintosh (991), Robert Smith (994), Adair, Bullock (995). There are also papers regarding the despatch and transport of troops, petitions for pay, leave of absence, redress, promotions, and references to service in America, with details of personal experience. Also returns of soldiers discharged (974), captured, or invalided. A few letters from colonial agents appear (Partridge, Ellis). In 1001 is Barrington-Amherst-Burgoyne correspondence; in 1002, Adair and North letters (hospitals); in 1004, Burgoyne-Irving correspondence (Irving served at Lexington and Bunker Hill); in 1006, letters regarding Gustavus Cunningham, state prisoner; in 1007, some New York papers; in 1008, a Kingston letter regarding American affairs; in 1009, four papers from Wacks, auditor to Hessian regiments in America; in 1010, letters regarding Lieut. Bolton and Capt. Shaules; in 1011, letter from Richard Gardiner regarding John Money killed in South Carolina; in 1012, Clinton’s instructions regarding invalids sent to England; and in 1018, letters regarding affairs of the troops in America: petitions for pay or pensions, pay and reduction of troops, Hessians and provincial regiments, case of Samuel Cooke, missionary of the S. P. G., Monmouth Co., New Jersey. All the volumes contain many papers concerning hospitals and hospital service.

OUT-LETTERS.

COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

23-26. 1765-1786. Id. Series II.

Letter-books of the commander-in-chief and adjutant-general of the army in Great Britain. Series I. is of little importance, containing chiefly copies of the letters of Adjutant-General Edward Harvey; series II. contains drafts of letters to colonials, but at best they partake of a routine character.

SECRETARY AT WAR.

1-123. 1684-1783. General Letters.

This series of Secretary at War’s letter-books begins with Blathwayt’s tenure of the office. It is of importance for the colonies only after 1740 and does not become conspicuously important until after 1756. The most valuable entries are of letters, instructions, and warrants to military officers on the establishment serving in America.

Sec. Barrington's despatches to Howe (most numerous), Gage, Carleton (many letters), and lesser officers, Percy, Pigot (letter promoting him for bravery at Bunker Hill), Irvine, Macilwaine, Higgins, Clinton, Gordon, Christie, and others in the West Indies. The letters, which were generally sent in duplicate, contain little touching the general policy or progress of the campaign and only occasional references to battles and the losses of troops. They show that the Secretary at War interfered but little in the management of military affairs in America and gave the commanders-in-chief large discretionary powers, even including within certain limits control over promotions.

The despatches concern promotions, transfers, disposal of troops, leaves of absence, warrants for court-martial (see also W.O. 30: 17-35), with the necessary queries and orders based on memorials transmitted directly to the secretary and sometimes copied here in full, distribution of troops (Hessians and other German auxiliaries), lists of vacancies, instructions and observations, hospital fees and salaries, warrants for pay, additional troops, questions of rank, exchange of prisoners, inquiries in cases of defeat, etc.

274. July 31, 1777—Sept. 11, 1780.
Despatches from Barrington and Jenkinson to Carleton, Howe, Clinton (most numerous), Haldimand, Phillips, Tryon, Bruce, Templer, Harcourt, Prescott, Stopford, and Prevost, and deal with detentions, shipment of clothing, sale of commissions, promotions, memorials, with copies of enclosures, returns of camp equipages, officers to be relieved, hospital instructions and appointments, lists of garrison officers. Letters regarding the Saratoga Convention may be found on pp. 153-154.

275. Sept. 6, 1780—Aug. 20, 1784.
Despatches from Jenkinson, Townshend, Yonge, and Fitzpatrick to Clinton, Phillips, and officers in the West Indies, relating to the same general subjects as the previous volume, with many lists of various kinds. Numbers of despatches (all after Jan. 6, 1784) sent to Canada and the West Indies (there is also a "West India Letter Book"). An occasional cross-reference shows that letters relating to American affairs were entered in the "Common Letter Book".

To governors, officers in command, various officials, and private persons in the West Indies, regarding pay, leaves of absence, promotions, discipline, also instructions, lists, invoices (medicines, etc.). Letters quite short and formal.

Relating chiefly to deserters from regiments stationed in England.

These volumes contain the correspondence relating to the operation of the press acts, 18 George III., c. 53, and 19 George III., c. 10, passed for the purpose of raising men for the army in America. They are valuable for anyone studying the system of recruiting in England and Scotland during the later years of the Revolutionary War, whereby men were raised for the American service. They should be supplemented by W. O. 1: 995-1005. An important report on the success of the second act, drawn up by Jenkinson, is to be found in 996.

981-983. 1751-1798. Private Letter-Book.

This book contains entries of the Secretary at War’s letters regarding leaves of absence, promotions, appointments, and the like, some of which are concerned with advancement on the staff of the British army in America. An occasional statement may be found that is not contained in the formal notification (W. O. 25: 122-152).

987-988. 1763-1784. American Letter-Books.

These volumes are supplemental to 273-275, and the two series contain the War Office despatches to America during the years named. The despatches, which are of the utmost importance as defining the British war policy, are from the secretaries at war to the commanders-in-chief and the governors of the colonies, and relate solely to the army in America and the West Indies. They are often long and detailed. Occasionally letters received from America are entered. The despatches to Gage have a particular interest.

1044. 1763-1767. Miscellaneous.

Of no particular consequence. On pp. 58, 98, and 99 are copies of instructions sent to Gage and officers in the West Indies regarding drilling, etc.

MARCHING ORDERS.

1-64. 1683-1783. Marching Orders.

These volumes contain embarkation orders for troops going to America and disembarkation orders for invalids, convalescents, and troops returning to England. See W. O. 24. There are no marching orders for America in these volumes.

DEPARTMENTAL.

24-28. 1715-1790. Board of General Officers for inspecting and regulating the Clothing of the Army.

Of no value for colonial history.

96. 1781-1789. Medical Department.

Contains copies of many letters sent to men in the medical service in America.

122-125. 1716-1787. Muster-Master General’s or Commissary-General of Musters’ Office.

These volumes are chiefly important for the mustering of regiments in England. In 125 are entered a few letters from the plantations and a few orders relating to the embarkation of troops to the plantations.
IRELAND.
1-7. 1709-1787. Ireland.
Relate entirely to regiments and officers of the establishment in Ireland. Occasionally a reference to America will be found, as when half-pay was stopped to officers, who refused to go to the West Indies, and when later, during the American War, regiments were replaced, etc.

MUSTER-ROLLS AND PAY-LISTS.
GENERAL SERIES.

1882-11099. 1757-1783. General Series.
The following list notes the regiments of regulars serving between the years 1757 and 1783. The particular regiments serving in America at any time during that period can be ascertained from W. O. 24, and in part from C. O. 5: 173. When the name or number of such regiment is known, data regarding it can be obtained from these rolls and lists. These documents are not included in the printed War Office List.

The following lists of regiments in North America and the West Indies in 1781 are given in C. O. 5: 173.

Coast of the Atlantic: 17 Light Dragoons, Footguards, Regiments of Foot, 3, 7, 16, 17, 19, 22, 23, 30, 33, 37, 38, 40, 42 (1st battalion), 43, 54, 57, 60 (3d and 4th battalions), 63, 64, 69, 70, 71, 74, 76, 80, 82, 84.

Canada: Regiments of Foot, 8, 29, 31, 34, 44, 53, 84 (1st battalion), 47 (three companies).
Leeeward Islands: 1 (1st battalion), 13, 15, 27, 28, 35, 46, 55, 60 (2d battalion), 86 (five companies), 87.
Jamaica: 60 (1st battalion), 79, 85, 88, 92, 94, 99.

Further information as to the distribution of the regiments can be obtained from Cannon, Historical Records of the British Army, some 70 vols., 1846-1852, continued in a few cases to 1907.

MONTHLY RETURNS.

These volumes contain the monthly returns of His Majesty's forces in North America and the West Indies. 1158 (1764) is a large folio, containing on pp. 283-289 returns from Jamaica; on pp. 313-327, from North America under Gage; on p. 362, Grenada; on pp. 338-340, Jamaica; on pp. 496-524, West Indies in general. The other volumes are little books containing returns from North America and the West Indies, 1771-1782.

1373. 1755, 1761, 1806-1807. Returns from Bermuda.

1489-1498. 1758-1786. Returns from North America.

Beginning as early as 1758 and including returns from Havana, Louisiana, etc., with lists of effectives, killed and wounded, garrisons, winter-quarters, and the regular monthly returns.

1570-1577. 1776-1783. Returns of British, Provincial, and German Troops quartered in Canada.

Bundles or small packets containing the monthly returns as indicated. The contents of the several packets vary considerably. 1576 contains no monthly returns, only a “Liste Générale du Corps des Troupes Allemandes Commandés par le Major General ——, pour le 1er de ——, ——”, blanks filled in. The German returns are generally written in French.

2480. 1759-1773, 1780-1789. West Indies.

Separate papers. No returns for the years 1774-1778.

VOUCHERS FOR AGENTS’ DISBURSEMENTS—ARTILLERY.

Bound volumes relating to the Royal Regiment of Artillery, containing the accounts or lists of disbursements made by Cox and Drummond, later Cox and Muir, together with hundreds of original receipts from the different officers and men. The volumes indicated in the printed list as “Pensions” contain the accounts of disbursements for half-pay and pensions, along with receipts or other vouchers. Those indicated as “Miscellaneous” always comprise the disbursements to master gunners and gunners in the several garrisons of Great Britain and a few others.

The volumes contain very few references to America. In 6 some of the receipts are dated at New York; and in the same volume is an account of arrears ordered to be paid to the officers of the Royal Regiment of Artillery in America for the year 1771. In 9 is a similar account for 1772. In 17 is a list of names of men at St. John's and Newfoundland under the command of a captain-lieutenant of the Royal Artillery. In 21 is a list of invalids for 1776-1782. In 30 are documents relating to a surgeon's bill for medicines at Grenada.

REGISTERS.

ESTABLISHMENTS.

1-528. 1673-1783. Registers of Military Establishments.

This collection is made up of three separate series, formerly existing among the records of the Audit Office, Treasury, and War Office. Duplicates and triplicates, therefore, appear of the same return in nearly every bundle. Not all the bundles contain registers of troops serving in America, and the list given below is a selection of such bundles as contain American material. For data regarding the year 1679 see Cal. Col., 1677-1680, p. 1038, and Acts Privy Council, Colonial, vol. I., § 1288.

5-7. 1680-1684 (6 is undated). In addition to the registers of forces, this bundle contains one item of payment out of the garrison account to Jamaica, and another item of payment to Lord Culpeper, by virtue of a warrant of June 24, 1684, and "in compensation of his Letters Patent and Grant of the Quit Rents and other profits of Virginia for Thirty One years, bearing date the 25th of February, 1673, and for all other Pretentions during the government of Virginia". The sum amounted to £1 12s. 10½d. a day or £600 a year. This annuity was charged against the cost of the military establishment and appears to have been paid after Culpeper's death to his executors until 1699. The item appears in the registers for 1686, 1689, 1694, and 1699.1

13. 1690. First mention of the four companies in New York; also of the Duke of Bolton's regiment in the West Indies.

15. 1691-1692. Id.

20. 1693. Various lists of regulations and dispositions.

22. 1699. Twelve companies of foot and one of grenadiers in the West Indies, forty men each; four companies, New York; one company, Leeward Islands; one, Newfoundland.

1 Lord Culpeper relinquished his claim upon the quit-rents of the southern part of Virginia for £700 cash down and £600 to be paid out of the establishment for twenty-one and a half years, Aug. 25, 1683-Feb. 25, 1704. The quit-rents of the northern part went to Lord Fairfax as Lord Culpeper's executor. Blathwayt's Journal, II. 12, report of 1698.

"The said fines and forfeitures, having by Letters Patent been granted by King Charles the Second to the Lord Culpeper and others, were Repurchased by the Late King for divers Considerable Sums of money actually paid to the said Lord Culpeper, and a further pension of Six hundred Pounds a yeare, payable for Twenty One yeares, and now Charged upon the Establishment of your Majesty's Army", etc., Acts Privy Council, Colonial, II. 143.
23. 1700. Id.
28. 1702-1703. Id.
33. 1703-1704. Id.
37. 1704. Regulations for regiments in the West Indies.
38. 1704-1705. New York, Bermuda, Newfoundland.
42. 1705. Similar to 37.
45. 1707-1708; 49, 1708-1709; 55, 1709-1710. Same as 38.
69. 1712. Jamaica, New York, Bermuda, Annapolis Royal, Placentia.
72. 1713-1714. Id.
73. 1714-1715. Register of troops in Great Britain and the Plantations.

The remaining volumes may be entered as follows. Except when specially noted they contain the usual registers of plantation troops.

80, 1715-1716; 83, 1716-1717; 85 (Col. Phillips's regiment of foot at Annapolis Royal and Placentia, 1717); 86, 1717-1718; 88, 1717-1718; 89 (Providence and Bahamas); 92, 1718-1719; 93, 1719-1720; 99, 1720-1721; 106, 1721-1722; 111, 1722-1723; 114, 1723-1724; 117, 1724-1725; 123, 1725-1726; 129, 1726-1727; 135, 1727-1728; 148, 1728-1729; 147, 1729-1730; 151, 1730-1731; 155, 1731-1732; 158, 1732-1733; 163, 1733-1734; 165 (eight independent companies of Jamaica, 1734); 169, 1734-1735; 173, 1735-1736; 177, 1736-1737; 180, 1737-1738; 183, 1738-1739; 189 (Lord Cathcart's expedition, 1739); 192, 1739-1740; 194 (officers of hospital for Cathcart's expedition, 1740); 197, 1740-1741; 199 (regiments of foot raised in America); 206, 1741-1742; 208 (regiments of foot raised in America); 218, 1742-1743; 222 (troops for the service of Georgia); 226, 1743-1744; 236, 1744-1745; 241 (Cape Breton, 1745); 247 (id., 1745-1746); 249, 1745-1746; 251 (Georgia rangers, 1745-1746); 260 (Cape Breton, 1746-1747); 263, 1746-1747; 272 (Cape Breton, 1747-1748); 274, 1747-1748; 280 (Cape Breton, 1748-1749); 283, 1748-1749; 284 (garrison of Rattan Island, 1748-1749); 286 (regiments of dragoons and foot, also three independent companies in South Carolina, 1748-1749); 289, 1749-1750; 293, 1750-1751; 297, 1751-1752; 301, 1752-1753; 305, 1753-1754; 308 (two regiments of foot for America, 1754); 311, 1754-1755; 318, 1755-1756; 330, 1756-1757; 337 (seven regiments ordered from Ireland to North America); 341, 1757-1758; 352 (Cape Breton, 1758-1759); 364 (id., 1759-1760); 367, 1759-1760; 382 (Guadeloupe, 1760-1761); 383, 1760-1761; 384 (Quebec, 1760-1761); 396 (Guadeloupe, 1761-1762); 397, 1761-1762; 398 (Quebec, 1760-1761); 409 (Guadeloupe, 1762-1763); 410 (Havana, 1762-1763); 411 (Martinique, 1762-1763); 412, 1762-1763; 413 (Quebec, 1762-1763); 421, 1763; 422 (Quebec, 1763); 425, 1763-1764; 426 (Quebec, 1763-1764); 431, 1764-1765; 436, 1765-1766; 441, 1766-1767; 446, 1767-1768; 452, 1768-1769; 457, 1769-1770; 462, 1770-1771; 466, 1771-1772; 470, 1772-1773; 475, 1773-1774; 480, 1774-1775; 484, 1775-1776; 489, 1776-1777; 493, 1777-1778; 498, 1778-1779; 503, 1779-1780; 508, 1780-1781; 516, 1781-1782; 523, 1782-1783; 528, 1783-1784.

748. 1783-1789. Half-Pay, British-American Forces.

This large volume contains a copy of the royal ordinance authorizing half-pay to provincial troops, dated Dec. 23, 1783. Also lists of the reduced officers of the British-American forces, entitled to receive half-pay, in columns headed: "Regiments", "Officers", "Names and Quality", "Half-Pay per diem".

These volumes supplement the earlier volumes, 1-528.

REGISTERS VARIOUS.

89-94. 1728-1783. Id. Series II.

The first series contains tabular lists in six columns of the commissions granted, for example:

<th>By whom granted.</th>
<th>Name of the Secretary of State</th>
<th>Name of the Regiment</th>

It is evident that these volumes contain more information than is to be found in the notification books, for all blank commissions in the latter can be filled in from the commission books, where many of the documents are given in full. The two series contain much the same kind of information, but each furnishes details not to be found in the other. Generally speaking, one may trace in these volumes the career of every commissioned officer that served in the British army in America or elsewhere. Similar commissions can be found in S. P. Dom., Entry Books, 164-203, 332-385, where are commissions for 1 In 1745 Shirley and Pepperrell had the honor to be appointed colonels on the establishment, with instructions to raise companies of foot in America, as would any British colonel in England at the cost of the crown. Correspondence of Shirley, I. 294-295, 311; II. 92-93, 97, 108, 165.

of officers serving in America, warrants for grants of officers in America or connected with American affairs, passes, bills for charters, offices, and the like.

Ledger books of commissions, arranged in order of regiments, cavalry first and then the foot regiments. At the end of the volumes are the garrisons in Great Britain and the staff in North America. Besides the officers, this staff list gives town majors, commissaries, barrack-masters, apothecaries, chaplains, etc. The indexes are alphabetical lists of names with page references.

122-152. 1708-1783. Notification Books.

Entry books of notifications by the secretaries of state of the granting of commissions. The request was sent by the Secretary at War asking that commissions for officers and others in the army be prepared and laid before the king for signature. The notifications cover not only the usual commission officers but also adjutants-general, commissaries-general, quartermasters-general, surgeons and engineers with army rank, and military governors as of Louisburg and Mobile. No commissions to officers of provincial regiments are included. The commissions cover appointments to new companies and changes in old companies, and all promotions in rank of officers in America (including Canada and the West Indies) from 1708 to 1783, covering, of course, the early companies in New York, South Carolina, etc. The volumes, especially the indexes, show hard usage. They are particularly valuable after 1755 and during the Revolution. To use them one must know either the particular officer's name, or the number (or name) of his regiment, or the name of the commander-in-chief.

221-222. 1773-1788. Succession Books. Series II.

The first series contains regimental lists of successions in the army, giving names, with indication of rank, name of predecessor (generally blank), cause (death, retirement, or transfer), and date. The arrangement is chronological, under each regiment according to the following headings: "General and Field Officers", "Guards", "Horse", "Dragoons", "Foot Guards", "Foot". When the name and regiment are known, these volumes can be used to ascertain the details of advancement in rank of all officers in service in America.

The second series contains the same information for the years 1773-1788, but differs from the other series in that the names are entered without regard to the regiments. The data were evidently taken from the commission and notification books. None of the volumes contain entries regarding the officers of the provincial regiments, for which see W. O. 17: 1570-1577, and other volumes of class 17; W. O. 24: 748-762.

705. 1782-1815. Staff Returns.

Chiefly of date later than 1783 and relating to Africa, Bahamas, Bermuda, and Quebec.

Returns of embarkation of troops to Guadeloupe, 1759, Louisburg, 1758, North America, 1760; report on the losses in baggage and necessaries in the wreck of the transport Pitt in the St. Lawrence, Aug. 6, 1765; embarkation returns of St. Clair’s troops, of the 9th, 20th, 24th, 34th, 53d, 62d Regiments of Foot at Cork, Apr., 1776, including women and children (“Many more women embarked with each regiment, but they were all turned on shore except 60 per regiment; many of the children were also turned on shore”); embarkation made or intended, May 1, 1778; embarkation returns of “British recruits of Gen. Howe’s army, 500 embarked in the Clyde for Spithead”, May 1, 1778.

2979-2983. 1712-1755. Estimate of Half-Pay and Retired Pay (with names).
2984-2989. Lists of Officers.
2990-2991. Registers of Warrants for Half-Pay.
3020-3036. 1735-1736, 1755-1783. Payments of Pensions to Widows of Full-Pay Officers.
3180-3194. 1704-1784. Register of Warrants of Commissary-General of Musters for Leaves of Absence, etc.

Only a search can determine how far these volumes contain information of importance for the military history of the colonies.

Id. from Loyalists in Canada, many of whom fled from the region north of Albany and around Lake Champlain after Burgoyne's surrender. They ask for aid, relief, recompense, and pay, and often present vivid accounts of the situation. The letters are in many cases undated.

In this bundle have been placed Gen. Carleton's general order book, in two volumes, found among the Bank of England records and transferred to the Public Record Office in 1907. The first and largest of the volumes begins May 8, 1782, and extends to June 30, 1783. The second, a book three by eight inches in size, begins July 1, 1783, and extends to Nov. 23, 1783, with an “after order” on the details of the evacuation.

The first entry records the appointment of Brook Watson as commissary-general. Further entries in the first volume concern appointments, promotions, courts-martial, disposition of troops, appointment of boards of various kinds, rations, forage, embarkation, hospital instructions, reviews, funerals, garrison orders, proclamations (Apr. 7, 1783, of cessation of arms “to be read at City Hall at 12 o’clock the 8th”), charges (against Lieut.-Col. George Campbell, June, 1783), leaves of absence (Joshua Loring, commissary-general of prisoners, to go to England for six months, Nov., 1782).

The second volume is a continuation of the first and concerns paroles and countersigns, appointments, promotions, subsistence of troops, clothing, returns of arms, many accounts of courts-martial with names, desertion, robbery, carrying off of negroes, disobedience of orders (punishment by lashes or hanging), counterfeiting (case of Lieut. Moncrief), invalids, sailing of troops (Hessian and others), instructions of June 9, 1783, from the king (entered Aug. 17, 1783), reduction and return of the forces, leaves of absence, garrison orders, funerals, pulling down of buildings in New York, claims of citizens against officers, disbanding of troops (British soldiers settling in Nova Scotia), etc. An order of Aug. 2, 1783, reads as follows: “Any person found committing the smallest depredation on the property of the Inhabitants, either by destroying their Fences, Orchards, Cattle, Corn, Gardens, or in any other manner whatsoever will be severely punished. The Provost Marshal has orders to patrol continually and to apprehend and to execute on the spot any Soldier or follower of the army he finds marauding.”
10. 1775-1782. Returns, Lists, and Letters. Returns and papers respecting various provincial corps in Canada. 1779-1781, 1783. Annual lists of non-commissioned officers (country, age, size, time), drummers and privates of the German, British, and provincial troops in Canada. Id. of the provincial troops. Miscellaneous letters, reports, and returns. 1778-1783. Letters and papers, Indian Department, containing lists of officers, conferences, minutes of meetings, drafts and copies of speeches. 1775-1782.

1. 1775-1783. Register of Letters of Attorney. This register concerns the pay of the soldiers.

Contains copies of all warrants, of which there are many, sent to the colonies, either empowering governors to appoint courts-martial and to confirm sentences of death, or commanding the holding of courts-martial in special cases. In 14 is contained the evidence in the case of Col. Andrew Frazer, tried for disobedience and neglect of orders in the West Indies. 1788-1790.

The last paper in the book is headed, "Remarks on that part of the State No 1, which expresses the force in the Leeward Is. and Jamaica towards the close of the year 1781". Apparently by Gen. Roy. The "State" referred to is not in the volume.

These bundles, made up of packets separately tied up, are arranged chronologically, and those for each year alphabetically, viz.: those from individuals under the writer's names, those from public offices under the name of the office (Ordnance under O, Treasury under T, etc.), those from corporate bodies, councils, etc. under the name of the place or colony (Antigua under A, etc.). They contain sundry petitions and applications sent to the Secretary at War, relating to commissions, resignations, and the like, together with letters relating to the same. Also papers regarding the embarkation of troops, and other matters that came outside the regular routine of the office. These bundles are not entered in the printed list.
ORDNANCE.
OUT-LETTERS.

5-16. 1699-1783. Master General, Board, and Commander-in-Chief.

Very few entries relating to America. In 6 there is a report (1709) on a demand for tents for the Palatines going to New York, and others on powder for Virginia and engineers for Newfoundland and the West Indies. In 7 there is a reference to bills of exchange from Louisburg, which among other things necessitated an issue of money. In 8 are entries of letters to the storekeepers at Jamaica, Annapolis Royal, and Placentia. In 9 are references to engineers for Gage’s army, powder and ball for Quebec, and a storekeeper for Dominica. In 13 are entries of two letters to Gen. Phillips in Nova Scotia and one to Gov. Haldimand. There are other references in these volumes of a similar character, the later ones of which are interesting as disclosing the machinery of the Ordnance Office during the American War.

Especially valuable are certain letters of Charles Townshend, master general, in vols. 9 and 10, which comment not on ordnance but on current events and the state of public opinion. 9 furnishes some interesting accounts by Brig. George Townshend,\(^1\) who served under Wolfe, by Cols. Murray and Isaac Barré, who were present and were therefore eye-witnesses of what occurred, of the battle of the Heights of Abraham, with a reference to observations by the historian Hume.

MINUTES.

See the printed list. The minutes of the board contain but few entries relating to the colonies. Except for 28, 1781, there are no volumes for the period 1727-1780. In conjunction with these minutes, those of the surveyor general should be consulted, which are complete for the years 1749-1783, \( W. \text{ O.} \ 47: \text{34-102.} \) These volumes are well indexed and can be conveniently used, though they throw little direct light on military operations in America.

LEDGERS OF ACCOUNTS.

1-127. Treasurers’ and Paymasters’ Ledgers, General.

254-262. 1748-1783. Expense Ledgers.

These volumes give convenient summaries of expenditure, under various headings, such as “Military Contingencies”, “Stores”, “Barracks”, etc., and are well indexed.

\(^1\) “Townshend MSS.”, Eleventh Report of the Hist. MSS. Com. Brig. Townshend, afterward the Marquess of Townshend, succeeded to the command after the death of Wolfe. Murray was the first civil governor of Canada, and Barré was at Wolfe’s side when he fell.
ACCOUNTS, VARIOUS.

Many of these papers relate to operations in America.

BILL BOOKS. SERIES I.

For a statement regarding the bill books see under Series IV.

BILL BOOKS. SERIES II.

These volumes contain the quarterly accounts. Those with items regarding America are as follows: 192
(1753-1755), 197 (1755-1757), 204 (1757-1760), 214
(1760-1763), 226 (1763-1765), 234 (1765-1767), 241
(1768-1770), 247 (1770-1772), 255 (1772-1774), 262
(1774-1775), 267 (1776-1777), 274 (1777-1779), 285 (1779-1780), 293 (1780-1782), 303 (1781-1783).

BILL BOOKS. SERIES IV.

The Public Record Office furnishes the following information for those using the Ordnance Accounts. "For general financial information the sources which should be examined are, firstly, the Declared Accounts (Audit Office) of the Treasurer of Ordnance; then the expense ledgers, 1748-1832. Details of expenditure will probably be found in the main series of Treasurer's ledgers. For still further detail as to Ordnance finance the Bill Books should be consulted. These are books containing either copies or the originals of various documents, subsidiary to the accounts of the Treasurer of Ordnance and certain paymasters abroad. These documents comprise bills sent in by contractors, storekeepers' receipts, pay-lists, and miscellaneous vouchers of various descriptions. Series I., II., III., of the Bill Books are entry books; Series IV. consists of original documents bound up in volumes. Of the four series, the first is a small and miscellaneous collection chiefly consisting of quarterly bill books; series II. and III. form the main body and extend over the whole period from 1630 to 1859; while series IV. is chiefly made up of vouchers and other subsidiary documents sent in by the paymasters and storekeepers at various ordnance stations.

"Apart from their general importance, in relation to the inner working of the Ordnance Accounts, the Bill Books are valuable as supplementing to a certain extent the somewhat defective registers of the Ordnance Office. (a) The Quarterly Bill Books after 1750 contain, in addition to salaries and allowances paid to those officials and artificers whose names appear in the Quarter Books, lists of payments to superannuated officers and also some pension lists; (b) the vouchers and other subsidiary documents, which comprise the greater part of series IV., contain lists of artificers and civil engineers employed abroad as well as partial lists of artillery and engineers to whom the foreign storekeepers sometimes acted as storekeepers.”

11-33. 1774-1784. Commissariat Accounts.

15. 1782-1783. New York, Cash Books, Memoranda, Sale of Stores, etc.

17, 18. 1782. Abstract of Rations for Foreign Troops.

19, 1782; 20, 1782; 21, 1782-1783. Tabular Account.

Among the books and bundles in this group are: the commissariat papers, found among the records of the Bank of England and transferred to the Public Record Office in 1907 (bundle 14). They form the official papers of Brook Watson, commissary-general for all the colonies from West Florida to Nova Scotia, and are dated May-Dec., 1782. They consist of books, ledgers, papers (books), and folded papers in packets containing the state of account between the commissary-general and the various contractors and officials for services rendered to the government or for goods supplied, as follows:

Memorandum Book of Brook Watson. Large paper folio, containing memoranda of business to be done, New York, June 12-Aug. 20, 1783, drafts of letters to be written, notes regarding refugees and their provisioning on board sundry vessels, regarding general provisioning, relations with subordinates, copies of letters, and accounts.
War Office Papers

Journals, Ledgers, Cash Book, Sale Book, of Transports Victualled; Payments to Masters of Transports.
Abstract Books of Foreign Corps, which furnish a very complete establishment of the Hessians and other German auxiliaries, including the train, hospitals, etc. A number of the books and papers are dated as far back as 1777.
Foreign Corps Victualled or Transports.
Warrant Book of Brook Watson.
The report made by the Public Record Office upon these papers contains the following statement: “The papers give much information not found in the books, e.g. as to movements of troops, especially isolated units, and the names of civilian officers and American merchants. They also provide an extensive list of merchant vessels then at sea. Special attention is given to the supplies for the German troops, and for the American Loyalists removed to Nova Scotia. These records might also be valuable to historians for the purpose of supplying information as to the problem of transport and its bearing on the fortunes of the war, though these particular accounts have to do rather with the evacuation of the states at the close of the war.”

ARMY LISTS.

MANUSCRIPT LISTS.

13. 1755-1816. Id., Alphabetical.

Beautifully bound volumes, in soft, dark brown undressed calf, with red labels, and bearing on book plate “War Office, Secretary of State’s Library”. The series is not annual, as there are but ten volumes for fifty years.
The arrangement is similar to that in the printed volumes, horse, dragoons, foot, showing names of officers and dates of commissions, all alterations and promotions being indicated in red ink. At the end of each volume will be found the officers of the companies in America, as, for example, in 1745 (10) the four companies at New York, the eight companies at Jamaica, the one at Bermuda, and Ogilthorpe’s. Also a list of field-officers with dates of commissions.

7 and 8 are army gradation books. 1705-1736. A page or more is devoted to each year, and is divided into three grades, captains, lieutenants, cornets or ensigns. The lists give the names of the officers, dates of commissions, and the regiment. Alterations are in red ink.

13 is likewise an army gradation book. 1775-1816. Its pages are divided into columns with printed headings, beginning at the left hand with “Cornet” and ending at the right with “Field Marshal”. The entries are alphabetical, under the letters of the alphabet only, but the arrangement constitutes an alphabetical index to the promotion of each officer, as the dates and regiments are entered under the respective columns. Apparently the entries concern the British army only. At the beginning are explanations as to the length of service required for promotion, etc.
PRINTED LISTS.

These are the annual army lists, issued from the War Office under the direction of the Secretary at War. A specimen title-page is as follows: "War Office, 20 July, 1781. A List of all the Officers of the Army, viz. the General and Field Officers; the Officers of the several Troops, Regiments, Independent Companies, and Garrisons; with an alphabetical index to the whole. Also, A List of the Officers of the Royal Regiment of Artillery, the Corps of Engineers, the Irish Artillery and Engineers, and of the Marine Forces; the Officers on Half Pay and a Succession of Colonels. To which are likewise added The Officers of the Militia Forces, and of the Fencible and Provincial Regiments in Great Britain". Under "Garrisons" are included the companies in America, and there is a separate section for "Officers of the Hospitals for the Forces in North America and the West Indies".

164-166. 1770-1783. Annual Army Lists, made up for official use in the War Office.

164. 1778. A printed list of general and staff officers on the establishment of North America, from 1770, covering staff officers, general hospital staff, artillery officers, officers of dragoons, German auxiliaries, and provincial regiments. The lists of officers of the provincial regiments are on pp. 61-84, where will be found the dates of joining the regiment. The lists differ considerably from those in Treas. 64: 23, and from those in the next volume.

165. 1783. British American Half-Pay Lists. In 1783, Gen. Carleton directed a return to be made of the names, services, and ages up to that time, of the officers belonging to the provincial regiments, including the officers of the British-American staff and others attached to that part of the service. This return was completed, and a copy was retained by Ward Chipman, deputy muster-master of the provincial regiments, 1777-1783, whose name appears among the general staff officers in this volume and in Treas. 64: 23. A copy of the return was sent by Chipman to the War Office in 1822 for the purpose of meeting the claims made by the families of the officers of the provincial regiments raised prior to 1783.

The lists given should be compared with those in Treas. 64: 23. The latter, which is of date later than 1783, as internal evidence shows, contains the names of "Broken Corps", with an explanation of why broken, that are not in the War Office volume, while the latter has a list of "Seconded Officers", not in the Treasury volume. The latter contains a few more names, indications of vacancies and why, and a column of remarks on "alterations", i.e., resignations, successions, and half-pay retirements. The War Office volume notes age, service in the British or provincial corps, and the country or nationality, details which are not to be found in the Treasury volume.

The following list contains the names of sixty-four provincial regiments, as derived from these and other records.
New York Volunteers.
British Legion Cavalry.
British Legion Infantry.
Loyal American Regiment.
Fencible Americans.
New Jersey Volunteers.
De Lancey's Volunteers.

Nos. 1-27 are from the War Office and Treasury lists; 28-45 from the A. O. Declared Accounts, 325, 1287, 1288; 46-48 from the same, 1324, 627; 49-64 are from the list of "Broken Corps" in the Treasury papers. Probably duplicate names for the same regiment have been included in the list. Lists of persons, not in any particular corps but who received commissions in consequence of their personal service as guides, etc., are also given among the "Broken Corps". Canadian and West Indian Corps will be found in W. O. 65:166. The series here given should be compared with that in Canadian Archives, 1883, p. 11.

In 1781 the distribution of the provincials was as follows (C. O. 5:173):

New York District.
First American Regiment or Queen's Rangers.
De Lancey's Volunteers, 3d Battalion.
Skinner's Brigade, 1st, 2d, and 4th Battalions.
Loyal American Regiment.
Loyal New Englanders.
Hussars.
Guides and Pioneers.
Gov. Wentworth's Volunteers.

Carolina and Georgia.
Second American Regiment or Volunteers of Ireland.
Third American Regiment or New York Volunteers.
De Lancey's Volunteers, 1st and 2d Battalions.
Prince of Wales's American Volunteers.
King's American Regiment.
Skinner's Brigade, 3d Battalion.
British Legion.
South Carolinians.
North Carolina Volunteers.
Georgia Rangers.
Bucks County Dragoons.

Pensacola.
Maryland Loyalists.
Pennsylvania Loyalists.

New Providence and Bermuda.
Garrison Battalion.

Nova Scotia.
Fencible Americans.
Orange Rangers.
Nova Scotia Volunteers.
Independent Companies.
King's Rangers.

New York.
Black Pioneers.

Other lists and returns will be found here and there among the Secretary at War's correspondence, either in the War Office series or in the Colonial Office series. In 1781 Secretary at War Jenkinson reported that in Sept., 1780, Sir Henry Clinton sent him a general return of all the provincial forces in North America, a copy of which he sent to Lord George Germain, and separate returns of each of the corps, which he kept in his own office for any use to which it might be thought necessary to apply them (C. O. 5: 173). No trace has been found of these returns.

166. Officers of the British-American Forces placed on Half-Pay and Allowances at the Conclusion of the American War. 1783.

This book contains the following lists:

(a). Of officers entitled to half-pay pursuant to the recommendation of Sir Guy Carleton, as belonging to such regiments as were completed and reported fit for service, agreeable to His Majesty's pleasure, signified by Lord Sackville. 1779.

(b). Of others not recommended by the commander-in-chief but who have since stated their claims in England, and as they appear to be within the spirit of the letter [of Aug., 1784] are allowed to receive half-pay.

(c). Of widows of officers of the provincials whose husbands died in actual service.

(d). Of provincial officers who served in the West Indies.

These lists are corrected to 1832 and are well indexed. They contain the names of Canadian and West Indian corps not to be found in any of the other lists.
HIGH COURT OF ADMIRALTY PAPERS.

INTRODUCTION.

The Lord High Admiral had powers of protection and jurisdiction in all marine affairs. He governed the king's navy and determined maritime causes, both civil and criminal, upon the sea, in ports and harbors, and within navigable rivers below the first bridge. His jurisdiction covered "spoil" cases, mercantile and shipping cases, fishermen, wrecks and find-alls, pirate goods, royal fish, interloping, various torts, collision, salvage, negligence of pilots, masters, and seamen, and he was the conservator of harbors and rivers, hostages, and deodands. He granted vice-admiralty commissions and deputed judges to exercise justice in courts of admiralty. He received the droits or perquisites of admiralty, amercements, goods of pirates, prizes, waifs, strays, wrecks, and deodands.¹

The origin of the Admiralty Court was intimately connected with the claim of Edward III. to the sovereignty of the seas and can be traced back to the period of the naval battle of Sluys (1340). At first the court was not held in any fixed place, but as early as the first half of the sixteenth century, it got established in Southwark, on St. Margaret's Hill, in part of the old parish church of St. Margaret, which formerly stood there. About 1675 it was removed to Doctors' Commons. The enlargement of the court and its powers dates from 1516-1536, and its records begin with 1524. The holding of distinct sessions for Instance and Prize cases does not appear to have been effected until the middle of the seventeenth century.

Doctors' Commons, where the admiralty and ecclesiastical courts were held, was the place of residence, entertainment, and reception of the judges, advocates, proctors, and others, who dispensed and administered the civil law. Before 1570 the civilians had lodged in a mean and contracted house on the north side of Paternoster Row, which had been the residence of one of the canons residentiary of St. Paul's, and afterward in a tavern known as Queen's Head. But in that year, Dr. Henry Harvey, one of their most conspicuous members, leased the dean and chapter of St. Paul's an old stone building, the London house of the Blounts, Lords Mountjoy, which belonged to the cathedral and lay on St. Bennet's Hill, south of the churchyard in the parish of St. Bennet, near Paul's wharf. This structure Harvey designed as a home for the doctors of civil law. The society or college, thus housed, was a voluntary association until 1768, when it was incorporated under the title of "The College of Doctors of Law exercent in the Ecclesiastical and Admiralty Courts", and in 1783, the dean and chapter conveyed the site, which belonged to the church of St. Paul's, to the civilians, and vested the freehold and fee simple of Doctors' Commons in that body for £105 a year, clear of all taxes. Mountjoy House was burned in 1666, and for eight years the college was settled in Exeter House in the Strand. New buildings were erected in 1674, on the same site, at the expense of the college, and remained in use until the demand for improvements about the cathedral led to their dismantling in 1861-1862, and their final demolition in 1867.

The buildings, consisting of the dining-hall, the hall for the hearing of causes, the library, and the doctors' chambers, lay about two quadrangles, hidden from the street by rows of shops and houses, and were approached through two archways, one from Great Knightrider Street, and the other from the thoroughfare known as St. Bennet's Hill. Across St. Bennet's Hill to the east was the Herald's College or College of Arms, the front of which now faces Queen Victoria Street, the roadway of which passes over what was once the garden of Doctors' Commons.¹

The college consisted of a president and doctors, who had to be doctors of civil law in one of the English universities, Oxford or Cambridge, and were admitted on petition by the fiat of the archbishop.² The name Doctors' Commons came from the practice of dining together, and many interesting practices arose, such as the giving of a breakfast by a newly admitted proctor and the surrender of the gown of a deceased member as a perquisite to the beadle. The system of fees was very elaborate, as may be learned from the fee books and from various reports of royal commissions on the courts of justice.³

Before the final dissolution of the corporation in 1857, others than doctors had obtained by special license a right to practise in the courts there. Three of these courts were archiepiscopal, the court of delegates, the court of arches, and the prerogative court of Canterbury, and one episcopal, the consistory court of the Bishop of London. The Admiralty Court since 1660 had sat in two capacities, an Instance Court and a Prize Court, the former exercising ordinary civil jurisdiction, concerning wages, salvage, bottomry, and the like, and the latter dealing with all naval captures in time of war.⁴ The criminal division of the Instance Court, or as it was called, the session of Oyer and Terminer and Gaol Delivery for the Admiralty of England, sat in Justice Hall in the Old Bailey, and there cases of murder and piracy were tried. Near Doctors' Commons were the Prerogative Office in Dean's Court and the Faculty Office on the east side of Godliman Street, by Carter Lane, where dispensations and special marriage licenses were obtained and where wills were entered and filed.

The holding of the ecclesiastical and Admiralty courts in Doctors' Commons was due to the fact that only doctors with a special knowledge of civil law could practice in them. The doctors of canon law lost their identity

¹ For a good general account, see Hughson, London, III., 464-467. Small plans of Doctors' Commons and the Herald's Office are in Maitland's map of Bayards Castle Ward, and in Rocque's map of London, which was drawn in 1737 and published in 1746. There is a large Rocque map in twenty-four sheets in the British Museum (K. I., tab. 23, no. 8), but it is simply the small map enlarged. The frontispiece to Registers of St. Benet and St. Peter, Paul's Wharf, Harleian Society, IV. (1912), is a facsimile of a part of Rocque's map, with the course of Queen Victoria Street drawn upon it in red lines.

² Entries of admissions may be found in the Books of Accounts.

⁴ For fees, see Adm. Court, Miscellanea, 379-438; and for the report of the commission of 1734, see id., 842. Later commissions were those of 1823, appointed to inquire into the duties, salaries, and emoluments of the several courts of justice (report printed, 1824), and 1832, two committees, one ecclesiastical and the other a select committee on the Admiralty and other courts of Doctors' Commons.

⁵ On the prize jurisdiction of the Admiralty Court, see statutes of 1661, 1679, 1706, 1739, 1744.
early, probably at the time of the Reformation, when by the statute of 27
Henry VIII. the universities were forbidden to grant degrees of canon law.
All procedure in the Admiralty Court was by the civil law, without jury or witnesses; there was no cross examination, except by an examiner in private.
The advocates, who corresponded to the barristers at the common law and were employed by the proctors, who corresponded to the solicitors, presented the case and defended it. The court was always held in the afternoon, in the hall of the college, and spectators were rarely if ever present. In criminal cases, tried by commissioners of oyer and terminer in the sessions hall in the Old Bailey, examinations were held in Doctors' Commons, in the chambers of one of the commissioners, and the trial process was, as in the courts of common law, by judge, jury, and witnesses. In fact, the criminal side of the Instance Court was a common-law court. The chief advocate was known as the king's or queen's advocate general and corresponded to the attorney general, and the chief proctor, the king's or queen's proctor or procurator general, corresponded to the solicitor of the Treasury. The court had its marshal and register, both of whom were frequently served by deputy. The vice-admiralty courts in the colonies were organized in the same way, with the same officials, and trial in them, as in the High Court, was according to the civil law. Hence arose the century-long conflict between the civil law and the common law, between the Admiralty Court and the common-law courts, over the question of jurisdiction. This conflict took place in the colonies as well as in England.

Quite apart from their relation to the vice-admiralty courts in America, Doctors' Commons and the Admiralty Court had much to do with colonial affairs, as the papers of the Admiralty and the High Court show. Many letters relating to admiralty concerns in America are dated from Doctors' Commons and among the Admiralty papers are thirty-three volumes of in-letters from the same quarter and seventeen volumes of out-letters. For the arms and dignities of the members see British Museum, Add. MSS., 34694, where sixty-nine coats of arms and the names of 768 civilians are recorded. For a characteristic account of what had become in the nineteenth century "a lazy old nook near St. Paul's Churchyard", see Dickens, David Copperfield, chs. xxiii., xxvi., xxxiii. (Prerogative Court) and Pickwick Papers, ch. x.

The records of the High Court of Admiralty were originally in the office of the register of that court in Paul's Bakehouse Court, Doctors' Commons.
A considerable part of these records were transferred in 1811, 1824, 1825, and 1828 to the Tower, including all the older records of the Instance and Prize courts, the Court of Appeals for Prizes, to which appeals were allowed from the vice-admiralty courts, and from which appeals went to the Privy Council, and the High Court of Delegates, to which appeals were allowed from the ecclesiastical courts and the Instance Court. In 1856 these records

Treasurer's Book of Doctors' Commons, 1567-1828, and the Library Accounts of Doctors' Commons, 1730-1844.

2 See Sketches of the Lives of Eminent English Civilians, by Charles Coote, LL. D., with an introduction relating to the college of advocates (1804). The number of advocates and proctors varied, but averaged somewhat less than fifty each. In 1694 there were 44 advocates and 43 proctors. Chamberlayne, Angliae Notitia, passim. See also Lambert, History and Survey of London, III. 106-118; Microcosm of London; Shepherd, Views of London, II. 117. Saunders in Knight's London, V., gives an excellent description of the hall and the court.
were removed from the Tower to houses in Chancery Lane and thence a few years later to the Public Record Office. When in 1862 it became necessary to consider the demolition of Doctors' Commons, the register requested the Public Record Office to receive further installments of the papers. Many, however, still remained till the opening of the Royal Courts of Justice in 1882, when a further portion was transferred. Additional volumes of the courts of appeal, delegates, and prize, now known as "acquiring records", which had been deposited in the Admiralty division of the High Court of Justice in May, 1909, were removed to the Public Record Office in July of the same year. Thus with the exception of the wills, which were sent to Somerset House, and the muniment books, which were taken with the office of register to the Admiralty Registry, Royal Courts of Justice, practically all the papers relating to our period are deposited in the Public Record Office.

Each file contains a hundred cases or so, and on an average about two cases in a file relate to America. There is no index or guide. The series extends to 1739, after which date the Admiralty Court became of little importance. Even after 1700 it is chiefly concerned with cases of appeal from vice-admiralty courts. When such cases are known the libel can probably be found without great difficulty. In the Exemplifications (p. 314) and Book of Acts (p. 315) entries relating to all these cases can be found, and as these volumes are much easier to use than are the files, a search may well begin there. The Book of Acts extends to 1748, the Exemplifications to 1768.</td>

The libels, Latin or English, contain the plaintiff's and other pleadings, and are accompanied by exhibits in the form of schedules, inventories, commissions of various kinds, etc., generally in English. Sometimes the libel is very brief, as in the case of Ingle c. Cornwallis, sometimes very long, as in the case of Clobery c. Claiborne. The appended documents in many cases are interesting and valuable. A few of the suits to which Vassall was a party do not relate to the colonies, but are of importance as showing Vassall's character and career. There are a number of suits to which Clobery and Claiborne were parties that are not included in the list (93, 157, 165, 167, 183, 194, 203, 234, 273; 94, 52, 73, 109, 153, dated 1635-1637). These suits are of interest as showing the extent of Clobery's trading undertakings in Ireland, Guinea, and elsewhere, and the frequency of his appearance before the High Court. With him were associated De La Barre and Morehead. There are also a few cases connected with the Newfoundland fisheries, with which De La Barre seems to have been connected. Copies of the libels and papers in the suits of Popham c. Haovercombe, Virginia Company c. Wye, and Warwick c. Brustar are in the Library of Congress, and are to be printed in the third volume of the Records of the Virginia Company, edited by Miss Kingsbury.

Prize court, many years wanting.

INSTANCE PAPERS.

Beginning with bundle 10 (1671) the papers are arranged alphabetically according to ships' names, as follows:

38-41. Alphabetically, each year. 1731-1770.
42-48. Id. 1739-1756.
52-58. Id. 1757-1778.

Arranged according to numbers, 1-4254. There is a manuscript index to this series, list 5.
INTERROGATORIES.

7-25. 1625-1733. File of Interrogatories (Instance).

26-28. 1653-1673. Id. (Prize).

The calendar to these volumes is very helpful, for by knowing the name and date of a suit the interrogatories can generally be found. In some instances, however, interrogatories either never existed or are missing; but when present will be found to be extremely valuable documents. For example, the interrogatories in the suit against Lord Baltimore (11, 323) contain an important summing up of the whole case.

EXAMINATIONS.

108-143. 1602-1770. Answers, etc.

With some exceptions, these files are from former Miscellany Books, 831-886. The examinations consist of the depositions of witnesses and the answers to interrogatories, though it is not clear that interrogatories were always administered. The answers are not in every case easy to find, and both series should be searched. Sometimes they are not entered chronologically, as for example, Baltimore's answer to the interrogatories mentioned above is in 115, under date June 4, 1636, and Matthews's answer to the libel is in 118, dated June 29, 1639. The calendar of examinations is of little value. In Vassall's case the plan of making a settlement in Florida or Carolina is elucidated by examinations that are important, supplementing the entries in Cal. Col., 1574-1660. See 51, Dec. 12, 17, 1634, and Apr. 14, 1635.

APPRAISEMENTS.

After sentence was passed, a commission of appraiser was issued to certain appraisers, who, on the adjournment of the court, made an inventory of the ship and its contents. These volumes contain such appraisements, chiefly of French and Dutch ships, taken as prizes. Though no colonial vessels are listed, the inventories are of interest, as showing cargoes, valuations, and the character of the trade.

WARRANTS.

10-55. 1624-1760. Files of Warrants, Decrees, Summons, etc.

Many bundles wanting. These files contain the warrants, decrees, summonses, etc., issued by the Lord High Admiral for the arrest of ships. A Register of Warrants follows: Adm. Court, Instance and Prize, Register of Warrants, 12-77. 1605-1772.
EXEMPLIFICATIONS.

Exemplifications are copies of a judgment or orders of the highest authorities to carry out or execute the judgment of a court. In these cases they take the form of orders or instructions, at first in Latin, later in English, from the Lord High Admiral (from the king or in his name, after the office of Lord High Admiral was put in commission), issued to some one to do certain things.

1. To the marshal of the High Court, to release ship or goods wrongly seized in case of prize; to summon the owners of a ship or others to attend "before us or our aforesaid judge or his surrogate in the common hall of Doctors' Commons situate in the Parish of St. Benedict near Pauls Wharf, London"; to recover bond in the case of a person indicted for piracy, who had fled, or to cite the bailiffs to appear or to see judgment and expenses paid; to attach and arrest certain parties until they had paid the sums awarded for damages or costs; to cite certain parties to appear in the common hall, then and there to show cause why something should not be done.

2. In case of appeal from a colonial court, the command was addressed to vice-admirals, justices of the peace, mayors, sheriffs, bailiffs, marshals, constables, and all other officers and ministers, within the liberties and franchises and without, to prevent the carrying out of the decree of the colonial court.

3. In prize cases the command was addressed to the captor or those in whose possession the ship might be to release the ship. In such cases elaborate schedules sometimes accompanied the exemplification.

4. To merchants to furnish a schedule or inventory.

5. To all and singular persons of whatsoever dignity, state, degree, or pre-eminence they be, issued in the case of an exemplification of sentence. A common form.

6. To certain persons to act as a commission for answers and examinations.

7. To the marshal to issue monitions in the cases of derelicts claimed by the crown.

These documents are valuable not only for the information that they contain, but also because they carry the evidence regarding appeals from colonial courts to a much later date than do the libel files, which stop with 1739. The last exemplification here filed is dated 1767, a case of appeal from Dominica. The date of the exemplification, however, gives but slight clue as to the actual date of the appeal.

ASSIGNATION BOOKS.

Vols. 190-195 contain the record of proceedings before a special court of vice-admiralty erected in pursuance of the proclamation issued, May 1, 1776, by George III. (Patent Rolls, 16 George III., pt. IV., no. 16), based on the act of Parliament prohibiting trade with the colonies and authorizing the condemnation of all ships, with their cargoes and furniture, evading the act. The court, thus authorized, held its first session, June 1, 1776. The record, which is very formal and technical, contains the names and lading of the ves-selves taken and the sentence of the court. It furnishes few details or incidents of the captures. The volumes are indexed by ships' names, alphabetically.

BOOK OF ACTS.

75-91. Calendar of Volumes 33-51.

Vols. 25 to 74 furnish a convenient index to the cases that came before the High Court. They contain the records of each meeting of the court and of the business that came before it day by day, thus giving a chronological history of each suit. There are records in these volumes of suits that do not appear in the calendars, and apparently are not to be found in the libel files. Some of the early suits thus omitted are: Wye et al., master and proprietor of the Garland, c. Thomas Sheppard and John Farrar, agents of Wye, on board the ship, Apr. 20, 1620; Sheppard and Farrar c. Wye; Ballow and Griffith c. Wye; Council of New England c. Plymouth ships and merchants. In later volumes we meet with many suits by colonists, Joseph Wragg and Richard Lambton of Charleston, Isaac Pemberton of Philadelphia, against certain ships, as Pemberton c. the Westmoreland (1744), Wragg and Lambton c. the Lovely Mary (1744), Young and Gilliard, owners of the Expedition, c. Matthews (St. Christopher), Moore and others, the Recovery c. Gov. Robinson of Barbadoes; Robert Franks of the Providence c. Thomas Mitchell, collector (Virginia, 1748), Matthison c. the Westmoreland (Jamaica, 1748), Combs and Co. of the Loyal Mac c. freight due for transporting goods from Jamaica to the Isle of Wight, and others.

The entries are often brief and but few documents are recorded, but the references are helpful and the volumes will repay a careful examination. There are good indices nominum, and if the name of ship, captain, or plaintiff be known the entry can be readily found.

MONITIONS.

Many years wanting. Monitions were issued in the name of the king and signed by the register of the High Court, warning all persons having any claim or interest in the ship seized to appear before the judge of the High Court, and show cause why the ship should not be condemned as lawful prize, and confiscated and forfeited to His Majesty. Such monitions were affixed to the Royal Exchange.

SENTENCES.

1-42. 1643-1766. Sentences (prize).
43-44. 1776-1788. Sentences in American Prize Causes.

These volumes and bundles contain sentences in prize causes only. 43-44 repeat the sentences in the American causes noted in Assignment Books, 190-195.
MISCELLANEA.

1-1341. 1500-1800. Miscellanea.

Among the first nine hundred bundles and volumes of this series are very few that concern the colonies directly, but many that are of importance for the organization and practice of the High Court itself.

Bundles 167-170 contain inter alia accounts of the American Droit Commission, in seven cases where the property after condemnation was restored to the claimants. 1819. 171 is a single volume containing the accounts of ships and goods seized and sold at the island of St. Eustatius in 1781. The prize money here referred to realized nearly a million pounds.

178 American prizes; returns of captures in 1812-1813.

There are many volumes of Admiralty Court accounts—receipts, vouchers, etc., the greater number of which are of date later than 1783. As belonging to the earlier period note may be made of the following:

379-438 constitute a registry of court fees for the years 1656-1783; 562-577 are Instance bill books for 1688-1797, and 603 contains other bills, chiefly prize, 1767-1810; 638-642 contain letters of attorney for prize (original and copies), 1700-1760; and 643-647 are registers for 1760-1791.

706-715 contain taxed bills of costs for 1740-1816, covering claimants, captors, and crown, with ships’ names arranged alphabetically.

719 is a court book for 1779-1781, and 731 contains drafts of prize minutes for 1746-1779; 747 contains papers relating to jurisdiction, 1660-1800.

752-763 constitute a valuable series of paper packets, containing the original warrant, sent by the Lord High Admiral or the Admiralty Board and signed by the secretary, for appointments in the High Court and in vice-admiralty courts in England and the colonies, 1604-1801. The first colonial vice-admiralty warrant here found is dated Feb. 17, 1691/2 and creates Sir Edmund Andros vice-admiral of Virginia (754, no. 299; no. 300 is the warrant for Samuel Allen’s commission, no. 448, Nicholas Trott, no. 467, James Smith, judge, Brian Rushworth, register, Thomas Hayne, marshal, of the vice-admiralty court, Newfoundland, Sept. 1, 1708). The bundles contain also the warrants for other officers of the court. In 756, no. 409, is the warrant for Quary to be judge of the court for Pennsylvania, West Jersey, and the three Lower Counties, John Moore to be advocate, Josiah Rolfe (Rolph) to be register, and Henry Mallass to be marshal, Aug. 31, 1702. This particular warrant bears traces of having been much handled.

800-803 contain a miscellaneous collection of papers that eventually are to be sorted and rearranged. In 803, a packet bearing the sub-numbering 9. 00-9. rr, a classification device still appearing in red ink in the packet but no longer entered in the list, contains letters of marque issued against America in the years 1812-1814, and a copy of the royal commission (Oct. 13, 1812) authorizing the High Court and duly constituted vice-admiralty courts to proceed against American prizes.
Miscellanea

804 contains papers relating to fees and other perquisites of the marshal for the period of the Revolution, 1773 and succeeding years.

805. A large bundle of miscellaneous documents, printed and manuscript.

Among the printed instructions relative to captures by privateers, 1803-1812, is a printed paper, 13 a/1, Instructions for the Commanders of our Ships and Vessels, dated May 2, 1776, issued in consequence of the Prohibitory Act. Other papers are as follows:

Directions to exempt from seizure vessels coming from certain West India islands (13 b). 1781.

Printed proclamation appointing the distribution of prizes taken during the continuance of the Rebellion now subsisting in divers parts of the Continent of North America" (13 gg). Dec. 22, 1775.

Instructions to the commanders of the king’s ships in the matter of American prizes (13 hh).

Collection of papers relating to the French prizes taken to Jersey and Guernsey (noted on p. 330). The packet is numbered 13 k/4.

Papers regarding the prize powers of the admiralty court of New York (13 o). 1764-1781.

Among the remaining papers are:

Printed proclamation for granting the distribution of prizes during the present hostilities [against Spain]. June 25, 1779.

Id. ordering pilots to share in prizes. Feb. 12, 1746. (Torn.)

Printed order in Council, permitting Dutch ships to return home. Feb. 16, 1781.

Printed additional instructions to ships of war and privateers that have or may have letters of marque against the French King or the King of Spain or any other enemies or rebellious subjects of the crown of Great Britain. Apr. 19, 1780.

Instructions for the receiver of the droits of admiralty, temp. Burrington Goldsworthy (c. 1730-1740).

In this paper the droits of admiralty are carefully defined as follows:

In Time of War.

1. Vessels and goods of any enemy that may come by accident or stress of weather, etc., into British or colonial ports or harbors, or that may be taken at sea by a non-commissioned vessel.

2. Vessels and goods of those trading with the enemy or corresponding with them in any manner.

3. Prizes taken by a commissioned captain, who changes his ship without taking out a new commission or by any person acting as captain other than the one named in the commission.

4. Any vessel or goods taken by His Majesty's ships of war, within port, harbor, river, or creek, or within gunshot of any port, castle, or fort.

5. A tenth part of any vessel or goods taken by His Majesty's ships of war on the high seas.

Id., by privateers or holders of letters of marque.

Id. of salvage allowed to captors of a vessel rescued or retaken from the enemy.
Whole salvage in case such capture be by His Majesty's ships of war, or by any non-commissioned vessel.

In Time of Peace.

1. Goods and effects of traitors, pirates, homicides, and felons, and other delinquents within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty. Also of all persons felo de se, and of fugitives, persons convicted, attainted, condemned, outlawed, or against whom writs of ex-igents are issued within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty.

2. Fines, forfeitures, amercements, and pecuniary penalties laid or inflicted in any court of admiralty.

3. Royal fishes, "sturgeons, whirlpools, porpusses, whales, dolphins, grampus, and in general all fish whatever remarkable for their largeness and fatness".

4. All duties relating to anchorages in seaports and public rivers, from all foreign and other vessels.

5. All wrecks of the sea, lost or waifed goods or merchandises, flotsams (flotsams), jetsons (jetsams), lagans, shares,¹ treasure trove, deodands, and all goods whatever, derelict or forsaken within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty.

828. 1679-1696. Copies of original documents delivered out of the registry of the High Court, consisting of letters of attorney, warrants, bonds, orders, bills of sale, answers, bills of lading, promises to pay, indenture and charter parties, articles of agreement, licenses or passes for merchants, certificates and depositions, proclamations, etc. The registry of the High Court, 1660-1815, contains many documents relating to colonial admiralty appointments and other admiralty business.

829-831. 1675-1805. Receipts for original documents delivered out of the registry.

880. Contains an entry book of papers relating to prize proceedings in the vice-admiralty court of New York during the Revolutionary War. It consists of a single volume, bound in vellum, and labelled "An Account of Letters and Papers occasionally sent to the Registrar of the Admiralty, 1784". One entry states that four boxes of records of the court held "during the late war" were received Mar. 16, 1784, from David Mathews, late register of the vice-admiralty court, New York, and duly receipted for by the deputy register in London. This volume contains also a "Catalogue of the Papers in the above mentioned Four Boxes". See p. 330.

891-1389, formerly known as "Unarranged Miscellanea", 1542-1800, have now been distributed and classified, topically and chronologically, in part according to the nationalities of the ships concerned, English, American, Spanish, French, and Dutch, in part according to the nature of the contents of the papers. This great ¹ Flotsams are goods which from any accidents are found floating or swimming on top of the water. Jetsams are goods cast into the sea or overboard in time of danger and afterward found lying on the shore. Lagans are such parcels of goods as by occasion of shipwreck are sunk in the sea or found under water and to which sometimes may be fastened a buoy or cork in order that they may be found again. Shares are not defined, but probably refer to shares of prizes, thirds or tenths.

mass of material, which in one way or another came into the hands of the register of the Admiralty, is of the most miscellaneous description. In general it consists of official authorizations, attestations, depositions, decrees, valuations, and assessments of vessels seized; interrogatories and answers; fragments of monitions, warrants, allegations, and libels that appear to have broken away from the original files and therefore supplement the Instance and Prize Court papers; commissions and warrants for the examination of witnesses, notary's certificates, letters of marque, concordats, register's reports, account books of ships and merchants, ships' logs and journals, bills of sale, accounts of prize sales, records of disbursements, itemized accounts of merchants, of the expenses of vessels, and the like. Among the most interesting papers are the intercepted private and business letters, some of which had never been opened since they were sealed by their writers until examined for the purpose of this volume.

Large numbers of the papers are of the character of High Court exhibits, and consequently are often of value. But nothing so interesting for colonial history has been discovered as was the Bradford letter found by Mr. Marsden among these papers, and printed in the Am. Hist. Rev., VIII. 294-301, or the letters of Altham and Bridge found in the same bundle and printed by the Massachusetts Historical Society, Proceedings, XLIV. 178-189. These letters were sent over as exhibits in the suit of Stevens and Fell against the colony in 1624.

As now rearranged the following bundles are of importance for colonial history.

SHIPS' BOOKS AND PAPERS.

972. 1773-1780.

Commerce, Samuel Williams, master. Mar.–July 6, 1777. From Virginia.

Carpenter, Samuel Williams, master. Aug.–Oct., 1773. Falmouth to Philadelphia.

Unless there were two vessels named Commerce, the dates seem to conflict.

Nicholas Mole to Charleston.

Blair, Thomas Periam, master. Mar.–July, 1777. Dartmouth to Charleston.

Boston toward South Carolina. A duplicate carries the log to
Jan. 3, when the vessel was captured, an event noted in the log.

Out of Salem harbor, possibly to Glasgow, as last entry mentions Isle of Man.

toward Cadiz, dismasted off Coruña, and put into that port.

Hooper, William Knapp, master. Apr. 4, 1777–Jan. 10, 1778. New-buryport to James River.
Fame, Joseph Castin, master. May–Nov. 23, 1780. Boston to Amsterdam and return, bearing letter from Amsterdam merchants to their correspondents in Boston.

Hoope[r?], William Knapp, master. July 8–Aug. 16, 1774. Newburyport to West Indies (Leeward Islands).

George, Archibald Bog, master. Greenock to Skye, June 26–July 14, 1775. Skye to Cape Fear, Aug. 6, 1775, had a fight with a privateer out of Boston and struck, June 16, 1776.

Aurora (in same book), John Hucheson, master. Dec. 19, 1776–Jan. 29, 1777. York River apparently to Nantes, but the log ends with the vessel somewhere in the Irish Channel. A duplicate adds under date Jan. 29, "At 1 o'clock was safe in Liverpool dock."

Dickinson (mutilated), William Meston, master. 1775. Cadiz to England; also Jan. 16–Apr. 7, 1776, Philadelphia to Nantes. On Saturday, Mar. 30, 1776, appears this note, "The ship's company finding that the vessel on her arrival at Nantz was to load warlike stores for the Continental Congress thought proper to take the charge of her from the captain and run her into England. Accordingly we did take her from the captain in his Majesty's name." The ship was taken to Bristol.

Rising States, James Thompson, master. Feb. 28–Apr. 14, 1777. Privateer; interesting log.

Some of these log books are very human documents, with covers, fly-leaves, and back-pages embellished with a variety of miscellaneous entries, poems, remarks, calculations, and even pictures.

Marquis of Rockingham, George Dodge, jr. June 16–Sept. 9, 1776. In an accompanying packet of papers (labelled "of no consequence") is a letter from Dodge, Salem, Mar. 21, 1776, in which he speaks of having been taken and carried into Boston, vessel and cargo confiscated. Owned by G. Dodge and Co.

True Briton, Daniel Jacobs, master. July 23–Sept. 5, 1774, from Beverly; Oct. 31–Nov. 30, 1774, from St. Eustatius.

Peggy, Alexander Hardie, master. Falmouth to Havre de Grace, then to Charleston, evidently by way of Lisbon, Dec. 13, 1774–Mar. 25, 1775; Charleston to Cape Fear, June 4, 1775; Cape Fear to Bristol, July 21–Aug. 28, 1775; Bristol to Charleston, Nov. 25, 1775–Jan. 30, 1776, taken by H. M. S. Syren south of Charleston.

1 Name not given in the log, but is to be found in certificate in same packet, signed by committee of correspondence, inspection, and safety.
Bar, condemned in court of vice-admiralty, and sold at public auction on Cattre island. Then became transport ship with Adm. Parker's fleet, and by passport from Parker was allowed to return to Cape Fear, July 26, 1776, and thence to England, Aug. 5–Sept. 16, 1776. Now lies in River Thames, Jan. 23, 1777. Interesting and very full. Interrogatory shows that Hardie was a Scotchman trading between Cape Fear and England. Had no home, but lived on board ship. Had another ship, plying between America, England, and Holland in the Palatine trade. Hardie was a subject of Great Britain.

Reprisal, Elias Ford, commander, on a four months' cruise, Dec. 26, 1778–Mar. 19, 1779, as a privateer from Bristol, bearing a Bristol letter of marque.

990. 1776-1777.
Friendship, Cornelius Taylor, master. May 28, 1776–Apr. 15, 1777.

Lexington, Henry Johnson, commander, for a cruise. Sept. 18, 1777. (Mostly blank.)

991. 1776-1782.

Some records of the New York court of vice-admiralty: Spithre taken by the Fair American, Mar. 6, 1782; Salem, formerly the Clementina, taken by the Americans and renamed, retaken by the Resolution. Also ship's papers of the Swan.

Lorana, James Haden, master. Left Boston Feb. 7, 1781, with a cargo of lumber and fish for Port au Prince, took on molasses and sugar, Mar. 18–Apr. 13, Cape Cod, Boston, May 7, Boston to Port au Prince, July 15, Turks Island, Aug. 24, Cape Nicholas Mole, Aug. 27, Port au Prince, Sept. 28, Boston, Oct. 22, Boston to Virginia, Jan. 12, 1782, Point Comfort, Feb. 7, Fredericksburg, Feb. 25, took on tobacco from the shore, Apr. 24, began to warp down the river, Apr. 25, abreast of Col. Dangerfield's plantation, continued to receive tobacco, left for Holland May 13, taken about four leagues from the Texel, July 3, 1782. "Shifted the hands and was cared one bord the Privattear wear we found very swel neaseag more like brothers than foes in every respect not bean cold treated but quite the other way for evene the comon men recived the sailers of the brig with the Best of Siveley." On Apr. 1, 1782, is the entry: "This day being a Holliday amongst the Buckskins all hands obliged to follow the fashions of the Country" (Virginia).

Sukey of Poole, Christopher Whitewood, master. Dec. 15, 1776–Jan. 10, 1777. Newfoundland toward Barbadoes, taken by Rhode Island privateer. This book was used by James Robertson, commander of the Tann, voyage from Charleston to Bordeaux, taken June, 1777. Another log records a voyage from Philadelphia to Coruña and return, Sept. 23–Nov. 8, Nov. 10, 1776–Feb. 6, 1777, Philadelphia to Charleston, Mar. 27, 1777, left Charleston, May 2, log ends, June 9. (Mutilated.)
INTERCEPTED LETTERS.

1066. 1756. Letters from Maryland and Virginia.
   Samuel Howard to “Dear Brother and Sister” (addressed “Mr.
   Timothy Brent, London”). Oct. 16.
   Job Roughton to John Marshall, Schoolmaster, Northhants. Patapsico ferry, Sept. 6.
   William Hale, of Elkridge, to Mrs. Mary Giles, London, regarding a supply of hats from London.
   Order from the rector, governor, trustees, and visitors of the free school in the city of Annapolis regarding the legacy of Benedict Copy of the Pennsylvania Gazette, Aug. 12, 1756, containing a plan of education for the college and academy of Philadelphia. The paper is enclosed in a letter from David Bissett, Bush River, Baltimore Co., Oct. 25, 1756, to his brother, Dr. Charles Bissett, Yorks.
   “I have seen but one pretty girl since I have been in the country.
   This morning I went a fox hunting with some gentlemen where we had excellent sport, for after running him four hours we killed him. I thought the country a very odd place at first to see so many negroes about, for if a man keeps his coach, the coachman, postilion, and footman are all blacks. They all drive with six horses, which are very good ones for their size, for there is none exceeds fourteen hands and a half high.” Letters were to be directed to Maj. John Snelson’s in Hanover Co., Virginia. In another letter, November, Stevens speaks of “my past follies”.
   Maryland, Oct. 23. “What I wrote you last of Oswego being taken proved too true which was a sad blow for these provinces as it lays them open to the outrages of their enemies to pour in upon them. In short they seem to be always beforehand with us and execute their schemes before we imagine them to be consulted.”
   Robert Wilkinson, about Indian fights and scalping. Partapscio River, Bear Creek, Sept. 18.
   Daniel Parke Custis to Messrs. Tufton, druggists in the Minories, for “Twig bark for my own taking” and other drugs.
   Letter regarding the estate of Ann Mills. Hanover Co., Va., Sept. 30.
   John Lockey to his father, Berkshire. Forks of the Gunpowder, Oct. 11.
   John Kello. Hampton, Va., Oct. 8, 1755. “Dancing is the chief diversion here and hunting and racing.”
   Elizabeth Sprigs to her father. Sept. 22. She was evidently a servant, “toiling Day and Night, and then tied up and whipped to that degree you would not treat an animal, scarce anything but Indian corn and salt to eat and that even begrudged. Many negroes are better used. Almost naked, no shoes nor stockings to wear, and the comfort after slaving dureing master’s pleasure what rest we can get is to rap ourselves up in a blanket and ly upon the ground.”
James Moore to his cousin, Mrs. Margaret Palman regarding public affairs "at present in a very melancholly and deplorable situation". Sept. 19. Another letter, Oct. 4.

Thomas Lloyd, an indented servant, to Edmond Hector, surgeon, Birmingham, with an account of his service against the Indians. Augusta Court House, Frontier of Virginia, Oct. 10. Speaks of his "former follies" and wants to be manumitted.

William Randal. Baltimore, Sept. 23. "This is a very bad country for servants to live in but very good for free people which bless God I am of that number."

Stephen West to Dr. William Martin, London. Upper Marlbro, Petux River, Oct. 25. For drugs, with a list.

An account of Capt. Charles Seabrook's estate, "as it stands with Thomas Reynold's executor".

Thomas Saunders, a joiner, to his mother, London. Bush River, Oct. 9. "I bought an Irish Convict servant named Owen Desmond from Cork just as I was married he soon after Rob'd me of the chief of my cloaths and also my wives and run away and I never heard of him since his first cost was twenty pounds."

Alexander McBean, recruiting officer. Annapolis, Oct. 30. "I am with Governor Sharp to whom I am singularly obliged and takes every step in his power to forward the good of the service, tho his patience is greatly try'd by the Damn'd assembly men that will hardly do anything for their own or the publick's safety with good will, they mind nothing but contention and complaining of taxes and grievances of that kind when their all is almost at stake." McBean was lieutenant of the fourth battalion of the Royal American Regiment of Foot at Philadelphia, and at this time was on recruiting service in Annapolis.

John Smith to Hon. Thomas Bladen, Albemarle St., London, wishing a recommendation to the governor for the post of sheriff of Cecil County. Oct. 2.

Nicholas Rogers to John Woodhouse, Essex St., London. Baltimore Town, Oct. 16. "I intend to send you my eldest son over which I have named after his uncle James Lloyd in about 7 or 8 years which I intend to have edicated for a lawyer." This eldest son was then "at the latting school and about 8 years old."

Richard Tuggey to his mother, Tooting, Surrey. Tuggey was footman to the Hon. Colwatt Tasker.

Daniel Sturgis, a servant or apprentice just out of his time (two letters). Virginia, June 11, Nov. 4. "I am storekeeper for Mr. Humphry Bell under his factor. Stores here are much like shops in London, only with this difference, the shops sell but one kind or species of wares and stores all kinds. These commodities we sell to planters and receive in return tobacco, a weed of very little service to mankind as to its use yet as it is the promoter of a great trade is of infinite advantage to Great Britain. The people [here are] neither so industrious no so religious as the English, they are fond of pageantry and grandure."

Alexander Warfield to Capt. Jehosaphat Rawlings. Severn River, Maryland, Oct. 16.
Graham Frank to the Bishop of London, giving an account of the church in Virginia and urging the appointment of a suffragan bishop there. Virginia, Nov. 11. In this bundle are a number of important letters from this correspondent. "'Tis customary with the gentlemen here to send to Scotland for tutors to their children, for the sake of cheapness"; "scarce as [ministers] are in some of the colonies I believe they had better continue so than religion should be disgraced by [immoral] men".

In this bundle is a packet of letters from the firm of George and John Murdoch, tobacco merchants trading with Virginia. The firm was winding up its business and the letters were received by Capt. George Yuille of the snow Pelham, plying between Glasgow and Virginia. As a whole the packet consists of such letters as had accumulated in Yuille's hands between 1750 and 1756, and were received by him at various ports, London, Greenock, Alicante, Nansemond Town, Virginia, etc.

This bundle contains a mass of bills, letters, and other papers, some in French to Bordeaux and elsewhere, others scattering from Glasgow, Dublin, and America, the most important being the letters from the British fleet in Narragansett Bay.

J. Dunlop to his wife. Near Belfast, from the Ambuscade, Newport, Rhode Island, Feb. 18, 1777. "Our troops have been most surprisingly successful. We have taken so many islands, towns, and forts that we have not men to spare from the garrisoning of them to undertake any important blow before that more succour come out. Twenty thousand Russians are expected and five thousand troops from Cork. It is reported here that there is a hot press at London, a rupture with France expected, and that twenty new regiments of marines are a raising." The whole letter is interesting; it contains some information about Hopkins's fleet.

James Rea to his mother in Dundee. Rhode Island, Feb. 28, 1777. Refers to "a smart skirmish at Springfield in New Jersey, between a party of near 4000 rebels under the command of Gen. Sullivan and the 42d regiment, the famous and gallant highlanders under Sir William Erskine. The rebels were attempting to possess a hill which would have given them a considerable advantage. Sir William perceiving their design directed the highlanders to dispute the ground. They advanced with there usual ador and rune in upon the enemy notwithstanding the great disparity of there numbers and came instantly to close quarters with them and killed upon the spot two hundred and fifty."

J. Rowe to his agent, London. Feb. 24, 1777. "Last Sitterday the Ribbles came over from Providence in two Row Galleys with about 4 or 500 men but got a sufvear drubing and glad to get back again."

Joseph Ingleden to his father and mother in Yorkshire. Feb. 19, 1777. "We have got Very Troublesome Times of it all this winter. For the Rabbeles Obligeous to keep a very good Lookout for fear of them Sending fear ships Down upon us To Distroy the fleet for they have mad one attempt."
Thomas Hall to Thomas Hall, cooper, in Blackfryers Gate, Hull. Feb. 29, 1777. "It is generally thought that this next campaign will almost put an end to [the war] for the rebels by all accounts that we have here are a weekning every Day both by epidymical distempers, and by them retiring home as being tir'd of their service thereby beginning to feel in what a deluded condition they are in. We have had within this 3 weeks past several cortels com'd down to exchange prisoners, amongst which that came where some captains and mate of vessells which had been taken by their privateers and carried into Boston. They say it is mostly forc'd Spirit that reigns amongst them there and that country is likely for nothing but a famine amongst them, for had it not been for the few vessels they had taken and carried into that port they would have been ready to a starv'd for a mouthful of bread. They have several privateers laying their and cannot get any hands to man them, the noted commodore Hopkins fleet lays still blockt up at Providence by 2 or 3 of our men of war. It is confidently reported here that the congress have devolved all their power upon Mr. Washington and appointed him dictator in example of the Romans. The reason if the fact be true is very apparent, they find themselves in a slippery situation and are glad to throw their burthen upon the first simpleton of consequence that would take it."

Edmund Dixon to William Wakefield, at the Earl of Huntingdon's, St. James Place. Newport, Feb. 20, 1777. "Tell him he is a happy man to get out of Newport for it is a damd place to live in. I have nothing but my allowance same as a soldier for you cannot get a bit of fresh meat in the whole island."

Peter Regan to John Anthony Pucker, merchant, London. Newport, Feb. 21, 1777. "Our British troops as well as Hessians here are in the greatest of spirits and only wish to distinguish themselves against the rebells, but hope a strong reinforcement will be out by the month of May as the rebells are pushing and exerting themselves to the greatest advantage."

P. Seward to Lieut. Seward of the marines about affairs in America. Halifax, June 24, 1776.

Mark Gregory to Messrs. Gregory and Woolsey, congratulating them on their "victory over the Yankee rebells" and saying that he was glad to hear the marines took the part they did in the affair. Quebec, June 21, 1776.

J. Williamson to his brother and mother, Cumberland, England. Newport, Feb., 1777.

S. Thompson to his wife, London. Newport, Feb. 21, 1777. "My Love, I would give you some american news but we are aferd that the rebels should catch our letters as they hav a great many priveners on the coast. Our army are all well and in good sperets and all wis concors what they have atimted. Our grand army is one the Garseyes where they have sundry scrumages with the rebels. Last week we tocke abut 600 prisoners after kiling near 300 and every week more or les but not enay real feald batel we went for sumor. Last week a cartel come down from Providence with 30 captins of ships which had been tacken by the rebel pirets amongst whom was Capt. Ryle of the Polly and Capt. Clarke of the Hifffield an old lodger at Mr. Laughtons. Theos captins that came from Boston Saylem and marblehead says the reabls wold ben actually sterved for want of clothing had it nott ben for our ships which they have tacken with so much soldiers cloas and likewise great quantities of linens and wollin cloth. George Brown to father and mother, Alnwick. Newport, Feb. 20, 1777. From on board the Chatham, with an account of his experiences since arriving at Staten Island, July 4, 1776; a long and interesting letter showing the British soldier’s view of the situation.

S. Rowson to Miss Laverack, Yorkshire. From on board the Three Sisters, Rhode Island, Feb. 19, 1777. A lover’s letter, narrating experiences with the fleet (12 ships, 60 sail of transports, under Adm. Peter Parker, arriving Dec. 9, 1776, with 5000 English and Hessian troops on board under the command of Gen. Clinton). There are two other letters from the same, one, Feb. 24, 1777, to Capt. John Harnies, which is long and detailed; the other, Feb. 19, to his sister in Lincolnshire.

Timothy Leary to his wife. From on board the Roman Emperor, Feb. 24, 1777.

Thomas Plumb, soldier of the 22d Regiment, Capt. McDonald’s company, to his brother in Cornwall. Newport, Feb. 22, 1777. “I am resolved to relate our present state and situation in this country at the present time. Our duty is very hard upon the accounts as we receive from the rebels daily such as we are not in sight of as we are day and night within musket shot of each other and they are as numerous as motes in the sea. But we still keep them in constant employ but the cowardly rascals will not stand their ground but watching an opportunity of lying in ambush behind some trees which is the cause of us losing so many men, but thank God where we lose ten they lose 100. But as we routed them from so many places so that they are in the greatest consternation possibly they may give us a field day for it early this spring. I do no doubt but they will as they are almost surrounded by our troops and they must fight or die. But had they the heart as we Britons have we should stand no chance with them.” There is another letter from Plumb in 1180, Feb. 22, 1777.

Thomas Roberts to his wife, London. Rhode Island, Feb. 23, 1777. Also letters from J. Williamson and Jo. Reilly, Feb. 18, 21, 1777. Three prisoners “drummed and fified from Cape Ann to Ipswich Gaol and there confined for six weeks without liberty of fire or candle or straw to lay on”. These men, with 108 others, were exchanged, Feb. 18, 1777.

1085. 1777-1781.

John Williams to his sons, Nantes. Boston, 1777. "General Burgoyne and his army are all kept at Cambridge and I was at Worcester when they all came through extending some miles garded by our soldiers, a grand sight indeed to see such numbers of our enemies unarmed and in our power who a few days before threatened Death and Destruction to all that would not submit to their master’s Tiranal Comand”, and more to the same effect.

An “Account of the Army under General Burgoyne which surrendered to General Gates at Saratoga, Oct. 16, 1777”.

Letter from Barnabas Deane regarding bills amounting to $2492, drawn by Congress on the commissioners in France and Spain. Dec. 22, 1780.

Thomas Greenough to Knox and Mercer, London. Boston, Oct. 28, 1777. “I heartily wish peace was settled with Great Britain and these states on honorable terms.”

Mary Bunker, begging her son to come home from London. Nantucket, Jan. 7, 1778.

2. Letters from Bordeaux and elsewhere in France to various correspondents in America. Some of these letters are from representatives of American business houses, others are from French firms, and still others from French officials. The letters themselves are chiefly of a business character.

A dozen letters from Robert Chamberlayne to members of his family and others in Virginia. 1781.

A package of letters from John Frazer, from which we learn more about Chamberlayne in Bordeaux. Feb., 1781. In the same packet are letters from J. Mayo to friends in Richmond. Paris, 1780.

Thomas Ridout to John Ridout of Annapolis. Bordeaux, Jan. 27, 1781.

3. Letters to French soldiers and officers in America, from fathers, uncles, wives, children, etc., unopened until examined for the purpose of this work. Nearly all of these letters are personal, rarely touching on public concerns. Occasionally comments are met with of a more general character, such as “M. Burgoyne me paroit avoir eu beaucoup plus d’adresse en Angleterre pour sauver sa tête, que de prudence en Amérique pour conduire son arme”, dated Feb. 23, 1781, unsigned. Among these letters is a short note to Luzerne at Philadelphia regarding subscriptions to a French newspaper.

1180. 1781-1790.

Several packets of miscellaneous letters, some of which, in French and Dutch, do not relate to America. One collection contains letters from soldiers and sailors belonging to the squadron lying in Narragansett Bay and thus supplements the series in 1080. The letters are all informing, though at times the writers make curious blunders. The latter are generally in humble positions, as, for example, the servant of an officer in the British light infantry, Newport, who gives an account of his experiences with the "Dam'd Yankees". Another correspondent says, "As this goes by a merchantman it may miscarry. I write by five different vessels to my friends, so that if any one letter gets safe I have begged that they would be pleased to let the rest of my friends know."

In this bundle are a great many letters to importing merchants in Philadelphia, Baltimore, Annapolis, and elsewhere, and from the addresses given a directory of such merchants could be compiled. The following lists are an attempt at such a directory.

Annapolis. Wallace, Johnson, and Muir, Thomas Rutland, William Weems, John and Samuel Davidson, Capt. Samuel Maynard (Herring Bay, Anne Arundel Co.), Thomas How Ridgate (Pottobacco), Richard B. Lloyd, John Johnson, Dr. John Hindman (Telbot Co.), William Stevenson (Chester, Kent Co.), Joseph Williams, John Weems (Calvert Co.), Samuel Lane (same place).

Virginia. William Thomson (Colchester), Robert McCrea (Alexandria), James and John Hendriks (same place), James Buchanan (Richmond), Watson and Tandy (Alexandria), Robert Beverly Chew (Frederickburg).

North Carolina. Maj. Robert Smith (Mecklenburg Co.), Josiah Collins (Edenton), Webb Bryer and Co. (Edenton), Dr. Nathan Alexander (Mecklenburg Co.), Daniel Dunscomb, jr. (Chatham).

Boston. John R. Livingston and Co.

In the bundle is a letter to the French consul, Philadelphia, and another from Tench Coxe to Maj. David S. Franks, Philadelphia, Apr. 8, 1782.
PROCEEDINGS IN VICE-ADMIRALTY AND OTHER COURTS.

This volume contains the complete record of a court of vice-admiralty held in Jamaica for the trial of four cases of prize, 1747. As an example of procedure in a vice-admiralty court it is unusually clear and complete.

Procedure in courts held for the trial of pirates under 11 and 12 William III., "for the more effectual suppression of piracy".

Virginia, Aug. 14, 1729. For the trial of Edmund Williams and others for piracy at Williamsburg, before William Gooch and others, the judges, by virtue of a commission under the seal of the High Court of Admiralty, bearing date Dec. 13, 1728. The testimony is full of important details for the student of piracy in the colonies.

South Carolina, July, 1734. Trial before the governor of Joseph Lostia, suspected of piracy.

Rhode Island, Sept. 9, 1725. Id. at Newport before Gov. Cranston and others of Matthew Perry et al. for piracy.

Pennsylvania, Oct. 15, 1731. Id. at Philadelphia of John Mackferson and others. Account of the proceedings partly in manuscript and partly in print from the American Weekly Mercury.

New York, July 6, 1724. Id. at New York before Gov. Burnet and others of Antonio Nuñez et al.

South Carolina, June 12, 1733. Id. before Gov. Johnson of Edward Little.

Virginia, Aug. 15, 1728. Id. before the president of the council of John Vidal et al.

Of similar character though listed under a different heading are the following prize cases:

1821. Monitions or summonses, 1781; letters of marque bonds, 1782-1783; bills of exchange, 1775-1777; appraisements, 1777-1783; libel, James Ferguson c. the schooner York, filed, Oct. 8, 1777, and other papers in the case; libel, advocate general c. the schooner La Zemire (from French West Indies to Nantucket), Aug. 21, 1778; sundry intercepted private letters, written in French and Spanish, notes, receipts, bills, permits, invoices, some of early dates, but chiefly of 1773 and following years; libel, advocate general c. the brigantine Young Benjamin, 1778, with ship's papers; additional libels in packets, labelled alphabetically by ships' names; packet of interrogatories, without answers and undated; accounts of sales by order of the New York court of vice-admiralty, 1778-1782 (large packet); printed instructions from Congress regarding letters of marque, Apr. 7, 1781; printed proclamation in French, endorsed, "Mr. Britman will be pleased to deliver this to his excellency, Patrick Henry, Esq."

1823. Three paper-covered books, labelled "List of Causes and Fees and by whom paid", 1777-1778; packet labelled "Assignment Books unbound, recd from N. Y. November 29, 1784", containing nine books of admiralty court records, 1777-July 10, 1783. From another source, we learn that Robert Bayard, judge of the vice-admiralty court, New York, delivered to the deputy register of the High Court an assignment book on the date named. This "book" must be the packet here referred to.

1824. Register of the court of vice-admiralty, New York. Sept. 17, 1777-Oct. 9, 1778, and 1778-1780. Two bound volumes containing letters of agency or attorney (complete list of the names of captains and men belonging to British ships making captures), authorizing certain lawyers to recover shares of prize money. The volumes are well filled, some of the letters being dated earlier than 1777.

1825. Packets of about 300 allegations on stamped paper. Some are printed blanks filled in, others are written out in full, 1781-1782.

Large numbers of the papers received from New York will be found in certain bundles of the series Adm. Court, Prize Papers, 260-493, listed on pp. 334-340. In Adm. Court, Miscellanea, 880, is a vellum-bound book containing a catalogue of the papers in the four bundles noted above. The arrangement of the papers has been changed and the catalogue is of value only as showing the nature of the papers. The most useful part of its contents is the alphabetical list of ships' names, regarding which the original papers may be found either in the series named above or among the Prize Papers. These New York admiralty court papers have got scattered and must be searched for either in the bundles here described, in certain specified bundles among the Prize Papers, or among other bundles of the latter collection not specially designated as containing them.

Many records of proceedings in vice-admiralty courts in the colonies may be found among the papers in Adm. 1, and entries relating to vice-admiralty matters may be found in the volumes of Adm. 2. Special proceedings are contained in C. O. 37: 11, 12, K. 25-30 (formerly B. T. Bermuda, 10, 11); C. O. 5: 714, C. 25, 32 (formerly B. T. Maryland, 3); C. O. 37: 716, H. 15 (formerly B. T. Maryland, 5); C. O. 5: 1260, E. 48 (formerly B. T. Proprieties, 5), etc.

Bundles 1822 and 1826 contain papers relating to the seizure of fourteen vessels from the French West Indies, which were tried before a special court of commissioners appointed by the Privy Council, Oct. 13, 1779. The vessels were condemned and their cargoes sold at the islands of Jersey and Guernsey, to which the captors belonged. In addition to accounts of disbursements, charges of sales, vouchers of the commissioners, and reports by the register of the High Court, will be found detailed lists of the cargoes of the vessels—sugar, snuff, tobacco, coffee, indigo, cotton, cocoa, salt, licorice, oil, rice, etc.

In Adm. Court, Miscellanea, 805, 13 k/4, are four orders in Council and other papers relating to these French prizes, from which we learn that the vessels were taken to Jersey and Guernsey by privateers armed but not duly commissioned, and were ordered to be sold by order of the High Court under the rule that the ships and goods of enemies casually met at sea and seized by any vessel not commissioned were droits of admiralty. We learn further that the governors of the islands, claiming to share in the proceeds, obtained process from their respective royal courts overriding the order of the High Court for the sale of the property. They subsequently appeared before the High Court, but their claim was rejected. They then appealed, but without success, and their application to be relieved of the costs was refused. The proceeds of the property were condemned as droits of the crown. In the same bundle are vouchers, receipts, and settlement accounts, and the reports of the commissioners to the Privy Council on each of the fourteen ships.

Among the Prize Papers are documents relating to other vessels captured and taken to Guernsey. The whole matter has some interest for colonial trade, as the Channel Islands were a resort for those engaged in colonial smuggling.

PRIZE PAPERS.

This large collection of 493 bundles contains a great mass of papers relating to the trial and condemnation of ships captured in time of war, arranged alphabetically, by the first letter of the ship's name. To use the bundles, therefore, requires that the name of the ship be known. The nature of the contents can be gathered from the descriptions given in the lists below. Among the most valuable of these papers are the intercepted or captured letters which may be found in considerable numbers in the various groups of bundles.

It is doubtful if much material relating to colonial history is to be found in the first 259 bundles; consequently no attempt has been made to examine them, and the descriptions given are taken from the manuscript list of the papers of the High Court of Admiralty. The bundles 260-493, on the other hand, are of great value for colonial history, and a brief statement of their contents is here given. The groups are arranged by wars and the letters within parentheses in the descriptions of the first 259 bundles indicate the alphabetical order of ships' names running through each individual bundle.

92. Miscellaneous ships’ papers found loose; also some depositions relating to prize causes. 1709-1712.
93. Commission returned from Holland with an examination about the recapture of two “East India Dutchmen”; also another commission and file of examinations, 1710, 1711.

94-160. 1739. End of War with Spain, etc.
94-158. Collection of prize papers. 94-97 (A), 98-99 (B), 100-103 (C), 104-106 (D), 107-110 (E), 111-112 (F), 113-114 (G), 115-117 (H), 118-125 (I), 126 (K), 127 (L), 128-133 (M), 134-139 (N), 140-141 (O), 142-147 (P), 147 (Q), 148-150 (R), 151-153 (S), 154-155 (T), 156 (U, V), 157-158 (V), 159 (W, Y, Z).
160. Various papers found loose.

These volumes are arranged alphabetically by the first letter of the ship’s name. In the case of ships’ names beginning with “St.” the papers are arranged under the name, as under “John” in the case of “St. John”.
161-259. 1756-1763. Seven Years’ War.

61-256. Prize papers. 161-168 (A), 169-172 (B), 173-179 (C), 180-185 (D), 186-190 (E), 191-194 (F), 195-197 (G), 198-201 (H), 202 (I), 203-210 (J), 211 (K), 212-214 (L), 215-224 (M), 225-228 (N), 229 (O), 230-237 (P), 238 (Q), 239-241 (R), 242-246 (S), 247-249 (T), 250 (U), 251-254 (V), 255 (W), 256 (Y, Z).

257-258. Various Letters and Papers probably found on board ships taken as prize.

259. A parcel endorsed “Cranbrook Comms retained by Tyndall with examons in 64 ships and papers annexed”.

This series of 234 bundles is especially important for colonial history. Every vessel captured had on board not only the customary ships’ papers but also packages of letters which various correspondents had entrusted to the captains for delivery. Under the Prohibitory Act all papers and writings found on board any ships belonging to the rebels taken as a prize were to be delivered into the registry of the High Court of Admiralty. A brief examination of such intercepted letters gives us the following general table of contents:

Acts of assembly sequestrating British property, conditions existing in prize courts in America, reasons of the French king in joining America, provisioning of Bermuda by the Americans, bounties for American seamen, commissions to American officers, various orders of Congress, a large number of American letters of marque, instructions to American privateers from Congress, ships’ papers, logs, and articles, depositions and examinations, prize regulations, passes, signals, lighthouse receipts, some of which are in French and Swedish, licenses to trade, articles between the United States and her seamen, names and lists of crews, lists of prisoners, proclamations, papers regarding Spanish affairs in Louisiana, copies of various treaties, many American newspapers, and a very large number of letters from and to America, from and to England, France, and the West Indies, and occasionally from one American port to another. Among these letters, of which there are hundreds, many of which are extremely valuable, may be found a number written to or by the following persons: André, D’Estaing, Silas Deane, Franklin, Paul Jones, Benedict Arnold, Lafayette, Arthur Lee, Washington, Rochambeau, Henry Laurens, Henry Lee, Jonathan Trumbull, De Kalb, Robert Morris, John Adams, and others. One package of papers relates to the Loyalists and others contain letters from merchants, planters, and others engaged in trade, often dealing with merely routine business, but sometimes giving interesting accounts of affairs in America and the progress of the war.

The entire collection, though a difficult one to handle, ought to be listed and indexed. The rapid survey here given, for which in part I am indebted to Mr. Marsden, does not pretend to include all the bundles containing papers relating to colonial affairs, nor does it attempt, except in one instance (B) by way of illustration, to note all such papers in the bundles listed. Generally speaking these papers fall into three groups: vice-admiralty court papers; ships’ papers of all kinds, articles, complements, accounts, and instructions; and letters entrusted by various correspondents to the captains for carriage. The documents from the New York court of vice-admiralty are as a rule contained in the bundles indicated, but there are exceptions to this statement, as New York admiralty court papers are to be found in other bundles. Such papers concern either American vessels or French vessels captured in American waters.

A.

Active. American letter of marque.
D'Argenté. Letter from captain of the 1st Georgia Regiment of Foot in the Continental army to the governor and commandant-in-chief in and over North Carolina.
St. Anne. Letter to Adams, Deane, and Co., Richmond.

B.

277. Black Prince, taken off Barnegat and carried to New York, 1778; two copies of the log and many papers. This vessel was an American privateer captured while cruising against “the enimeis off the United Stades off America”.
Buckskin, taken in Chesapeake Bay and carried to New York, 1778; log.
Brig Elliot, whaler, started from Sandy Hook, Oct., 1775, captured Aug., 1777.
280. Brunswick, from Newburyport, owned in Charleston, seized and taken to Guernsey, 1778; letters, interrogatories.
Blair, from Bedford to Charleston and thence to Bordeaux, seized in the Bay of Biscay, July 7, 1777; letters, interrogatories.
Blessing, taken by the American privateer Black Prince off Land’s End, June 19, 1779, recaptured with crew and taken to Guernsey.
Billy and Mary (otherwise the Bell and Mary), bound for Bordeaux, taken off the capes of Virginia, Mar., 1777, and carried first to New York and then to the River Thames; ships’ papers.
Betsey, from Boston to Port au Prince with fish, and thence to Bilboa with sugar and cocoa, 1781; letter of marque from Congress, June 16, 1781, letters from Boston merchants to correspondents in Nantes, register countersigned by Gov. John Hancock, articles of agreement and cargo accounts, bundle of French papers accumulated in the West Indies.
Betsey of Dunkirk, interrogatory taken at place to which vessel was brought, first witness William Ripner, born in Hartford, Conn., lived in Martinique, and afterward at Dunkirk.
Betsey, from Boston for Guadeloupe, but taken near Bermuda, Nov., 1782; French letters from Basseterre, Pointpetre, Guadeloupe.
Prize Papers

282. Bolton, from Philadelphia to Curaçao, taken off Cape Henlopen, May, 1777, carried to New York and thence to River Thames; papers.
Banter, American privateer, taken in the straits of Belle Isle, between Newfoundland and Labrador, July, 1782; interrogatories.
Brothers, formerly the Sally, taken by the Buckskin, Dec. 5, 1776, retaken Aug. 9, 1777, by the General Howe; the owners, Alexander and Hugh Telfair, Scotsmen of Halifax, N. C., claimed that they were escaping Loyalists and that the ship could not be condemned as prize; papers relating to this claim.

283. Bien Aimée, papers regarding ship ashore at Portland.

284. Badin, French ship, sailing under French colors, taken by the Amazon near Cape Charles, Aug. 26, 1778.
Boreas, from Philadelphia to North Carolina, captured by the transport Richmond, Nov. 12, 1779.
Beggar's Benison, from the West Indies to North Carolina or Virginia, taken by a Dominican privateer, July 2, 1778.
Black Joke, taken by the Galatea, May 15, 1778.
Baltimore, taken off the capes of Virginia by the Hammond, Sept. 25, 1778, while going from Baltimore to Martinique and St. Lucia; instructions to the captain from Baltimore merchants, John McLane, McLane and Sterrett, John Crockett.
Bedford, captured by the Loyal Subject, Mar. 9, 1778.
Buckskin, bound for Baltimore from Bordeaux, with cargo worth 700,000 livres, uninsured because (as said T. Ridout, Adm. Court, Miscellanea, 1085) "No one here will insure an American vessel"; ships' papers and instructions, a few letters valuable for trade with Bordeaux during the war. At the same time the Peggy, Capt. Bradford, was captured.
Boston, formerly the Glasgow, taken by the Americans while on a voyage from Georgia to New York, June 29, 1779, renamed the Boston, and recaptured by the Virginia, Sept. or Oct., 1779.
Burling, taken in Chesapeake Bay by the Otter, the Fincastle, and the Lord North, May 10, 1779, crew ran her on shore at Gwyn's Island.
Betsey, French ship sailing under American colors, taken near Cape Henry, May 23, 1782, by the Sukey. Two packets: one containing letters from Baltimore and Alexandria to Nantes, Cadiz, Mar- sells, Bordeaux, and Naples (in French and Spanish); from Josiah Watson, Alexandria, regarding sale of Lord Tankerville's estate in Virginia, 1780; from Hare and Harrison, Alexandria, 1780; from Robert H. Harrison, 1780, speaking of the death of his father, Sept. 11, by falling from the roof of his house, and commenting on the war, a valuable letter, referring to André and Arnold's treason. The second packet contains many business letters, of but little importance. In all these bundles the packets of papers and letters are generally separated from the ship's log, so that only an examination will show to which ship the papers belong.

287. Baron D'Oxelle, letters.
C.

297. Constant Friend, papers regarding a South Carolina regiment.
   1777:
   Charming Betsey, id.

299. Charity, letters to and from Arnold.
   Charles, letters to Baltimore and Annapolis.

301. Centurion, letters from Philadelphia to Curaçao, St. Eustatius, and elsewhere.

D.

304. Dragon, many American letters and papers.

309. Dolphin, French correspondence, one letter from Lafayette.

   Defiance, a few American letters. 1778.

313. Dove, id.
   Dolphin, id.

314. Delight, id.
   Despatch, id.

PRIZE APPEAL RECORDS.

The Court of Appeals for Prizes, though at first but the High Court sitting for prize appeal business, became a separate court toward the end of the seventeenth century, under commissioners of appeal in prize cases. It heard all appeals from the vice-admiralty courts in England and America.

The series of volumes and bundles here described are supplemental to the prize papers, in that they record the proceedings on appeal in many of the cases of condemnation there contained. These records consist of papers, assignment books, appeal case books, minute books, acts, sentences, and miscellaneous. In the appeal papers the bundles are arranged according to wars, and within the bundles and groups of bundles the papers are arranged alphabetically according to the names of the ships. It is necessary, therefore, to know the name of the ship before the bundles can be used.

APPEAL PAPERS.

1-9. 1689-1699. War with France.
1 (A, B), 2 (C), 3 (C), 4 (G, H), 5 (I, K, L), 6 (M), 7 (N, O, P, Q, R), 8 (S, T, V), 9 (W, Y).

ASSIGNATION BOOKS.

Assignments or preliminary proceedings in appeal causes, generally in English vice-admiralty courts. The documents are arranged chronologically.

These volumes contain entries of assignments in appeal causes from vice-admiralty courts in Halifax, New York, East Florida, Bermuda, Jamaica, St. Christopher, and from a few vice-admiralty courts in England. The volumes contain a number of records of sentences in cases of appeal to the Privy Council, the regular series of which does not begin till 1834, and indexes of the names of ships. These assignments were held and the necessary bonds were taken out before the surrogate of the lords commissioners of appeals in prize cases, sometimes in the dining-room adjoining the common hall of Doctors’ Commons, and sometimes in the surrogate’s apartments there.

APPEAL CASE BOOKS.

1-6. 1750-1760. Prize.
7-16. 1770-1800. Id.
Large thick volumes of printed cases, of which the following is an example:
“Before the Right Noble and Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of Appeals in Prize Cases; an Appeal from the Vice-Admiralty Court of the Island of Jamaica. The ‘Sea Flower’, Edmund Snow, Master. Saturenine B. Garrick, Shkipper of the said Ship and Claimant thereof as the Property of Thomas Brown of Sandwich, Massachusetts, Appellant; against Boaz Bryan, Commander of the Private Ship of War, the ‘King Grey’, the Captor of said ship and Cargo, Respondent.” 1798. 30 pp.

Each printed document includes both the appellant’s case and the respondent’s case and usually an appendix. The ship’s name is prominently placed in the heading of each case.

1 For St. Eustatius see S., bundles 149-153.
1. Cases to be heard. 1758-1761. Vol. 6, a large and broad manuscript book, but partly filled, is an index to 1, entering 101 cases, with the "Points" argued (on the lefthand page) and the names of ship and master, the destination, lading, date of sentence, names of proctors, and whether condemned or restored (on the righthand page). The ships concerned are chiefly Spanish and Dutch, many of which were trading to and from the West Indies.

3. Duplicate of the latter half of 1, with a manuscript index, and three printed pamphlets bound in.

4. Cases to be heard. 1760, 1761, 1763.

5. Id. 1760, 1761, 1763-1765.

7-15. Id. 1770-1800. In many cases in these volumes the sentence is written in ink at the end of the statement either of the appellant or of the respondent.

16. Manuscript index to 7-15, in the form of an alphabetical list of ships' names, with volume and page.

MINUTE BOOKS.

1-8. 1776-1783. Court Minute Books.

Volumes of considerable interest and value, containing the rough notes of the proceedings of the court, with the sentence. At the top, or elsewhere on the page, are entered in a fair clerkly hand the name of the ship and an epitome of the facts in the case. The ships concerned are Dutch, French, and American.

1. 1776-1779. Only one case is entered for 1776, and two for 1777. The remainder are for the period Dec., 1778–July, 1779.

Each volume contains an alphabetical index to ships. Some of the cases are for subtraction of wages and are marked "Instance Court".

ACTS.

These volumes contain the original proceedings in prize appeal cases, as well as various drafts, 1747-1763, and act books, 1689-1713.

SENTENCES.

1-7. 1672-1772. Sentences.

8. 1689-1699. Index of Sentences.
MISCELLANEA.

8. 1780-1784. Minutes.
42. 1690-1746. Original Commissions.

Among the "Accruing Records" are two series of volumes, Assignation Books and Repertory Books, of the Court of Delegates, which had appellate jurisdiction not only in ecclesiastical court cases but in Instance Court cases also. They are of very little value for our purpose, and a search has disclosed no cases of appeal from the Instance Court. In Adm. Court, Accruing Records, Repertory Books, 1, 1619-1739, is this entry: "Laurentius Washington Rector de Stutesbury ads Stotesbury in com Northon diocese Petriburgén Cant. prox. con[tr]a Johannem Richardson introduct. 27 Augusto 1619". These Repertory Books contain entries of the appointment of the judices delegati, or special commissioners, by the Lord Chancellor.

LETTERS OF MARQUE.

DECLARATIONS.

1-12. 1689-1761. Against France.
13-16. 1707-1718. Against France and Other Enemies.
29-32. 1718-1744. Against Spain.
33-44. 1778-1783. Against France.
45-52. 1779-1783. Against Spain.
53-59. 1780-1783. Against Holland.
60-70. 1777-1782. Against America.

These volumes contain the letters of marque issued to those whose bails are noted in the volumes of "Bonds" listed below. The letters in vols. 60-70 correspond to those in vol. 56, as far as they chronologically coincide. Vols. 60-70 contain also copies of "Instructions to Commanders" issued Mar. 27, 1777, and recite in the first case the commission issued to each commander. Variations in the commissions are noted. These volumes contain also a very complete record of English privateering from 1689 to 1783, and particularly a record of privateering during the war of the American Revolution.

BONDS.

1-7. 1549-1630. Files of Obligations.
8. 1630. Files of Warrants.

26-31. 1739-1744. Warrants and Bails, War with Spain and France.
32-37. 1744-1748. Warrants and Bails, War with Spain and France.
38-52. 1756-1762. French Bails.
53-55. 1762. French and Spanish Bails.

This bundle contains two packages of papers labelled "American Rebellion, Bails, April 1-13, 1777", and "American Bails, April 14-30, 1777". In the first package are 54 letters, in the second 40 arranged chronologically.

204. 1812-1813. American Bonds.

Of the same character as the papers in 56, but relating to the War of 1812. The papers are in two packages chronologically arranged and are rather elaborately drawn. Among the expired commissions, whose reports and papers are to be found in the Treasury Papers, is one of American ships and cargoes condemned as prize, 1812-1818.

OYER AND TERMINER.

The Court of Oyer and Terminer and Gaol Delivery of the Admiralty of England constituted the criminal branch of the Instance Court, and its sessions were held in Justice Hall in the Old Bailey, generally known as the Sessions House, north of Ludgate Hill, just outside the City wall. The Sessions House was on the second floor, Surgeons Hall being below. The court was presided over by commissioners from Doctors’ Commons, but the proceedings were according to the rules of the common law. The trials were for piracy or crime committed on the high seas. For an account of the proceedings in this court, reference may be made to a printed pamphlet (London, 1773) containing an account of a session held, Nov. 10, 1773, for the trial of the crew of the Sea Flower, who had resisted customs officials near the island of Brehar.

5-27. 1604-1797. Indictments.
28. 1537-1782. Calendar of Indictments.
39-54. 1601-1768. Examination of Pirates.

Such examinations were customarily held before one of the commissioners in his chambers in Doctors’ Commons, in the presence of the register or his deputy, who was also a notary public.

55. 1759-1824. Minutes of Proceedings.

These bundles and volumes are of value for the trials of many pirates familiar to students of colonial history. Bundle 15 (12 William III., 1700-1 Anne, 1702) contains papers relating to pirates of Virginia, Pennsylvania, New York, and New England; especially indictments and depositions, and other papers relating to Capt. Kidd. Among these papers is Kidd’s original letter or marque, and a deposition signed “C. Wolley”, dated Apr., 1701. Bundle 16 (1 Anne, 1702-11 Anne, 1712) contains similar material. Vol. 48, 1694-1710, is an entry book of examinations supplemental to the indictments.

¹ Probably Rev. Charles Wolley, author of A Two Years’ Journal in New York, a work published in 1701. Wolley was in New York, 1678-1680, and was known to be familiar with the conditions there. If this surmise be correct the spelling of the name is important in view of the dispute on that point.
etc., noted above, and contains depositions signed often with the mark of the deponent. The bundles and volumes for the reigns of William III. and Anne are of chief importance, though earlier and later collections contain scattered material of interest.

57-58 contain miscellaneous papers—warrants for the summons of juries, precepts of various sorts for the removal of prisoners, the directing of sheriffs to attend executions, and the like—that date from about 1760.

59 contains a number of pardons issued in Charles II.'s reign. They are elaborately illuminated with a portrait of the king and bear the great seal. Pardons were frequent in this court in the eighteenth century.

60-72 contain the original commissions of the court. 1660-1800.
SPECIAL COLLECTIONS.

The earliest donation of a private collection of manuscripts was that of the letters of Sir Thomas Roe presented to the Paper Office in 1772 by the Richardsons, one part of which, relating to Constantinople, had been published in 1740 by Samuel Richardson the novelist. The next gift was the Conway papers made by John Wilson Croker about 1856. Since that time a number of other collections have been received, though in general the Public Record Office will not accept such collections unless they are given without restrictions. In the case of the Chatham papers conditions were at first imposed, to the effect that permission to use them should be asked for in advance, but this restriction has now been removed. The Cornwallis papers were given to the Historical Manuscripts Commission to be deposited in the Public Record Office forever. All the other collections were given without reserve. See Scargill-Bird, Guide, 3d ed., pp. 403-405.

MANCHESTER PAPERS.

The Manchester papers were deposited in the Public Record Office by the Duke of Manchester in 1880 and have been calendared by the Historical Manuscripts Commission in the Eighth Report, app., pt. II., pp. 1-166. The calendar contains an elaborate introduction and an excellent index and presents the documents arranged chronologically under separate headings. The entire collection contains from three to four thousand documents, of which those bearing on colonial history belong to the period from 1605 to 1647. In the calendar they are entered under the title “Reigns of James I. and Charles I. (colonial)”, pp. 31-50. See also Miss Kingsbury’s introduction to the Records of the Virginia Company of London, I. 61-62.

CORNWALLIS PAPERS.

The Cornwallis papers were deposited by Lord Braybrooke in 1880. They are arranged in fifty-nine separate bundles and consist of nearly eight thousand separate documents. They include mainly “the writings (official and personal) that grew upon the hands of Charles, first Marquis Cornwallis during his successive periods of service in the American plantations and in the East Indian dependencies [of Great Britain]. They are valuable chiefly for their letters from Admiral Arbuthnot, Sir Henry Clinton, and Lord Rawdon, the American papers comprising many notable communications to Lord Cornwallis from subordinate actors on either side of the struggle.” “The numerous ‘paroles’ and documents touching prisoners and exchanges of prisoners during the American War of Independence are not unlikely to yield dates and other minute pieces of testimony for which domestic annalists and personal illustrators have hitherto been vainly seeking.”

The papers have been briefly calendared by the Historical Manuscripts Commission in the Eighth Report, app. I., pp. 287-296, and are described in Stevens’s Index. Only eight of the fifty-nine bundles contain material for American history. The following account is somewhat more elaborate than that given in the Report.

1. Dec. 26, 1741–1779. Miscellaneous papers, of which the earliest documents are five letters to Cornwallis from Charles James Fox, Townshend, the Duke, Hardwicke, and G. Cornwallis. The American documents begin July 12, 1778, and consist of letters to Cornwallis from various subordinates, with many tables, copies of letters, proclamations, and other official rules and regulations. They close with Dec. 25, 1779. In this bundle is a book of forty-eight pages entitled "Description de la rivière de Susquehanna, et du pays qui la borde depuis Harris's Ferry jusque l'embouchure".

2. Jan. 22, 1779–July 31, 1780. American papers, chiefly letters to Cornwallis from military, naval, and civil officers in America. Many letters from Sir Henry Clinton, with returns, tables, extracts of letters, reports, letters from commissioned officers in the South, Lord Rawdon, Maj. Ferguson, Col. Balfour, etc.

4. Nov. 2–Dec. 31, 1780. American papers similar to those above, consisting of letters to Cornwallis from his officers, from Sir Henry Clinton, Maj. Tarlton, Lord Rawdon, Col. Balfour, and others from southern camps. On f. 218 are J. Simpson's "Observations on Mr. Elliot's plan" (for restoring peace).

5. Jan. 8–Apr. 12, 1781. American papers, consisting of warrants, recommendations, queries, estimates of damages, petitions, and of letters from the officers named above. Among the papers are a few letters from Gov. Wright of Georgia and copies of letters from Cornwallis to Lord George Germain.

6. May–Dec. 5, 1781. American papers, similar to those above, bearing specially upon the Yorktown campaign.

7. Aug. 15, 1782–1785. American papers in part, relating to the winding up of Cornwallis's affairs in America. The greater part of the documents in this bundle and all the documents in bundles 8-57 relate to East India affairs.

58. 1781–1819. Packet of papers relating chiefly to the capitulation of York and Gloucester in Virginia and to steps taken to rendering due honor in 1806 to Cornwallis's memory.

Many of the documents in this collection are printed in Stevens, Campaign in Virginia (two vols., 1888), which concerns chiefly the controversy between Clinton and Cornwallis, and in The Correspondence of Charles, 1st Marquis Cornwallis, ed. Ross (three vols., 1859).

SHAFTESBURY PAPERS.

The Shaftesbury papers were deposited in 1871 by the Earl of Shaftesbury, and have been calendared in the Reports of the Deputy Keeper, 33, pp. 211–269; 34, p. 188; 39, pp. 567–568; 43, pp. 606–608. Additions to the original gift were made in 1872, 1873, 1877, and 1881. Only the papers relating to Carolina have been calendared in Col. State Papers, Col., and printed in extenso in the Collections of the South Carolina Historical Society, V. Only the portions of the collection calendared in the 33d and 34th Reports contain material of importance for American history. In addition to the South Carolina papers there are a number of others that deal with the West Indies and with trade in general.

RODNEY PAPERS.

This collection, which throws light, not only on naval and military affairs, but also on trade in North American waters, consists of the correspondence of Adm. George Brydges Rodney, 1719-1792. More than two hundred letters and other papers in this series have been printed in The Life and Correspondence of the Late Admiral Lord Rodney, by G. B. Mundy (two vols., 1830); while the letters treating of St. Eustatius were published by Rodney himself in his lifetime, and two copies of the volume are in bundle 19. The papers were presented to the Public Record Office by Harley Rodney, esq., in May, 1906.

The documents (except one map) are contained in nineteen volumes and bundles. The arrangement of the American material is as follows: 1-2, Order Books; 3, Journals; 4, Log Book and Journal; 5, 6, 8-10, Letter-Books; 11-14, Detached Letters and a few Papers; 15, Detached Miscellaneous Papers; 16-19, Miscellaneous Books and Detached Papers; Map.

Volume 5 contains letters to and from Rodney (Newfoundland, Halifax, Louisburg); volume 6, letters from the Admiralty to Rodney.

Containing letters to and from Rodney, mostly dating from the West Indies, and largely from and to naval and military officers, governors in the West Indies, and the Admiralty.

Containing letters to and from Rodney, mostly dating from New York and the West Indies, and containing, among other matters, many particulars relating to St. Eustatius.

Four letters from Rodney to George Jackson, secretary to the Admiralty, the originals of which are in the British Museum, Add. MSS. 9344; also copies of letters from Sir Samuel Hood to Jackson, with copies of Rodney letters enclosed, originals in Brit. Mus. Add. MSS. 9343; also copies of eleven Letters and a suppressed despatch from Rodney; a letter-book of Rodney letters, and a copy of a letter from Eliphat Fitch to Rodney, Kingston, Jamaica, May 4, 1782.

11. 1761-1780. Letters from the Admiralty.
   To Arbuthnot, 1780; Barrington, 1778-1779; Byron, 1778-1779; Gayton, 1774; Hood, 1781; Parker, 1779-1780; Rodney, 1761-1763, 1768, 1771-1774, 1779-1781; Walsingham, 1780.

   A collection of letters from various persons and boards to the Admiralty, the Navy Board, the commissioners for sick and wounded, etc.

13. 1749, 1750, 1755, 1762, 1763 to 1781, and undated. Letters to and from Rodney.
   Including:
   "Particulars of a conversation which passed between Gov. Franklin and Mr. Oswald relative to the Treaty of Peace with America."
   Dominica and St. Vincent papers.
   Papers relating to Pensacola and to the sailing of the Spanish Fleet, 1771.

   Relating almost entirely to the West Indies, and concerning official orders, military affairs, naval affairs, importation of bullion, naval stores, confiscations, claims, seizures, prisoners of war, intelligence, and the like. Letter from John Steel, Sept. 22, 1780, gives an account of an engagement between his brig and the Saratoga of Philadelphia; other letters deal with the English and Spanish in the Caribbean Sea, seizure of American privateers, observations regarding "my late trip to the Mississippi" (unsigned), and the conditions prevailing among the British and French West Indies.

15. 1758-1781. Miscellaneous Papers.
   Among others, the following:
   "An extract of the transactions at Louisburg, in the time of that siege", 1758, endorsed "Corrected by G. B. Rodney".
   Memorandum concerning the French Protestant colony at Cape Sable, Nova Scotia (proposed), July 12, 1767.
   "Plan of attack of New Orleans." 1771.
   "Plan to attack Mexico", including also an account of the territory near "Oupelousa, a Spanish post on the Western Coast of the Mississippi", etc. 1771.
   Paper entitled "The Object of the War of 1779."
   An account of the stores at New York, 1780.
   Re Benjamin Hallowell. 1780.
   "A List of Prizes taken by the King’s Ships and libelled in the court of vice-admiralty", New York, from 13 Sept., 1780.
   Copy of "Memorial concerning the State Papers found amongst those of Mr. Laurens . . . presented to the States General (Nov. 10, 1780) by Sir Joseph Yorke.”
   Remarks "whilst upon the West Florida station [1780?]".
Numerous papers, mostly relating to the West Indies and mostly dating from 1780, or undated, relating to the following matters: orders to captains; intelligence concerning French and Spanish fleets; lists of ships, including prizes, transports, store-ships, and ships of war; disposition of ships; condition and valuation of ships; line of battle of French and English fleets; signals; contracts for hire of vessels; manifest of prize goods; distribution of soldiers and regimental baggage; regulations respecting and subsistence of prisoners of war; returns of prisoners of war; exchange of prisoners; stores of ships and of hospitals; contractors' stores and provisions at various West India islands; contracts for hire of ships; contracts for provisioning ships and hospitals; state of hospital (Barbadoes, 1780, Long Island, 1780); care of sick and wounded; returns of hospitals; returns of sick, wounded, and killed; appointment of chaplains; leave of absence of rector from Jamaica; petitions praying for promotion.

"A Detail of the proceedings of the French Squadron under the Command of the Chevalier Destouches and of the Action that happened on the 16 of March, 1781, between it and the English Squadron, commanded by Adm. Arbuthnot."

Statements of cases of several navy officers engaged in American War, and of Mr. Knox, Secretary of New York and Provost Marshal of Georgia, submitted to the consideration of Parliament.
(Printed.)

16. 1762-1763. Miscellaneous.

Account book of various dates.
Memorandum book of orders given to officers under Rodney's command, of letters sent and received, etc.

17. 1778. Miscellaneous.

List of vessels taken by the squadron stationed at the Leeward Islands under Rodney's command.
Memorial in justification of the conduct of Great Britain in the seizure of foreign vessels and warlike stores designed for the service of the rebels in America.

Sailing directions for Port Royal and Kingston harbors, 1772.
Letter from David Hodges treating of the advantages that would accrue to Spaniards in Mexico and Vera Cruz from shipping money to England or France via Pensacola. Pensacola, Sept. 5, 1772.
Letter from Gov. Peter Chester, enclosing minutes of the council of the province, Dec. 15, 1772, treating of the need of vessels to prevent the illicit trade of the French in the Mississippi and to defend the Pensacola station. Pensacola, Feb. 19, 1773.
Contract between Adm. Barrington on behalf of His Majesty and the merchants of Barbadoes. Mar. 16, 1779.

CHATHAM PAPERS.

The Chatham manuscripts, sometimes known from their donor as the Pringle manuscripts, comprise 372 bundles in two series, of which the first series, bundles 1-100, contains the correspondence and papers of the first Lord and Lady Chatham; the second series, the correspondence and papers of William Pitt the younger (bundles 101-363) and of John, second earl of Chatham (bundles 364-372). Letters written by these members of the Pitt family, whether in the form of originals, copies, or drafts, are in bundles by themselves; most of the other letters are arranged according to the alphabetical order of the names of writers. A manuscript catalogue of the Chatham papers, which will be brought by an attendant upon request, indicates the bundle in which the letters from a given correspondent may be found, and describes in very brief and general terms the character of the contents of those bundles which contain miscellaneous and official papers. The papers were deposited in the Public Record Office by Adm. Pringle in 1888.

The papers of the first Earl and Countess of Chatham are arranged as follows: Bundles 1-69 contain their correspondence, bundles 1-4 comprising the letters printed in the four volumes of Chatham Correspondence (1838-1840), 70-74 are miscellaneous papers, 75-100 are official papers.

In the second series, bundles 101-194 contain the correspondence of the younger Pitt, 195-363 are miscellaneous papers, including many letters, 364-369 comprise the correspondence of the second Earl of Chatham, and 370-372 his miscellaneous papers. Comparatively few documents in this second series fall within the scope of this work.

227. Petitions to Lord Carmarthen and others, including: Memorials from British soldiers in the Revolutionary War. Memorial of Peter Chester, late governor of the province of West Florida. Memorials of proprietors of patent offices in the late British colonies. Petition of Sir George Collier and of several captains, on the expedition to Penobscot, 1779.

231. Papers relating to government offices, including Treasury minutes and other papers relating to the salaries and accounts of colonial governors. 1746-1749; 1780-1783.

286. "Abstract of the exports from the Port of Pensacola to Great Britain between the Quarter Ending the 5th day of July, 1778 and the 5th of July 1779."

343. Papers relating to states of North America, 1780-1793, including: Account of imports and exports of goods by British merchants into the Mississippi. 1776-1779. "Hints drawn up Anno 1780, when reconciliation with N. America was expected."

Two papers on the contract for victualling forces in North America—cases concerning charges made against contractors by commissioners for auditing public accounts.
Précis of all remitting contracts for payment of troops in North America from 1754 to July 15, 1778, in Mr. Roger's note of Mar. 9, 1784.

Case of the late Brig.-Gen. Montfort Browne, lieutenant-governor of West Florida and governor-in-chief of the Bahama Islands.

344. Bundle labelled "Papers relating to states of N. America, 1794-1804, and undated, including:

Papers relating to imports into and exports from New York, including a printed proclamation of Gen. William Howe, New York, July 17, 1777, regulating imports and exports in relation to New York Island, Long Island, and Staten Island; and a certificate from the mayor of New York, D. Mathews, regarding the regulation of imports into New York, Mar. 21, 1778.

Papers relating to Georgia, Florida, and South Carolina, mostly petitions, etc., subsequent to 1783, asking relief for losses resulting from the war, and including the Case of the Merchants and others interested in the Lands in the Province of Georgia ceded by the Cherokee and Creek Indian Nations, etc., May 3, 1782 (printed).

Papers relating to American Loyalists, dated later than 1783 but referring to events prior to that date.

345. Papers relating to South America, Demerara, Brazil, and the Mosquito Shore, mostly later than 1783.

346. Papers relating to Canada, Newfoundland, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia, mostly later than 1783.

352. Resolutions, etc., of West India planters and merchants. 1783-1800.
MODERN BOARD OF TRADE PAPERS.

After the abolition of the old Board of Trade in 1782, business was done by the committee of the whole Council and the secretaries of state, until in 1784 a standing committee of the Council was appointed to take charge of all matters relating to trade and foreign plantations. This committee was dissolved in 1786, and another established which concerned itself chiefly with trade and commerce. The papers and books listed below represent the records and accumulations of this committee, except for certain volumes and bundles among the Miscellanea, which have been transferred from other series. Nearly all the records are of date later than 1783, but a few belong to the earlier period.

1-357. 1791-1839. In-Letters.

1-10. 1808-1839. Reference Books to Minutes.

11-12. Indexes.

This series of minutes is that referred to in the previous volume of this Guide, p. 102, note 3; p. 103, note 1.

1-187. Miscellanea.

All of these volumes relate to the affairs of the Company of Merchants trading to Africa. 13 is an entry book of letters written by the old Board of Trade and signed by Pownall, Cumberland, Grey Elliott, and sometimes by members of the board.
A volume of orders, regulations, and reports issued from the African House, London; also an original letter from Robert Stubbs, governor of Annamaboe and vice-president of Cape Coast Castle, to the old Board of Trade. At the end is a printed statement of the company dated London, Nov. 10, 1779.

Reports of committees appointed to look into the accounts of the governors in Africa. 1768-1775.
Report of the governor and council appointed as a committee to examine the public accounts of Cape Coast Castle and several outposts. 1770-1776.
In 17, at the beginning, are five leaves containing entries of Board of Trade business relating to trade with Leghorn, Venice, Lisbon, Sweden, Holland, Spain, Genoa, Flanders, and Africa, 1699-1788, with marginal references to the journal, entry books, and original documents (C. O. 388: 8-11) of the old Board of Trade. The volume itself contains an account of expenses incurred by the committees of the company in defending the forts and settlements on the Gold Coast, 1779-1782, and id. in attending the captured forts of Apam and Bescoe, 1782-1784. Other expense accounts are included. Oddly enough, in this volume will be found minutes of the council in assembly of Nevis, Jan. 13, 1784–Jan. 8, 1785, Jan. 12–May 28, 1785, early pages to Apr. 14, 1784, missing.
18 contains an account of money received and expended by the committees for the support and improvement of the forts and settlements (15 papers). 1770-1784. Also a memorial of the company, Apr. 12, 1786, and summary accounts, 1770-1780, with a paper entitled “Case”, Apr. 19, 1780, a statement of the establishment and obligations of the company as reorganized.

35-36. 1787-1807. Cape Breton.
41. 1772-1790. Dominica.
80. 1783-1784. First Committee Papers with Continuations, America, Commercial Intercourse, Correspondence.
81. Id. Minutes.
82. 1784-1786. Domestic Business.
83-84. America and West Indies, Commercial Intercourse.
85-86. 1783-1786. American Intercourse with Great Britain.
87. Id. With Newfoundland and Nova Scotia.
88. America and West Indies.
83-88 are mentioned in this volume under “Custom House”, p. 115.

SUPPLEMENTAL LIST OF VOLUMES AND DOCUMENTS IN THE PUBLIC RECORD OFFICE TRANSCRIBED FOR THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS.¹

Admiralty. 480-489. 3817-3820.

Treasury 64. 88-90, Blathwayt's Journal.

Admiralty Court, Instance and Prize, Libel Files. Various numbers from bundles 73, 80, 81, 82, 88, 91, 92, 93, 94, 98, 107, 108.

Audit Office, Declared Accounts. List of Customs Officials from 756, 792, to 829, 1086.

Attention may also be called to the fact that since the list in the preceding volume of the Guide was printed, the following series of Colonial Office Papers have been copied.

C. O. 5: 1280-1288, 1287-1297, 1299-1300, constituting the miscellany and entry books of the series formerly known as B. T. Proprieties.

C. O. 324: 3-19, constituting the entry books of the series formerly known as B. T. Plantations General.

The original documents belonging to these series were copied some years ago by the Historical Society of Pennsylvania and the transcripts are now in the library of that society.

¹ See Andrews and Davenport, Guide, etc., pp. 437-445, and vol. I. of the present work, p. 309. Work of transcription has also begun on the documents at Lambeth Palace and at Fulham Palace, and will be extended, if possible, to cover selected portions of the material in the archives of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel.
